Moyers, Pigott move ahead to July 13 ballot

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

Bruno Pigott and Kathy Moyers advanced to the July 13 special Iowa City City Council election by a large margin over Kenneth Wessels in Tuesday's District C primary.

With less than 9 percent of registered voters going to the polls, Pigott was the top vote-getter, tallying 556 of the 1,088 ballots cast (53.4 percent). Moyers received 436 votes (41.8 percent) and Wessels 46 (4.4 percent).

While Moyers said she was pleased to advance, the primary results weren't too surprising to her.

"It's exactly what I thought would happen," Moyers said. "I thought there would be about 100 votes (between herself and Pigott), and I just didn't know who would be up or down."

Moyers added that the margin foretells a close contest on July 13.

"Both of us will campaign very hard for the general election, and like today, it should be very close," Moyers said. "Next time, hopefully, we'll come out on top."

Pigott, who was attending an international conference in Austria representing the nonpartisan Stanley Foundation, was also very pleased to advance.

ACTIVISTS RESPOND TO NOMINATION

Views on abortion draw wary reaction

Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ruth Bader Ginsburg's views on abortion, sure to be a focal point of her Supreme Court confirmation hearings, have left "pro-life" activists convinced she's an enemy and some "pro-choice" advocates unsure she's an ally.

Ginsburg, picked by President Clinton for the high court Monday, has criticized the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision. The Supreme Court and the country would have been better off if abortion rights had been established more gradually, she has said.

But the views Ginsburg has articulated since becoming a federal appellate judge 13 years ago also suggest she is a firm believer in those rights and considers them vital to "the dignity and equality of women."

"She does not march to the pro-choice orthodoxy," said Northwestern University law Professor Jane Larson. "Her contention is Roe would not have been as vulnerable as it was if the court had taken a different route."

Ginsburg made that clear in a speech to the New York University law school last March.

"Roe vs. Wade ... halted a political process that was moving in a reform direction and thereby, I believe, prolonged divisiveness and deferred stable settlement of the issue," she said.

COMMUNITY SEEKS ANSWERS

Killings spawn shock, outrage

Melanie Chase

NORWALK, Iowa — Edna Burns is angry. She is having to explain violent death to her 16-year-old daughter, Danielle, and she doesn't have the answers.

On Monday, one of Danielle's closest friends was among six people found dead in a house in this quiet community south of Des Moines.

Officials earlier said all six had been shot, but Police Chief Mike

Richardson said Tuesday that some appeared to be strangled. Investigators suspect they were killed in a domestic dispute.

"My daughter was good friends with Nikki," Burns said Tuesday while sipping coffee at the Triple 'K' Cafe in downtown Norwalk. "She's in what you might say is a state of shock. She can't believe Nikki is dead."

Norwalk police were called shortly after 1 p.m. Monday to the home of Mary Jolene Forsyth, 39, and her three children — Brian, 18, Nikki, 17 and Jessica, 9. They were found inside the home. He was shot in the head and arm. He was listed

SEARCHES PROVING FRUITLESS

UI students facing jobless summer

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

They look through the want ads daily and they've applied for work all over town, but still some UI students say they just can't find a job.

UI senior Eric Berkland said he has applied for about 12 jobs, including retail, construction and sales, but can't find work. He has gotten several interviews, but he said when he tells the employers that he is graduating in August and can only work until September, they won't hire him.

"Maybe I should lie about how long I'm going to be here so I can get a job," he said.

Berkland said he has been looking for summer employment for about three weeks.

"It's disheartening that I'm so close to a degree and I can't even get a menial job," he said.

UI senior Matt Egan said he has been looking for work since early May and has applied at 15 to 20 places. He did register at a temporary work service, which gave him a job at a packaging company, but after one day's work he decided it wasn't worth the money.

"It makes me feel really useless, not having a job now," he said. "I've never had this problem before. This is the first summer I've spent here and it has been a bitch. I knew it would be difficult, but I didn't think it would be this hard."

Egan said his parents are not upset that he hasn't found a job because they know he has been trying. Summers are when Egan normally earns spending money for the school year, he said.

"I'm very, very short of cash. When people ask me out, I have to remind myself that I have no money," he said.

The difficulties some UI students have finding a job are understandable, according to Marlo Higgins, branch manager for Manpower Temporary Services, 625 S. Gilbert St. Due to employers reducing their work forces and the current condition of the economy, Higgins said there are fewer jobs available compared to last year. A recent Manpower survey for the months of July, August and September shows the decrease.

The survey reported that 7 percent of employers who responded to the survey plan to increase employment this summer, while 3 percent expect a decreased level of employees. Ninety percent expect no changes.

A year ago, 30 percent of Iowa City employers said they would add workers and 3 percent expected fewer employees.

Higgins said landscaping, construction and factory work are areas where the most jobs are available.

"If you don't fall into these categories, it's harder to find a job," she said.

Timing and aggressiveness are the key words for students seeking

Naval investigator appointed in Tailhook scandal

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Two naval officers have become the first to face assault or indecent assault charges from the 1991 Tailhook Association convention, where dozens of women were molested or attacked.

A naval investigator, Cmdr. Larry A. McCullough, was appointed Tuesday to conduct an investigation of charges against Cmdr. Gregory E. Tritt and Lt. Cole V. Cowden.

Tritt is accused of assault, conduct unbecoming an officer, providing a false official statement and making a false official statement under oath, said Cmdr. John Tull, a Navy spokesman.

Cowden is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and indecent assault, Tull said.

AMA extends nondiscrimination bylaw to include gays

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association voted Tuesday to ban discrimination against homosexual doctors who want to join its ranks.

By a voice vote, policy-making delegates for the nation's largest association of doctors added the words "sexual orientation" to their nondiscrimination bylaw. They had rejected similar measures several times previously in the past four years.

"We are not condoning any lifestyle at all," said the AMA's outgoing president, Dr. John Clowe. "The only thing the board wishes to do is change the bylaws."

Haiti: Aristide's in charge, but he can't come home yet

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide gained parliamentary recognition on Tuesday as Haiti's legitimate leader, but lawmakers refused to set a date for his return.

Haitians reacted warily to the prediction in Parliament vote, which demanded that Aristide obtain an end to punishing international embassies before he could put a new government in place.

Jim's Journal. It's a Comic Strip

Jon Yates

The Daily Iowan

He eats. He sleeps. He writes a cartoon.

Actually, for Jim's Journal creator Scott Dikkers, it's not that simple.

It is pretty close, though. "It's not that hard because I don't have to think up jokes," he admits. "I really don't envy other comic strip artists who have to think up gags every day — that'd be a nightmare. I just have to think up things for the characters to do."

Monday, Jim watched TV. On Tuesday he talked to Tony. Today he's talking to Ruth on call-waiting. Pretty heady stuff.

"I learned that trick from Garfield," the 28-year-old Dikkers says. "Make it simple because then you have to read it. That's part of it — just the fact that there are so few words."

But so many fans. When Dikkers started drawing Jim in 1987 for a college paper in Madison, Wis., he did it as a parody of other comic strips. Now, six years, two books and around 200 student newspapers later, Jim's Journal has a cult following on campuses nationwide. "I get a lot of letters from people thinking Jim's real and they want to know what he's like," Dikkers says. "That's kind of creepy."

Especially when you take into account Jim's inspiration.

"I keep a journal myself and I was just trying to think of a type of comic strip to do. I was thumbing my journal from a couple of years back and it struck me how odd it sounded," Dikkers says. "It was kind of entertaining the way I was writing down these things that, in retrospect, seem really unimportant — you know, what I did that day and stuff."

"I thought it was kind of amusing and that it'd make a good comic strip."

So, Jim's Journal is autobiographical? "Not really," Dikkers insists. "He's a part of me, of course, but he quickly developed this character, this kind of sponge character who never really reacts — just reports things happening — and that's not really me at all. I think if anybody was like that they'd be kind of a kook."

Or a college student. According to Dikkers, many students (who Time Magazine tagged "the Twentysomething Generation") can relate to Jim's slacker mentality.

"There's a whole generation of kids that just sit around and do nothing," he says. "I was like that and certainly Jim is like that. He has absolutely no ambition whatsoever. The only purpose in life to him is to exist."

And while most college students can relate to Jim, there are always some who can't — or don't want to. In Jim's six years of existence, he has garnered his own share of detractors, too.

"I fail to categorize them; it seems pretty random," Dikkers says. "The only thing I know for sure is they're people who take comic strips too seriously that don't like it."

At one college in Kansas, a group of students became so incensed with the strip that they printed up "Kill Jim" t-shirts and launched a campaign to get Jim's Journal out of their school newspaper.

Readers, it has become apparent, either love Jim or they hate him.

"I did a book signing once and this born-again Christian came up to me and said the comic strip was an inspiration to him, which was really strange," Dikkers says. "He was pretty upset when I told him I was an agnostic and that he should go home."

Dikkers still lives in Madison, spending about five hours a week on Jim's Journal and the rest of the time as co-owner of a satirical newspaper called The Onion.

And, from time to time, Dikkers says he has toyed with other comic strips. He's presently working on one about drunk college students, and another about urban living, but none are as popular as Jim's Journal. And even that strip's popularity is a little suspect. "It's only popular on a really tiny scale," Dikkers says. "Ninety-nine percent of the people still don't know what the hell it is. Certainly, I have no need for therapy yet."

Now, Jim, on the other hand ...

ORAL COMPETENCY

Learning English tough task for foreign TA

Years of testing helped one UI TA communicate better.

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

Playing cards and volleyball with 17- and 18-year-olds may not sound like constructive activities for a graduate student, but for someone who is trying to learn English they can be quite helpful.

During the first summer Palestinian native Saib Othman spent at the UI, he was befriended by a group of young students in the Upward Bound Program living in the dorms. Spending time with the young students was just one of the ways Othman prepared to work as a teaching assistant.

"There were Arabs around, but I knew I had to improve my English," Othman said. "It was a part of my philosophy to hang around Americans. That's why I lived in the dorms at first."

Today, Othman is a successful TA working towards his doctorate in pure math, but it has not been an easy journey for the Palestinian.

When he first arrived in the United States, he was not fluent in English or used to the culture. Othman not only had to adapt to American life, but he had the added pressure of having to do well on both the Graduate Record Exam and the Test of English as a Foreign Language exams, because of stiff competition in getting financial support for graduate school.

Othman had to take the TOEFL exam six times before his score was high enough to earn him acceptance into graduate school. Before coming to the UI, he spent time at Ohio State University and Southern Illinois University at Carbondale working on his English. When he arrived at the UI, he had to take more tests at the English as a Second Language Center.

All prospective TAs at the UI must first take a "SPEAK" test and, if they pass, are then required to take the "LECT" test. The SPEAK test is a test of spoken English, while the LECT test allows evaluators to see how well the student can communicate in a classroom.

Two ELC teachers and a few undergraduates are present to ask questions about the lecture given as part of the LECT test. The test is graded from "A" to "F" and is based on whether the foreign students get their message across, how well they understand questions, and how they respond.

Othman received a "C" on the LECT test when he arrived in June, but when he took it again in December he got an "A," meaning he could have full teaching responsibilities.

Part of the reason he was able to raise his grade so quickly was his determination to learn English.

At the UI, Othman took a course called "Presenting Skills for Foreign TAs," which used a video camera to help the students see their own performance as teachers and dealt with practical things like how to use the chalkboard and keep eye contact.

"That class was excellent for me," he said. "It showed me an image of what would happen in the classroom."

The Math Department Graduate Committee was impressed by Othman's determination and commitment in becoming fluent in English and rewarded him with a job in the math lab.

"Saib is very persistent, very tenacious and very bright," said Raul Curto, director of the graduate program for the UI Math Department. As part of the committee that admitted Othman into the program, Curto has followed his progress closely.

"It is a bit unusual for a person to score a "C" in July and an "A" in December. That speaks very well of the person," Curto said. "There is also the enthusiasm he shows in teaching. He's really one of our best instructors."

This past spring Othman was a TA in Basic Analysis, which requires not only being a good student, but also being a good teacher.

Professor Fred Goodman, who teaches Basic Analysis and has had Othman in several of his classes, said he is impressed with Othman as both a TA and a student.

"His accent is slight and pleasant," Goodman said. "He has a charming personality."

Although Goodman did not see how anyone could have trouble understanding Othman's English, he felt that if the course was directed at younger students, some might complain.

When faced with complaints about foreign TAs' English, Goodman's reaction is that some day, students might work for someone whose first language is not English.

"The world is a bigger place than Iowa City, or even Chicago," Goodman said.

Today, Othman is much more comfortable with English and he spends more time thinking about being a teacher.

"Even if I was in my country and I was speaking my language, I'd still have two-thirds of the pressure," Othman said.

Othman, whose first love is teaching, feels that there is a point where talent for teaching replaces English-speaking ability.

"You could polish it, you could train people, but definitely there are people who are not talented at being good teachers," he said.

PROPOSAL WOULD STREAMLINE PROGRAM

Opinions differ on new college loan plan

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

If President Clinton's proposal to alter the nation's student loan program passes in Congress, taxpayers will save $4.3 billion through fiscal year 1994, and $2 billion per year thereafter, according to the U.S. Department of Education.

"We believe we can better serve students and taxpayers by giving them a program that is simple, direct, less costly and less confusing," Deputy Secretary of Education Madeleine Kunin said to the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. "The Student Loan Reform Act of 1993 will start us down the road toward accomplishing those goals and will enable us to improve our service to our most important clients - America's students and taxpayers."

Kunin said the proposal will meet three goals:

- Make college more affordable by making it easier for students to pay off their loans, through flexible repayment terms and lower interest rates.

- Save taxpayers substantial sums of money.

- Streamline the student loan system.

Under the current program, Kunin said, billions of taxpayers' dollars go not to students, but to 7,800 lenders, 46 guarantee agencies and numerous servicers and secondary markets. She said these groups have hired some of the highest-paid lobbyists in Washington to help them convince Congress and the public that Clinton's proposal will not work.

"The intensity of recent lobbying efforts against student reform is a useful reminder that the purpose of the student loan program is to serve students, not to preserve a system for the benefit of providers," she said.

Several local lenders, however, question the government's ability to fund the proposed program.

"Now there is no problem for a student to get a student loan," Iowa State Bank Student Loan Manager Renetta Burlage said. "If the government starts this plan and runs out of money, then we're going to see a lot of students getting turned down."

Kunin said Clinton's proposal is planned to be implemented gradually over four years, and has built-in mechanisms to ensure that access to capital will not be interrupted.

Iowa College Student Aid Commission Director of Field Services Tim Fitzgibbon questioned those mechanisms.

"Saying that it simply won't happen is not reassuring," he said. "The government will have to increase the federal deficit to fund student loans. If funding problems do occur, bigger universities like Iowa and Iowa State will have cash flow problems, causing an increase in university expenses and in turn, an increase in tuition."

Burlage said the current student loan program has been in existence for approximately 15 years and that several loans out now have not yet begun to be replaced. She said that fact worries lenders because there is a substantial amount invested in the current system.

"The government is taking on a big haul and I'm not real convinced that it can stand up to it," she said.

Students can currently receive their bank loans in a short time span of a week to 10 days, Burlage said.

"Under this proposal, students will be waiting on the government," she said. "That puts a burden on the students because it is likely to take extra time to go through all the red tape."

Fitzgibbon said the student loan program in Iowa is excellent.

"Iowa has one of the lowest default rates in the country," he said. "Running out of money is not as big of a concern as the government being able to run such a large program. If students now have questions about their loans they can easily go to their bank or loan officer to get their problems answered."

"Dealing with the federal government will not allow for the same personal response. If you can't get your questions answered, you are likely to default and ruin your credit," he added.

Lenders have tried to start making changes on their own, Burlage said.

"What bothers us is that the government does not seem to want to test this," she said. "We'd like to see a test run for two to three years on a very small scale. Clinton wants to jump right in, but if direct lending does fail, it may be difficult to pay lenders back. The fact that they aren't testing it first makes us real nervous."

Fitzgibbon agreed that the program should be thoroughly tested before full implementation.

"Congress originally agreed to test a pilot program," he said.

Iowa man finds syringe in can of regular Pepsi

Associated Press

MONTICELLO, Iowa - A grocery store here pulled all Pepsi soft-drink products off its shelves Tuesday after a customer reported that he found a needle from a syringe in a can of regular Pepsi.

Police Chief Burt Walters said officials of the Food and Drug Administration's criminal investigation unit arrived from Kansas City, Mo., to look into the Delhi man's claim.

Dennis Ortgies, manager of the Family Foods Store, said Kevin Luna of Delhi, Iowa, purchased the 12-pack Sunday and called the store just before it closed Monday evening to report a needle in the can.

Luna, who did not return a telephone call, alerted television stations and told them to be at the police station when he brought the can in at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Walters said.

Walters said Luna told police he found the needle while pouring the Pepsi into a glass and that he was not injured.

Mark Heathman, a Pepsi distribution official in Cedar Rapids, said officials of the FBI and the FDA have been notified and he referred all calls to Pepsi-Cola's New York headquarters.

People have reported finding syringes in Pepsi cans in six other states - Ohio, Wyoming, Illinois, Missouri, Louisiana and Washington - bringing to 10 the number of cases of possible tampering.

At least one of those cases appeared to be a hoax - that of a woman in suburban Los Angeles who told police Monday that she was stuck in the gums by a syringe found inside a sealed Diet Coke can.

Nev. defuses 'bomb joke' charges

Associated Press

MUSCATINE - Authorities in the state of Nevada have dropped charges against a Muscatine banker who joked about having a bomb aboard a Southwest Airlines plane at a Reno airport May 31.

Donald Martin, 55, senior vice president of Central State Bank, said a flight attendant was helping him load two bags containing a radio and speaker when he made a joke about putting a bomb in one of the bags.

No explosives were found. But his ill-advised remark caused a three-hour flight delay as the plane was evacuated and authorities scoured the aircraft for explosives.

Police charged him with making a bomb threat. He was supposed to be arraigned Monday in Reno, but instead received the good news about charges being dropped.

"Of course, I'm relieved," Martin said. "This has been an embarrassing incident for me. I'm just glad it's all over with."

Felony charges were dropped because it was obvious to law enforcement officials that Martin's comments were not serious, Washoe County, Nev., Deputy District Attorney Joan Cartledge said. Martin also had written a public letter of apology to Southwest Airlines officials after he was charged.

"The flight attendant took it as a joke. But she had to tell the pilot, and he didn't want to take a chance. It's a good lesson for Martin," Cartledge said. "I don't think he'll joke about a bomb again. I'm sure he definitely learned his lesson."

A difficult lesson, admitted Martin, who said he did not know such wisecracks were against the law.

UI graduate remembered after battle with cancer

The Daily Iowan

Wayne Anthony Tallman, a 1992 UI graduate, died June 6 after a long battle with cancer.

Tallman, a Dubuque native, was born June 11, 1966 to Leo A. and Joan Tallman. In 1985, he graduated from Stephen Hempstead High School, where he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Merit and was a member of the International Thespian Society.

At the UI, Tallman was a member of the Rolling Hawks and the Residence Hall Honorary Association. His parents said graduating from the UI had been his most pressing goal. After that, they said, he planned to take a year off to fight the cancer and then write a book about his life before sending out résumés.

"As a person born with a rare skin condition, he never allowed his disability to keep him from attempting to reach his goals," his parents told the DI.

He is survived by his parents, of Dubuque; and a brother, Brian Joseph, also of Dubuque.

LEADERSHIP?

Clinton: a joke so far

Newsrooms are a good breeding place for jokes. As insensitive as it may sound, I do not know a single reporter or editor who doesn't eventually find something amusing about a story. I guess it's our way of relieving the stress or shock of learning and covering the facts.

When I started as the DI's Nation & World Editor back in 1991, the war in Yugoslavia was just beginning. As months went by and Yugoslavia gradually became a constant top story of the day, the joke was "Try to guess on what day we would NOT run a Yugoslavia story."

And here we are, almost two years later, and the war of the Balkans remains a member of that exclusive top stories' club. But the senseless slaughter has reached such enormous proportions that it doesn't merit a wisecrack any longer.

Since then, the human tragedy of Somalia has joined in to remind the Western world that there are places on this planet not ready yet for fiber-optics and information superhighways. Until this past weekend, it seemed that the Clinton administration had tackled both conflicts as one big joke. While clumsily trying to keep its promise of focusing its policies on domestic issues, the administration's inaction somewhat proves George Bush's contention that Bill Clinton had nil experience in international affairs.

This weekend's attack on the Somali warlords apparently served the purpose of proving that Washington still has the last word when it comes to leading the United Nations' efforts. But the attack had its high costs, as the already weak support the Somalis had shown for the presence of U.N. troops vanished when the cloud of smoke of the missiles cleared, revealing a high death toll of innocent people.

The U.S. leadership in the Balkans has been a fluke as well. If the Bush administration did little more than imposing an embargo, the Clinton White House has done nothing concrete since it took office. Yesterday Clinton insisted on his plan for arming the Muslims to counterbalance the Serbs' superiority, even though recent war developments have led the U.N. commander in Bosnia to dismiss those plans as impractical in the present situation. Clinton's let-them-kill-each-other approach will only worsen the "ethnic cleansing" by all sides.

In the local arena, there are many more reasons to make Clinton the butt of all jokes.

Social Security taxes for domestic help are to blame for some of Clinton's blunders. Yes, if they had only been paid by Zoe Baird, Kimba Wood and Stephen Breyer, the president's reputation and approval rating would be much higher. Lani Guinier suffered the same fate as the other nominees for federal jobs, but at least she had paid all her taxes.

The president's hair doesn't look much better either, even though it cost the airline industry and LAX a lot more than the $200 he paid for it. The political cost may end up being greater. Hillary's hair does look different, but the actual cost of the haircut has not been disclosed.

Clinton's battles against Congress have been hard, leaving as casualties many of the president's reforms. But if he doesn't emerge as the victor, his presidency will be a long, long running joke.

While media and sales experts would like us to believe that the worst is over, those of us in the know understand the worst has yet to happen.

What started with the special issue of Sports Illustrated more than four months ago is now officially with us until Labor Day. I'm talking about swimsuit season.

I purchased my last "new" swimsuit in spring of 1987. Or was it 1986? It's a little Esprit one-piece, black and hot pink in a hound's-tooth pattern, cut high in the thigh and low in the back. It never really got much use until the following summer in the Mediterranean (life was so different in the '80s, when we all had money).

Any woman who has ever purchased a high-cut swimsuit can understand the agony I went through that summer — there is nothing like a fried lower hip. The flesh was so "fresh" to the sun that you could hear it sizzle in sunlight. Yum.

Since that time I have purchased four other swimsuits, but I don't count them as new, or even as mine. There was a little shop I knew in a dinky little town in Henry County, Ill., that had "new" clothes straight out of 1972, and even older lingerie. One day on a lunch break I went in and purchased two bullet-style bras and four bikinis and later gave them away as gifts.

They were really quite adorable — pink with little bees buzzing around daisies, green with asters, brightly colored geometrics and a black, peach and magenta number that should be worn by a cocoa-buttered woman of 34 at a country club pool. ("Hey, lifeguard. Go get me another gin and tonic. I don't want to disturb the ash on my cigarette.")

I lost my Esprit suit somewhere amid my eight household moves in the last six years. It recently resurfaced on a trip to my parents' house. The question is, now that I know where it is, do I want to wear it?

I don't swim. I could swim if I wanted to, but I choose to avoid lakes, rivers, oceans and public pools because of what might be lingering under the surface. All of my friends swim and sing the praises of it, but I'd rather get my water from a source that hasn't been — well — shared.

I don't sun. I did my duty of adolescent moping and mopping up sweat in the sun long ago, complete with the Coppertone oil, SPF 2, a Judy Blume paperback and one of those tanning blankets that looks, and acts, like a big sheet of tin foil. Now I don't go out on even a scissors jealous, she can't lose her cellulite. It's just a part of her.

"The only way I could lose it would be if I stopped eating for about three months," she proclaimed.

"Don't do that," I wisely advised. (Loose flesh bags even more unattractively than a few fat cells.)

"You know," she said, "they have these suits out now that are supposed to hide things. Stripes to make you look thinner, skirts to disguise your thigh bulges, padded bras ... What about cellulite? I need something that will go down to my knees."

Aaah. The persecution has led to a solution.

After countless trips to her closet and her hall mirror, Audrey believes she has found the answer — Spandex. Her latest day on the beach was spent in a swim top and biking shorts. According to her reports, no one looked at her twice — at least not in a bad way.

It reminded me of my friends in grade school when we wore shorts under our dresses. It was protective armor when boys would run over and flip up our skirts and shout, "It's dress-up day!" (Get it?)

When we went swimming we'd wear T-shirts over our Speedos. Was it done out of body shame or just because everyone else did it? We didn't discuss these things in sixth grade.

Instead, I discuss them years later, in print.

"You know the funny part?" Audrey asked me about her legs. "Just the other day, casual day at work, I was wearing shorts and watching my thighs literally fall off the chair. I was so disgusted I got up and started pacing around the office. I was standing there when the guy across the hall from me came over and said, 'I don't want you to take offense to this, but you have got great legs.' What was that supposed to mean?"

It means 12 more weeks until Labor Day, honey.

PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY

Public is deceived about women in combat

The Clinton administration's announcement that women will be assigned to military combat was made on the same day that Ms. magazine was doing a publicity stunt called "Take your daughter to work."

That's the same kind of coincidence displayed by the Clinton spokesman who announced the possibility of imposing a gigantic new VAT April 15.

One of the evening TV newscasts showed a policewoman who took her daughter to work with her. In answer to the newsmen's question as to what she learned, the little girl replied, "I learned that women could boss men."

Bossing men (the feminists call it "empowerment") has been a goal of the movement ever since the National Organization for Women whined in a 1973 convention resolution that "military decisions are exclusively made by male supremacists."

A totally androgynous society has been a goal of the feminists ever since their top legal whiz, Professor Thomas I. Emerson, wrote in the Yale Law Journal in April 1971: "As between brutalizing our young men and brutalizing our young women, there is little to choose."

Most civilized Americans think there is a lot of difference between brutalizing men and women. We expect men to protect women from being brutalized by the bad guys of the world.

But the rest of American women should not be required to sacrifice this principle in order to facilitate the "career opportunities" (as Defense Secretary Les Aspin called it) of a handful of ambitious feminist officers.

Training for combat and for survival as a POW will require women to accept violence from American men as part of their training, and to accept violence from enemy men as an occupational risk.

The polls show that a majority of Americans seem to buy the argument, "If women are as qualified to serve, why not?"

But women are not as qualified to serve, and the armed forces have been concealing this fact from the American people by double standards for men and women and by gender norming (which means rigging test scores in favor of women).

For example, male Marines are required to do 40 pull-ups within two minutes, but female Marines only do what is euphemistically called a "flexed-arm hang." A woman may get the same grade for effort that a man gets for actual performance.

Instead of competing against men, the women just compete against other women for designated quota slots. According to The New York Times, at least 10 female aviators will be "leapfrogged" over 600 male pilots who have been waiting for years for advanced training.

The argument that putting women in combat is the remedy for the Tailhook scandal is the biggest non sequitur of all time. If the military women can't defend themselves against some drunks in a Las Vegas hotel, how can they protect themselves against sadistic Iraqis or Serbs?

Aspin said in his news conference that he is even instructing the Navy to "consider" putting women on submarines. It would be instructive to compare the width of the passageways on submarines with the width of the corridors in the Las Vegas hotel that the Tailhook women found they could not walk through safely.

President Clinton and Aspin are ignoring the findings and recommendation of the Presidential Commission on the Assignment of Women in the Armed Forces, which concluded after a year's study that the assignment of women to combat units on land, sea and in the air would have a negative effect on combat readiness, unit cohesion and military effectiveness.

The American people have the right to know why the commission recommended against women in combat.

It surely doesn't help morale to know that assignments are made on the basis of politics, affirmative-action quotas and preferential treatment. But what else can we expect from an administration that is dominated by people who don't understand or respect the military?

To make personnel policy decisions about women on the basis of "equal rights" and "career opportunity," rather than military need and readiness, will greatly strengthen the demand of the gay-rights activists that the armed forces be opened to open homosexuals. Those who embrace the "equal opportunity" argument in the case of women in combat have forfeited the high ground of military necessity that supports the gay ban.

Assigning women to military combat goes against human nature, our culture, and centuries of experience. It's another Clinton cave-in to the radical feminists.

LETTERS

Letter was misleading

To the Editor:

In responding to my long and unanswered list of complaints about the UI's use of animals in medical research, Dr. Kenneth Hubel answers only three of these points.

First, he derides my language in describing an experiment using guinea pigs (one in which they were "sliced in half after an artificial blood substance was pumped through their hearts and brains"). Using a "similar style," Dr. Hubel suggests I might describe the routine removal of a blood sample as "the painful thrusting of a tapered steel tube through the skin and into a blood vessel of an anxious, unanesthetized human being."

Not so. I would under no circumstances compare this procedure — where a patient knows what is coming, has given his or her consent, experiences little or no pain, and lives after the procedure — with animal research where the victims do not know what is coming, do not give their consent, experience pain and suffering with great frequency, and end up dead.

Second, Dr. Hubel suggests that my attack on Dr. Carol Aschenbrenner for justifying the College of Medicine's membership in the National Association for Biomedical Research (NABR) as a bona fide educational expense is misplaced. He implies that NABR is a source of "accurate information concerning animal research." This is pure balderdash, as any reader of NABR reports would know. They are not about research — they are about opposition to animal research and how to outflank that opposition. I'll be happy to share a copy with anyone who's interested — even Dr. Hubel, if he hasn't seen one.

It's worth noting that Hubel uses the term "well-financed animal rights organizations" in his letter. He knows full well that the opposition to vivisection in this community is led by private citizens of few resources. And he knows, or should know, that the budgets of national anti-vivisection organizations are dwarfed by the money spent by the AMA, NABR and others in funding their cause.

Finally, he finds it slanderous that I suggest that our medical research labs have been stolen by those who use their benefits for their own private gain. I'd really like to know what the financial arrangements worked out between private industry, the UI and researchers on this campus are, but like everything else concerning animal research — the labs, the IACUC meetings, the protocols — they're secret.

Destructive mind control techniques quite pervasive today

You ran a piece on March 8th called "Seventh-day Adventists react to Koresh beliefs." There are many misconceptions about who joins cults, how they're recruited, and why they stay. This article helped to perpetuate those misunderstandings.

You quoted Carl Hartman, communication director for the Iowa-Missouri Conference of Seventh-day Adventists. He said that Koresh had hypnotized and "psychologically channeled" his followers like Jim Jones did. This part is probably accurate. But he goes on to say that "(i)t's too bad when people don't think for themselves and make rational decisions, but yield their minds to someone else." This statement is misleading and dangerous. I know. Six weeks ago (at the time of this writing) I walked out of a destructive cult after 18 years of involvement.

The cult I left is large and wealthy. It has the money to market itself, and has created an altruistic public image. The mind-control techniques it uses are similar to those used by Koresh. But experts say that the "benign" group I left, which your average person doesn't think of as a cult, is one of the most permanently damaging.

Destructive mind control is a system of techniques carefully designed to displace a person's original identity with a loyal cult mindset. This happens without the person's knowledge or consent. Destructive mind control techniques are employed from the recruitment stage on.

A cult follower doesn't yield to the leaders. His mind is taken from him. He is a victim in the truest sense of the word. By remaining uneducated about the power of destructive mind control, we leave thousands of "followers" at the mercy of their perpetrators, with little hope of rescue.

As social beings we instinctively tend to conform, and we respond in predictable ways to authority. We could not maintain a social system without these tendencies. Cult leaders simply take advantage of this. They use sophisticated mind-control techniques developed from brainwashing systems used in China, World War II and the Korean War. Current destructive mind control is more effective than the older brainwashing techniques — and more subtle.

Mind-control systems are not haphazard. They are systematic and proven to work. It doesn't take long to hook a person into a cult. And once hooked, the control is constant and insidious. It's rare for a victim to have any idea what has happened to him. In fact most of the people who walk out of groups never learn that they were victims of mind control. They may never fully recover, not realizing the source of persistent problems.

We find the concept of mind control so disturbing that we convince ourselves that it could never happen to us. The group I left is full of doctors, lawyers, successful artists, published authors, teachers, renowned scientists, students and even multimillionaires. David Koresh's attorney was a member of the Branch Davidians and an Ivy League graduate. The followers of Jim Jones' People's Temple were strikingly intelligent. All it takes to be vulnerable to mind control is to have the ability to think abstractly. Since this is a higher brain function, only the intelligent become victims.

Cults target smart, able-bodied people. The most vulnerable are those at turning points in their lives, such as students confused about their college majors or people grieving over romantic breakups. Another target group is foreign college students homesick for their countries. Cults offer unconditional acceptance and a place to belong. The breakdown of the family in the United States causes many of us to feel deprived of these basic needs.

It's a myth that cults are full of mentally unstable people. The group that recruited me carefully screens prospective members with detailed applications asking for a complete psychiatric history. They will even ask for doctors' references. They ostracize members already in the cult who develop additional emotional problems. These people are of no use to them. Cults want individuals who can work hard and feed their leaders' insatiable needs for money and power.

To protect ourselves and others from cults requires that we understand them and their cruel methods of operation. Our fear of them, and denial of their power and savvy, only make us more vulnerable. They also leave those held by cults stranded, because we believe they choose to be there.

There are thousands, perhaps millions, of people in the United States whose minds are held hostage by clever cult leaders. They did not choose this any more than a murder victim jumps in front of a bullet. They need our compassion, and they need our help to seize back their minds from the criminals who stole them.

Biblical arguments against gays misinterpretations

To the Editor:

In Jacksonville, North Carolina, homophobic bigots wave Bibles and claim that being homosexual is a sin ("Forum on Military's Gay Ban Starts, and Stays, Shril," March 25 New York Times). They are only displaying their ignorance of the spuriousness of the religious basis for many sexual taboos.

Dr. Arthur Frederick Ide, in his book "Zoar and Her Sisters: the Bible, Homosexuality and Jesus Christ" (Minuteman Press, 1991), claims "in neither Leviticus 18:22 nor Deuteronomy 23:18 is there a reference to homosexuality. The term is kadesh: cult prostitute." Cult prostitutes were seen as unclean and were forbidden in purity codes.

Yale University history professor John Boswell writes, in his book "Christianity, Social Tolerance, and Homosexuality" (University of Chicago Press, 1980), that Leviticus' "purpose is to elaborate a system of ritual 'cleanliness' whereby the Jews will be distinguished from neighboring peoples." He points out that there is a distinction between intrinsic wrong and ritual impurity.

Professor Boswell puts Leviticus' prohibition of cult prostitution on a par with its other prohibitions against the consumption of pork, shellfish and rabbit, and its condemnations of hybridization, clothing of more than one type of fabric, and the cutting of the beard or hair.

Furthermore, other alleged biblical injunctions against homosexuality cannot withstand scrutiny. In Matthew 10:14-15 and Luke 10:10-12, Jesus publicly stated that Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed because of their inhospitality to strangers. Dr. Ide even charges that "(t)he Sodom story is a ruse to cover the incest of Lot and his daughters" in Genesis 19:32-38.

Professor Boswell writes that the people of Sodom wanted to know who the foreign strangers were, rather than desiring carnal knowledge of them. The Hebrew verb "yada" is very rarely used in a sexual sense.

Moreover, there are positive homosexual affairs reported in the Bible, such as that between King David and Saul's son Jonathan in 1 Samuel 18:1-4, 20:41-42, and 2 Samuel 1:25-26; and that between Naomi and Ruth in the Book of Ruth. King Solomon even wrote homoerotic poetry in the Song of Solomon 5:4-8, 5:10-16, and 8:1-3.

Dr. Ide even portrays Jesus as a gay male who lived nearly exclusively in the company of men and even had a beloved disciple who was allowed to lay his head on Jesus' chest while they ate and talked, as described in John 11:36, 13:25, 21:7 and 21:20.

Pickers peaceful

To the Editor:

Gayle Sand had an article published in The Daily Iowan titled "Surviving holy war, coping with harassment." She talked at length of the trials that local abortion providers have endured: "They rifle our dumpster, break windows, trespass, blockade our doors, glue our locks, graffiti the building and leave death threats on our answering machines. I am followed home, receive hate mail at least once a week, have been stalked at rallies, and am called the anti-Christ."

I am not going to say these things never happened. I don't know that they did or didn't happen, but if Gayle Sand is going to give the public an accurate portrayal of those who oppose abortion, then she is also going to have to admit that when she looks out of the clinic windows at those who are exercising their constitutional right to picket, she recognizes many familiar faces who have never done those things she accuses the anti-abortion crowd of doing. Of the approximately 10 times that I have exercised my constitutional right to picket, I have never witnessed any of the malicious behaviors she had listed except for possibly the one where she objected to some carrying "signs showing fetuses." Such would not be my preference for a sign, but such is the truth about abortion. In all the pickets I have attended, I have never heard any name-calling. Such behavior among the regular picketers is not encouraged or condoned. We encourage each other to be patient and long-suffering toward those who oppose us, yet to remain firm to the truth about abortion.

Don't drain general fund for athletics

To the Editor:

I am surprised there has not been more concern expressed over the proposed transfer of 1.4 million dollars from the UI's general fund to the athletic department. After all, this is not a one-time occurrence, but an amount that would be transferred annually.

While the goal of increasing women's participation in intercollegiate athletics is extremely important, the proposed mechanism of funding the increase would set an unfortunate precedent.

There are two issues here. First, the academic functions of the UI are in serious financial jeopardy, and the UI's subsidy of the athletic department is already substantial (free use of the stadium and arena, land on which to build indoor practice fields, etc.). The athletic department should pay its own way, including payment for an increase in the number of women's intercollegiate teams. There are lots of ways of doing it. One would be to decrease the number of football scholarships. Another would be to decrease the sizes of our entourages to bowl games, women's final four, etc.

Second, the return on this particular multimillion-dollar investment, in terms of actual opportunities for women in athletics, is paltry and hardly worth the long-term bleeding of the general fund.

The UI should mandate that the athletic department pay for the increased number of women's teams itself. In addition, funds should be provided (through rebudgeting) by the central administration to increase women's participation in intramural sports.

Guest opinion inaccurate

To the Editor:

If ever a large crock of dung could fit on an editorial page, Gayle Sand managed to pull it off on April 27 with her guest column about "Holy Wars." Her tales of violent exploits at the hands of "anti-abortion" people may or may not be true — i.e., they may have never happened, or they may have been acts done by herself and staff for the purposes of insurance collection and bad PR for pro-lifers, as stunts like this have been pulled by Ms. Goldman (pardon me, Ms. Sand) and other abortionists.

Regardless, she does well at keeping the issue of abortion — and whether or not it means the taking of a life and the destruction of a mother — away from the discussion (wonder why?). She does this by calling her slaughterhouse a "health clinic" that "provides nurture," and by saying that the opposition is directed toward "the role of women in society" rather than abortion.

This sentiment holds about as much water as saying that the Allied forces toppled Hitler's Nazi regime during World War II not to save holocaust victims, but because (the Allied forces) were "anti-German." Similarly, to claim that pro-lifers are merely "anti-woman" parallels calling abolitionists, or the Union army, "anti-white" because of their opposition to slavery. Pro-lifers, who simply act to defend pre-born children from death and their mothers lifelong physical and / or emotional trauma, are pro-woman, if anything.

If Sand is telling the truth, and people who are against abortion are indeed committing these acts she mentioned, that is unfortunate. People who commit violent acts have no place with me or any of the peaceful pro-life groups in which I am involved (such as Operation Rescue). Despite the recent libelous tarnishing OR has received from the DI and other publications — i.e., accusations of "screaming and shoving women" and hyperbole comparing us with terrorists — we are nothing more than a peaceful, nonviolent group of Christians committed to saving and preserving life, even if we suffer great expense in the process.

At every rescue in which I have participated, rescuers have counseled women (before and after their abortions), offered their homes to them, offered to adopt the children they were about to abort (many have actually adopted children this way), and offered (or gave) financial assistance. There's no terrorism involved in these services (which, mind you, abortionaries do not typically offer their patient-victims).

In fact, the violence evident at rescues comes from our opposition, which often includes the police. This is always unwarranted, as we have never instigated acts of violence. My wrist was sprained badly last January — causing long-term injury which has only recently subsided — and my arms bruised and lacerated by police during arrests, despite my nonviolent disposition. Even worse, a friend of mine had his arm broken by LAPD officers using nunchakus, and at this same rescue a woman was beaten so severely that she miscarried shortly thereafter.

Once again, if anyone calling herself pro-life is violent, I condemn this as hypocritical. However, I must admit, after hearing of Dr. Gunn and reading Sand's column, I could not help feeling like Malcolm X did after JFK's assassination. He called the act an example of "chickens coming home to roost." He meant that since whites have perpetrated so much violence (against blacks and others) for so long, they should expect the winds of violence to blow in their direction. Likewise, abortionists, who have slaughtered 30 million (plus) children over the past 20 years, should not be shocked when similar things happen to them. Perhaps Sand and her staff (and Dr. Robert Kretzschmar and Dr. Charles deProse and Mary Mannix of Planned Parenthood) should consider, repent and turn from their abortive ways, recalling the adage about what to do when you can't stand the heat. Dr. Gunn learned the hard way.

Poet Laureate title given to UI alumna

Lynn Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Poet and UI alumna Rita Dove is remembered by her colleagues in the Iowa Writers' Workshop as an excellent student, and very personable.

"I remember her as smart and lively," said instructor Marvin Bell, a Flannery O'Connor Professor of Letters. "She did the thing that separates those who succeed in writing from those who don't — she proved she had the need to write and the talent to get it done."

Talent, indeed — Dove was recently named Poet Laureate by the Library of Congress.

Dove will serve a one-year term as a consultant in poetry, and will coordinate projects with the library. "She is a fine selection," Bell said. "She represents accomplishment, as a writer in more than one genre."

Dove has published a novel, "Through the Ivory Gate," in addition to a short-story collection and four books of poetry. She won the 1987 Pulitzer Prize in Poetry, becoming the second African-American to receive the award.

Before coming to the UI to earn her master of fine arts degree, Dove graduated summa cum laude from Miami (Ohio) University. She now teaches creative writing at the University of Virginia and is associate editor of the magazine Callaloo.

Upon accepting the Poet Laureate post, Dove said she'd like to make poetry more visible and teach children about "quieter role models."

Bell, who first met Dove at the Breadloaf Writer's Conference, said Dove herself makes an excellent role model because she was an excellent student.

"She clearly puts a lot of effort into her writing," he said. "Her accomplishments speak for themselves."

Librarian of Congress James Billington called her "an accomplished and already widely recognized poet in mid-career whose work gives special promise to explore and enrich contemporary American poetry."

Bell agreed, and said writing is a difficult career and success is always well-earned.

Dove, who is on a trip overseas, could not be reached for comment.

Prosecutor: shootout was planned

Kathleen Kreller
Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — A federal prosecutor Tuesday said Randy Weaver and his family spent a decade planning the confrontation with government agents that left three people dead last summer.

"The Weavers had an intense hatred for the government and an intense resolve to resist the government," Assistant U.S. Attorney Kim Lindquist said in his closing argument. "This was the center of their lives."

But in the 41st day of the murder-conspiracy trial, Lindquist found himself defending the government's handling of the Aug. 21 shootout and subsequent 11-day siege.

He told the jury that U.S. marshals "were pushed, they were forced to a point where they finally had to react."

But defense attorney Gerry Spence accused the government of demonizing the Weavers and co-defendant Kevin Harris, who only wanted to be left alone to practice their religion, which mixed Old Testament values with white separatism.

If anyone should be on trial, it should be the government, he said.

"Randy Weaver is guilty of having poor judgment, but that doesn't make him a criminal," Spence said as he repeatedly pounded the podium with his fist. "This is a murder case, but the people who committed murder are not here in court."

After more than seven hours of closing statements on the trial's 41st day, U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge ordered the jury sequestered and directed the seven women and five men to begin deliberating this morning.

Defense attorney David Nevin emphasized the inconsistencies in the sworn statements of dozens of government witnesses.

He said the Weavers had a right to practice their religion, and he focused on statements that supported the defense claim that the marshals fired the first shot in the gunfight that left Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan and Weaver's teen-age son Samuel dead.

Clinton justifies force in Somali action

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton defended the use of American air power against a Somali warlord Tuesday despite civilian casualties and warned that the United States also "would take action" if U.N. peacekeepers were attacked in the former Yugoslavia.

"Obviously we're going to protect our own soldiers," the president declared at a noon news conference.

Clinton also said he hasn't backed away from wanting to arm Bosnian Muslims and use air strikes against Bosnian Serbs to force a settlement in the Balkan war, although Britain, France and Russia have balked at his strategy.

"I still think they may be compelled to do that or something very near like it if they want to get anything done over there," Clinton said. He asserted his proposal "was never taken off the table."

The president met with reporters in the White House briefing room less than 24 hours after angrily cutting off a news conference when asked about "zigzag" decision-making on a Supreme Court nominee.

Trying to shake off a string of missteps on everything from gays in the military to problems with appointments, Clinton said vigorously that his administration was tackling difficult problems in the economy and in foreign policy.

"This is the most decisive presidency you've had in a very long time on all the big issues that matter," Clinton asserted.

In a separate television appearance, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., challenged Clinton's remark. "I don't think decisiveness is a word we use when we talk about the White House," Dole said.

In opening remarks, Clinton said he was confident that his new Supreme Court nominee, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, will win Senate confirmation by the time the court begins its fall term.

He said Ginsburg is "clearly pro-choice" on abortion, even though she has questioned the way the Supreme Court went about legalizing it in 1973. As for her reservations, Clinton said, "I'm not sure I agree with her."

In Somalia, U.S. planes and helicopters have staged repeated attacks against warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid in retaliation for June 5 ambushes that killed 23 Pakistanis serving with U.N. peacekeeping forces.

Clinton said the U.S. strikes were "appropriate in response to what happened, which is that Pakistani peacekeepers were ambushed and murdered." He said the U.N.-sponsored American action was intended "to minimize as much as we possibly could any damage or any injury or any death to civilians."

He said he was "very sorry" about the civilian casualties "but we cannot have a situation where one of these warlords, while everybody else is cooperating, decides that he can go out and slaughter 20 peacekeepers."

The attack against peacekeepers in Somalia raised questions about the safety of 300 Americans being sent to Macedonia as part of a U.N. force to prevent the spread of war from Bosnia.

"On Bosnia I made a decision," the president said. "The United Nations controls what happens in Bosnia. I cannot unilaterally lift the arms embargo. I didn't change my mind."

Bosnia's military chiefs sign truce

Maud S. Beelman
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The military chiefs of Bosnia's three warring factions met face-to-face for the first time Tuesday and signed a new cease-fire agreement covering the entire republic.

But skepticism remained high because previous truces have quickly collapsed and fighting was reported across Bosnia. Still, with the top commanders signing, the pact appeared to be the most serious of four attempts to implement countrywide cease-fires in the 15-month war.

The truce was not scheduled to go into effect until noon Friday, to give commanders a chance to disengage their forces and allow political leaders gathering in Geneva 48 hours to work on a broader settlement.

Even as the generals ended their meeting at Sarajevo's airport, mortar and small-arms fire resumed in the capital. Earlier, the United Nations suspended its aid airlift because of reported anti-aircraft fire on the approach to the airport. No planes were hit.

Ham radio reports from the Muslim enclave of Gorazde in eastern Bosnia said the town was being heavily shelled by besieging Serbs for a 19th day. U.N. officials said Serbs and Muslims also clashed elsewhere in the east and in the northwest.

U.N. officials also reported fighting between Croat troops and Muslim-led government forces, one-time allies against the Serbs.

The truce agreement came one day before talks in Geneva among political leaders from Bosnia's factions and neighboring Serbia and Croatia.

The document was signed by Gen. Ratko Mladic for Bosnian Serb forces, Gen. Milivoj Petkovic for the Croats and Rasim Delic, newly appointed commander of the Muslim-led government army.

Mladic also gave written permission for U.N. observers to enter Gorazde today. The town has been under intense Serb attack even though it is one of six "safe zones" for Muslims declared by the U.N. Security Council.

The truce agreement was witnessed by Swedish Gen. Lars-Eric Wahlgren, commander of U.N. peacekeepers in the former Yugoslav federation, and Cedric Thornberry, the U.N. mission's senior civilian official.

Asked why he believed this cease-fire might hold, Wahlgren said: "Don't you think it is time? People realize it can't go on like this."

Wahlgren said the military chiefs set the truce for Friday because they wanted enough time for word to get down to local commanders.

"As far as we are concerned, this agreement will certainly hold," said Mladic, the Serb commander. "I hope that our enemies will come to their senses and realize that we must negotiate, not make war."

U.S. TIES BEING REVITALIZED

Cuba extends good will despite economic woes

John Rice
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — Cuba bade farewell Tuesday to the last brigade of Russian combat troops and said its own military had been cut because of the country's economic woes.

The Communist country also offered a goodwill gesture toward the United States, repeating its willingness to negotiate payment for U.S. properties confiscated in the 1960s. Cuba blames a U.S. embargo for its economic problems.

The developments follow other recent indications that Fidel Castro's government wants better ties with the United States. Both were given relatively lengthy coverage by the official Prensa Latina news agency in its service for foreign readers.

President Clinton's administration has shown no interest in normalizing relations. As a candidate, Clinton said he supported tightening the embargo.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said there had been no direct communication between U.S. and Cuban officials on reparations.

The farewell ceremony for the Russian troops ended a 30-year combat presence on the island, a crucial Cold War base for the Soviet Union. The departing 3,000-man motorized infantry brigade paraded before a monument to Soviet soldiers on the outskirts of Havana.

A few Russian military advisers and staffers remain at an electronic listening post in Lourdes.

The Soviet Union once stationed 20,000 troops on Cuba after the 1962 missile crisis, when President Kennedy forced Nikita Khrushchev to remove nuclear missiles from the island.

But Cuba became less important to the Kremlin as Communism dissolved around the world. At the same time, the Soviet Union's own economic problems came to the fore, leading Moscow to halt critical subsidized oil exports to Cuba.

Russia, which assumed control of the Red Army after the Soviet Union collapsed, announced last year that it would pull out of Cuba.

According to the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies, Cuba had 175,000 regulars in the armed forces and 15,000 ready reserves.

POLITICIAN HAD HISTORIC CAREER

Texas' ex-governor Connally dies at 76

Michael Czaczyk
Associated Press
HOUSTON — John Connally, a three-time Texas governor and former Cabinet member who was wounded by the gunfire that killed President Kennedy, died Tuesday of pulmonary fibrosis. He was 76.

Connally and his close friend and political partner, the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, were dominant forces in Texas politics for decades until the early 1970s.

Connally was governor from 1963 to 1968. In 1961 he served for a few months as Kennedy's secretary of the Navy but left to run for governor.

Connally was riding in the car with Kennedy when the president was assassinated in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. A bullet passed through his body, leaving him with scars on his back, chest, wrist and thigh.

Later, he would recall drifting in and out of consciousness for four days. He watched on television — "really the first sustained consciousness I had" — as Kennedy's body was carried to Arlington National Cemetery.

Reflecting 20 years after the assassination, Connally said, "It made you realize in a fleeting second you could be gone, so you really don't have any time to waste, to fritter away on petty things or frivolities."

After Johnson's death in 1973, Connally switched from the Democratic to the Republican Party, and his popularity waned.

Connally's 1974 indictment by a Watergate grand jury further eroded his political power, though he was acquitted of charges that he accepted a $10,000 bribe from milk producers to persuade then-President Nixon to raise price supports.

Connally ran for president in 1980, but dropped out in March after Ronald Reagan trounced him in the South Carolina Republican primary. After spending $12.5 million, he garnered only one pledged delegate.

The 6-foot-2 Texan hailed Reagan as "the champ," and was the first ex-presidential candidate to campaign for him.

After his 1980 loss, Connally worked in the Houston and Washington offices of the law firm of Vinson & Elkins. He reportedly rejected President Reagan's offer to become secretary of energy and was offered at not being offered secretary of state or defense.

Connally filed for bankruptcy in 1987, listing assets of $13 million and debts of $93.3 million, mostly from oil and real estate deals that collapsed with the Texas economy in the 1980s. The following year, he and his wife, Nellie, auctioned most of their belongings to pay their debts.

After his bankruptcy, Connally seemed to rebound in the social and political scene.

In 1990, he and Houston oilman

John Connally

Oscar Wyatt negotiated the release of 21 hostages held during the Persian Gulf crisis by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

In May, Connally announced he was helping steer a $75 million venture to build a parimutuel horse race track outside Houston.

John Bowden Connally Jr. was born in Floresville, Texas, on Feb. 27, 1917, the fourth of John Bowden and Lela Wright Connally's eight children. He attended public schools there and in San Antonio.

WHITE MALES OVER-REPRESENTED

Study: TV roles lack diversity

Diane Duston
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hit shows like "Murphy Brown," "The Bill Cosby Show" and "Golden Girls" might lead one to think women, minorities and senior citizens are doing pretty well on TV. Not so, says a survey released Tuesday by two actors' unions.

Not only do white male roles predominate, the parts written for everyone else are more often obsolete stereotypes than reflections of real life, said the study's author.

Mature women are usually witches or crazy. The mentally ill are evil. Blacks, Hispanics, the poor or foreign-born are victims.

In children's programming, married people and parents rarely show up at all, said George Gerbner of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School for Communication.

He analyzed 19,642 speaking parts in 1,371 TV shows on ABC,

CBS, NBC, Fox and 11 major cable networks over 10 years. Included were prime-time, daytime, Saturday morning children's shows, game shows and news.

"We all have the impression things are improving. But they are not," said Gerbner.

His work was commissioned by the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and the Screen Actors Guild, which said viewers may be surprised by Gerbner's findings, but actors looking for work aren't.

"We know the parts we are being auditioned for," said Toey Caldwell, a black actor and singer.

"I was an actress who had a good career," said Kathryn Swink. "Then I turned 35."

She and many of her contemporaries are not finding television roles because "we are not babes and we are not grandmothers."

But the grandmothers don't have it so easy either, according to actress Geena Goodwin. "The only time they find us interesting is if you've lost all your marbles someplace," she said of TV scriptwriters.

The actors' unions gathered in Washington for a four-day conference to plan ways to pressure the entertainment industry to diversify TV characterizations.

"It is an uphill battle," said actors' guild president Barry Gordon, who hopes other organizations will join in representing women and minorities. "There is going to have to be some education of consumers."

The issue is not just out-of-work actors looking for jobs, but also whether television shows reflect the world in which they are set, the actors said.

Rarely, during "Murphy Brown," for example, does a black person appear, even though the show is supposed to take place in Washington, D.C., which is almost 70 percent black, they said.

An unidentified driver struck the Mulford Plumbing and Heating building at 940 S. Gilbert St. Tuesday night after crossing the street's center line. The pickup truck went through a parking lot, and into the building's wall. Police said the driver fled the scene of the accident on foot.

Ginsburg said the court could have adopted a theory she devised as a pioneer attorney for women's rights — that the Constitution's 14th Amendment guarantee of "equal protection" requires the government to steer clear of women's medical choices if it does so for men.
Her NYU speech said the 1973 abortion ruling "might have been less of a storm center had it both homed in more precisely on the women's equality dimension of the issue and, correspondingly, attempted nothing more bold at the time" than striking down a Texas law that banned virtually all abortions.

The Roe vs. Wade decision indicated abortion is a constitutional right, based on women's right to privacy.

Ginsburg's NYU speech noted that more recent rulings said the government has no obligation to pay for abortions sought by women on welfare, excluding "from the high court's protection women lacking the means or the sophistication to surmount burdensome legislation."

ELECTION

"I'm very happy about the results, and right off the bat I'd like to thank those who voted in the primary," Pigott said. "I'd also like to congratulate Kathy, who did a great job campaigning and discussing issues with me and the voters."

Like Moyers, Pigott is looking forward to the next election and hopes he can get more voters involved.

"A lot of people weren't tuned in to this primary, since this was a special election in the middle of the summer," Pigott said. "I think that the next election will be better, and I can't wait to get back, go door-to-door and bring the campaign issues to more citizens. The more people who get involved and vote, the better."

Wessels had no comment when reached by phone Tuesday night.

According to Johnson County Auditor and Commissioner of Elections Tom Slockett, Tuesday's turnout, with only 8.9 percent of District C's 12,237 voters participating, is the second-lowest turnout for any election since 1981. He attributed the low numbers to the lack of students in town and the perception that Moyers and Pigott would advance.

summer employment to remember, she added.

"You must be aggressive, because jobs aren't going to knock on your door," she said. "You have to go to it and keep in touch with employers."

Berkland said he remains hopeful that his persistence will eventually pay off. In the meantime, he continues to look in the want ads, circling anything that looks good. Berkland sets aside Tuesdays for his job hunt.

"Right now I'm willing to take about anything," he said.

DEATHS

said investigators had not been able to talk with Forsyth. No charges had been filed, he said.

"We hope to be able to interview the suspect. However, at the same time, he's going to have to be coherent and be able to speak to us relatively well before we can question him," Richardson said.

Autopsies were being performed on the six victims Tuesday. Medical Examiner Francis Garrity was expected to complete the autopsies today, Richardson said.

"Preliminary information from the medical examiner reveals that not all bodies are the victims of gunshot wounds," Richardson said. "The possibility exists that strangulation may be the cause of death in some victims."

Richardson would not say which victims had been shot and which may have been strangled. He said officials were still trying to determine when the killings occurred. He also refused to describe the killings as attempted murder-suicide.

"Until we basically determine what exactly occurred in that home, it is difficult for us to make a determination to classify the case."

The Forsyths were all found in one bedroom, with Rick Forsyth lying on the floor, Richardson said. The bodies of the two Napodano children, who were from the Des Moines area, were located in another bedroom. Richardson said they had been spending the night with the Forsyths.

The chief wouldn't say if it appeared there had been a struggle in the home but he called it a "normal home."

"It was relatively clean," Richardson said. "No problems, no anything to indicate different from yours or mine."

Police are refusing to speculate on the killings, but Burns, who lives in nearby Spring Hill, and other residents believe they know what happened.

Burns said Nikki was scared to death of her father because he had made death threats to her mother over their pending divorce.

"He told her either she'd stop the divorce or he would kill the family and himself," Burns said. "He should have been committed for psychiatric treatment."

Karla Handy, the owner of the Triple 'K' Cafe, said she didn't know any of the family, but she thinks the killings point to a serious flaw in the legal system.

"Why didn't somebody do something before it got that far? I mean, he's been arrested how many times. But what can you do? Throw him in jail and let him out again," Handy said. "There's nothing to hold him or protect them. Those court orders are only as good as whoever enforces them. And how many police officers want to get involved in domestic disputes anyway? They end up getting in trouble with everybody mad at them."

Handy, who lives in rural Norwalk, said she's just as shocked as anyone else.

MONTECAL—Tommy Greene lost first game of the season and Montreal snapped Philadelphia's six-game winning streak.
Larry Walker, Moises Alou and Sean Berry each drove in two runs as the Expos knocked out Greene (8-1) after a 2-3 innings. Greene allowed five runs on seven hits for his first loss in six lifetime decisions against Montreal.
Brian Barnes (2-1) gave up nine hits over five innings.
Darren Daulton drove in a run in the first for the Phillies, who added another in the second on a throwing error by shortstop Wil Cordero.

NBA FINALS

After slow start, Majerle on track

Breaks out of slump to hit 6 of 8 3-pointers in Suns' 129-121 win in Game 3 Sunday

Howard Ulman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — From the basketball hinterlands of Central Michigan University to his own Nike commercial, Dan Majerle has come a long way — maybe even as long as some of his 3-point shots.

He has a restaurant in downtown Phoenix. His coach likens him to John Havlicek. He has played in an Olympics. And now he's going for the NBA championship.

Not bad for someone who didn't play in a big-time college program and was plagued by injuries for much of his pro career.

"I just roll with the punches," he says. "I just enjoy it and keep on doing what I've been doing all the time. I really haven't changed a whole lot."

He took in stride his shooting problems early in the finals and broke out by sinking 6 of 8 from 3-point range in the Suns' 129-121 triple overtime victory Sunday night over Chicago. Phoenix can even the series 2-2 Wednesday night.

Majerle tied for the NBA lead with 167 successful 3-pointers but made just 1 of 4 shots from that distance in the opener. He missed all six of his field goal attempts in the first half of Game 2. The Bulls won both games.

But he produced in the clutch in Game 3. His 18-footer with 3.2 seconds left forced a third overtime. Then he launched a 27-footer with 3:02 remaining in that period to give Phoenix the lead for good, 119-118.

"This is my fifth year and ever since I've been in the league I've been in the playoffs every year and have been a part of some big games, especially this year," Majerle said. "So when I got (the ball) I had no hesitation whatsoever."

He always could shoot. But Cotton Fitzsimmons, who coached him in his other four pro seasons, was reluctant to let him fire 3-pointers. So he became known as a hard-nosed defender who liked to drive to the basket on offense.

"He's always been an outstanding 3-point shooter," Phoenix coach Paul Westphal said. "He shoots a lot more of them now, but Dan's game has grown in every way. That happens to players who work hard."

His ability to hit the 3-pointer stretches the defense and provides more room inside, particularly for Charles Barkley, if an opponent has to stick with Majerle.

"That makes a big difference when the coach has that much confidence in you when you can go out and miss three or four and he continues to tell you if you have the shot, take it," said Majerle, whose 16.9-point average was second on the team.

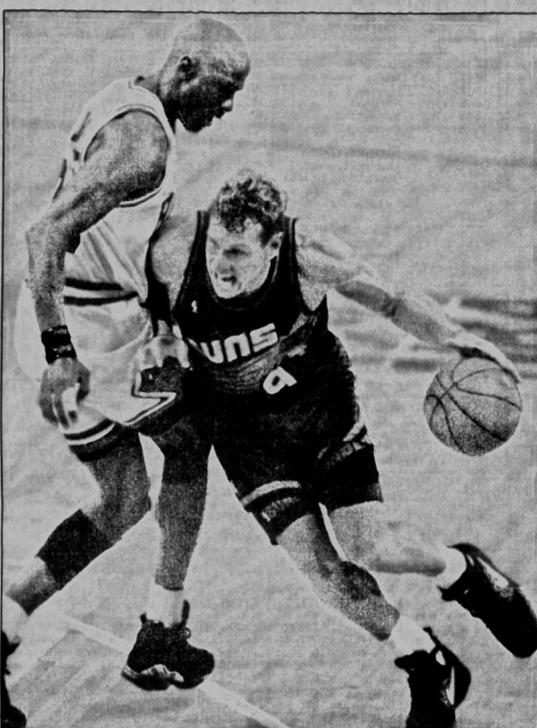

"I've always had pretty good range. I lift (weights) all the time so I guess I'm pretty strong and that helps a little bit."

Majerle doesn't regret going to Central Michigan. He was injured his first two years there and feels a bigger school might have replaced him with recruits who came in later.

He is the second leading scorer in school history. Yet after being taken by Phoenix with the 14th choice in the 1988 draft, he came into the NBA with a reputation for defense, just like Havlicek.

"I see a great parallel between them," said Westphal, who played with Havlicek on Boston's 1974 championship team. Havlicek "started out as a defensive specialist who would guard anybody and that's how Dan started out and (Havlicek) grew into an all-star, an offensive player as well as a defensive player."

"He's probably the closest guy to compare Dan to in NBA history. I'm not saying (Majerle) is the same caliber yet, but he's probably the same caliber as John (was) in his fifth year."

Like Havlicek, Majerle was an effective sixth man before becoming a starter. And Majerle made his first all-star game last season.

But Havlicek won eight NBA titles. Majerle is looking for his first.

In the first two games of the finals, Majerle's defense was tested against Michael Jordan, who had 73 points. In Game 3, Jordan was guarded by Kevin Johnson and scored 44 points.

That switch allowed Majerle to conserve his energy for offense. He made 10 of 17 shots and had no turnovers in 59 minutes of the 63-minute game. His play was crucial in getting the Suns back in contention.

"This is a long way from where I was," Majerle said, "but I think it all worked out pretty well."

and two games remaining at Chicago Stadium.

"I think they feel they were in the Grand Canyon and now they're halfway out of it," Jordan said. "I think they're still in it."

Although the Bulls and Suns have yet to win a home game in five meetings between the teams this season, Jordan said Chicago's challenge is "to avoid going back to Phoenix. Winning Game 3 gives the Bulls a chance to get back on their home court, but we have to try to eliminate them in the next two games."

Jordan missed 24 of 43 shots in Game 3 with Kevin Johnson guarding him much of the way. He expects the Bulls to stick with that strategy.

"I think they feel they were successful with that," he said.

Johnson said he's afraid Jordan got the incorrect impression that Johnson asked coach Paul Westphal to let him guard the seven-time scoring champion.

"I hope I'm not guarding him tomorrow," Johnson said Tuesday. "I don't want to hear that Michael Jordan has a bone to pick with me. I remember what he did in the fourth game (when Jordan scored 54 points) against New York. Maybe Paul will try a different look and put Richard Dumas or Danny Ainge on him."

Said Westphal: "We might change the matchups a little bit. More was made about that than I make about that. The game is decided by the players and every game was everybody's game in the last four minutes. I don't think matchups made us win in triple overtime."

Westphal said one reason the road team has been so successful in the NBA Finals is that the travel is equal for both teams.

"One team isn't coming in tired to play a team at home," Westphal said. "Both of these teams are comfortable on the road. I won't say the home-court advantage is irrelevant, but it's not as important as it is in the regular season."

STRAWBERRIES AND CREAM

Wimbledon draws tough on favorites

Joseph White
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Andre Agassi and Martina Navratilova didn't get any favors this time at Wimbledon.

A day after being seeded higher than their world rankings, the men's defending champion and the nine-time women's winner Tuesday landed dangerous early opponents for next week's Grand Slam event.

Boris Becker was also victim of a random draw that knows no favorites, while Stefan Edberg and Steffi Graf received easier paths to the second week.

Agassi, who was bumped five places above his ranking to be seeded No. 8, drew a first-round match against Bernd Karbacher of Germany.

Karbacher, ranked 36th in the world, upset Michael Chang in the second round of the French Open this month and beat Chang again Monday at a Wimbledon tuneup in Halle, Germany.

If Agassi gets past Karbacher, No. 9 Richard Krajicek, a strong serve-and-volleyer, possibly looms in the fourth round.

In any event, Agassi's chances of defending his title have been seriously weakened by injury. He has been plagued by tendinitis in his right wrist for much of the year and been sidelined two months.

Agassi lost his opening-round match at Halle on Tuesday in his first appearance on the ATP Tour since April 9. The American complained of elbow pain and admitted having mixed feelings about his availability for Wimbledon.

"I'd have probably gone to Wimbledon in a cast," Agassi said after the 5-7, 6-2, 6-1 loss to Carl-Uwe

Martina Navratilova

Steeb. "It is possibly a once-in-a-lifetime chance to go and defend the title. My heart tells me to play Wimbledon, my head tells me one year of Wimbledon is not worth making the injury worse and maybe affecting my later career."

Navratilova asked for, and received, her No. 2 position in the women's bracket, saying she deserved it, having won the event nine times. The seeding put her on the opposite side of the draw from top-ranked Steffi Graf, but it didn't provide for trouble-free opposition in the early rounds.

She should have little trouble with Australia's Michelle Jaggard-Lai in her first match, but then comes a possible second-round meeting with Peru's Laura Gilde-meister, a veteran who has beaten Monica Seles and made the Wimbledon quarterfinals two years ago.

Navratilova then could face Patricia Hy, a former top 30 player who defeated Jennifer Capriati and Helena Sukova at last year's U.S. Open.

Another former men's champ with difficult opposition is Becker. The three-time winner and No. 4 seed faces fellow German Marc Goellner, a 6-foot-5 big server with the nickname "Baby Boom Boom." Goellner, ranked No. 34, beat Edberg and Ivan Lendl consecutively this year on his way to winning a tournament in Nice as a qualifier. He upset Petr Korda while reaching the fourth round of the French Open.

"This is the toughest draw you can get," said Goellner, who lost to Becker in the grass-court event at Queen's Club last week. "I'm playing my second grass tournament, while Boris already has three Wimbledon titles. But I'm still happy with the draw, I am looking forward to the match and I don't think that I am without any chances."

A victory over Goellner would set Becker against Anders Jarryd of Sweden or Alexander Volkov of Russia. Jarryd was once ranked in the top 10; Volkov has a 12-6 record at Wimbledon.

Top seed Pete Sampras opens against Neil Borwick, an Aussie ranked No. 119. The American star then faces Andrei Chesnokov of Russia or Jamie Morgan of Australia.

Sampras and Agassi are seeded to meet in the quarterfinals. Becker's projected quarterfinal opponent is No. 6 Michael Stich, who beat Becker in the 1991 Wimbledon final and defeated him last week en route to the Queen's Club title.

Edberg plays a qualifier in the opening round and looks set for comfortable sailing until the quarterfinals, when the second-seeded Swede is projected to face No. 7 Lendl or No. 10 Andrei Medvedev, who beat Edberg in Paris.

Big Ten, Delaney sign four-year agreement

CHICAGO (AP) — Big 10 Commissioner Jim Delaney has agreed to a four-year contract extension, taking his name out of the running for NCAA executive director, a conference spokesman said Tuesday.

Delaney, who joined the Big 10 in 1989, had been considered a leading candidate to replace NCAA Executive Director Dick Schultz, who has resigned. Delaney is chairman of the NCAA's finance committee and was thought to have strong backing for the top post.

A Big 10 spokesman who asked not to be identified said Delaney has decided to remain with the league. The spokesman declined to elaborate.

Schultz announced his resignation from the NCAA in May after a student athlete loan scandal developed at the University of Virginia, where he was athletic director.

NHL

Wings hire Bowman

DETROIT (AP) — The winningest coach in the NHL has moved again, this time to the Detroit Red Wings.

The Red Wings hired Scotty Bowman, a Stanley Cup winner with Montreal and Pittsburgh, as its new coach.

"Detroit has the nucleus of a good team on the ice," Bowman said. "It's the coach's job to make sure that they stay focused."

Bryan Murray has been both coach and general manager of the Red Wings since coming to Detroit in 1990. He will remain as general manager.

BASEBALL

Cubs promote three Triple-A arms

DES MOINES (AP) — The Chicago Cubs have called up three minor league pitchers from their division-leading AAA farm club.

Reliever Jim Bullinger and starters Shawn Boskie and Turk Wendell were notified Monday that they will join the major league club in time for this week's series against St. Louis.

Wendell is scheduled to start against the Cardinals on Thursday and Boskie is set to start on Friday.

The three have 15 victories for the minor league team this season. The Iowa Cubs have the best record in the American Association (38-23) and lead second-place Omaha by six games in the Western Division.

Tobacco ban starts scheduled

ZEBULON, N.C. (AP) — The first day of the ban on tobacco products in the minor leagues went down swinging at a ballpark built several years ago on a razed tobacco field.

"If I stop chewing, OK now I'm going to eat a ton of sunflower seeds and gain 50 pounds and die of a heart attack. Thank you very much," said Carolina Mudcats manager John Wockenfuss, 44, a former big leaguer for more than a decade and a chewer for half his life.

Two weeks ago major league baseball said all uniformed personnel in the minor leagues would be banned from chewing or smoking tobacco during games for health reasons. The order is extended to players, managers, coaches and umpires.

Each violation will cause an ejection and a $300 fine at Class AAA, Class AA and the Arizona Fall League, and $100 in Class A and lower. In most cases, such a fine would be half of a player's weekly salary.

AUTO RACING

James Hunt dead at 46

LONDON (AP) — James Hunt, Britain's last Formula One world champion before Nigel Mansell captured the title last year, died today of a heart attack, his family said. He was 46.

Hunt, who started 92 races during his six-year career on the top circuit, had 10 victories, including six wins in his dramatic world championship season in 1976 when he edged Niki Lauda by one point for the title.

Early in his career, Hunt was involved in several accidents in Formula Three that earned him the nickname "Hunt the Shunt." He made his Formula One debut in 1973 driving a March Ford.

Jordan: I'll take over

'I'm capable of carrying the load,' he says

Bill Barnard
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan is more than willing to take over a game for the Chicago Bulls if that's what it will take to win a championship.

The idea that the Bulls are a one-man team was largely dispelled when they won consecutive NBA titles, but Jordan admitted Tuesday that the notion of him being just a part of a smoothly functioning team is a fragile one.

"We're a better team when everybody's contributing, and we've shown that in the process of winning two championships," he said Tuesday. "I have no problem with that as long as other players are contributing. But, and I've talked this over with Phil Jackson many times, I'm capable of carrying the load by myself at times. I have to take my cue from the way the other guys are playing."

Jordan's tendency to take over Chicago's offense has revealed itself often in the playoffs.

Most of the time the Bulls have won — they take a 13-3 playoff record and a 2-1 lead in the NBA Finals into Wednesday night's game against Phoenix. But Jordan is having his worst postseason since 1987 when Chicago lost in the first round and he shot 41.7 percent from the field.

"Everyone has tried to make excuses for me, from my wrist, to my knees, to my legs, and some people have said I'm playing too hard or trying too hard, but it's the only way I know how to play," Jordan said. "I don't think I've tried to do too much. I try to evaluate what the other guys are doing as the game goes on and do what's needed to win."

Jordan is averaging 33.6 points on 46.1 percent shooting in this postseason. Entering the 1993 playoffs, his playoff shooting percentage was 50.7.

"I haven't shot the ball as well as I have in the past," Jordan said. "But we're still in position to do what we've done in the past. Hopefully, my shot will be there when we need it most."

He said Chicago's 129-121 triple-overtime loss in Game 3 has made people forget that the Bulls are still in good shape with a 2-1 lead

Torrid Olerud terrorizes Twins

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — John Olerud says a few bloopers and bleeders have helped him forge a 20-game hitting streak and .405 batting average.

In fact, he had two bloop doubles Tuesday night in the Toronto Blue Jays' 6-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins — as well as a line double and a line drive that was caught.

"I've had my share of hits that have been good luck," Olerud said.

Others, however, don't remember too many soft hits off his bat.

"He doesn't want to take credit," teammate Paul Molitor said. "I say that he could be hitting even higher if he had any luck at all."

That would be something, considering that Olerud's streak is the AL's longest this year and that no player has carried a .400 average so late into a season since Rod Carew was batting .402 on July 14, 1983.

Olerud's latest exploits helped Juan Guzman (6-1) bounce back from his only loss of the season. Guzman allowed four hits, walked one and struck out seven in eight innings. Duane Ward pitched the ninth for his 18th save, retiring the side on three pitches.

Kevin Tapani (3-7) took the loss.

Tigers 10, Indians 4

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder hit two more home runs against Cleveland, leading the Detroit Tigers past the Indians.

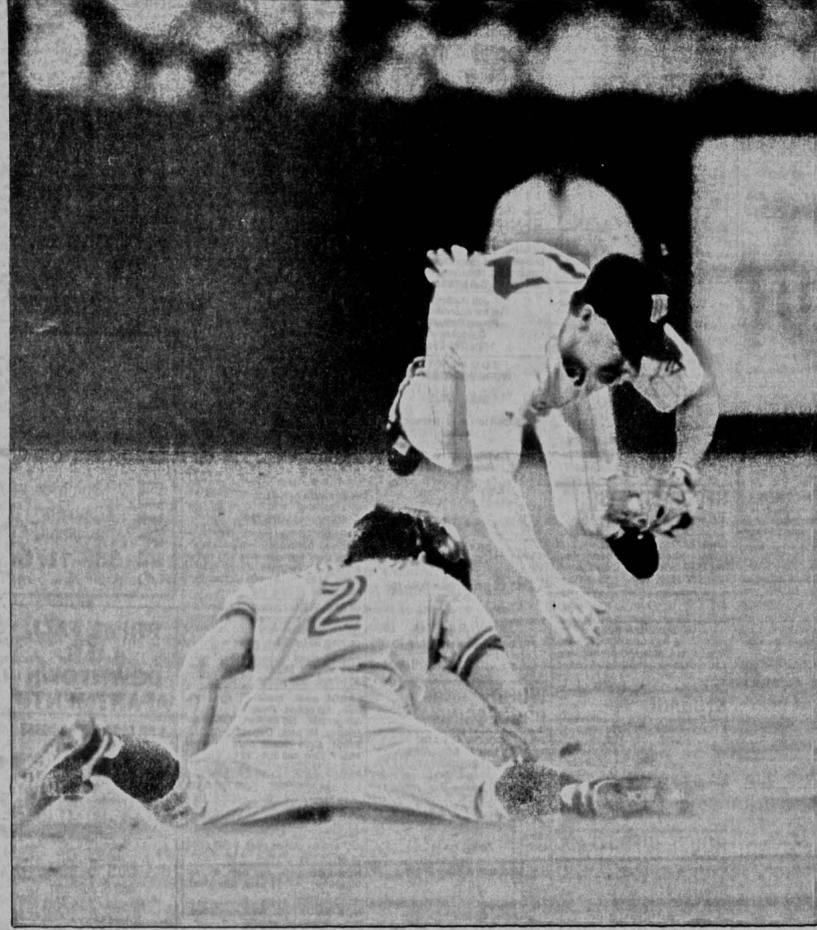

Fielder, who nearly homered over the left field roof Monday, has hit five of his 15 homers this season against the Indians. His three RBIs moved him into the AL lead with 55.

In his career, Fielder has 69 hits in 204 at-bats (.338) against Cleveland. Twenty-seven of those hits have been home runs, and Fielder has 66 RBIs against the Indians. Lou Whitaker also homered for the Tigers, who hit three homers in Monday night's 7-3 win.

Bill Krueger (5-2) won in relief. Paul Abbott (0-1) lost in his first major league appearance of the season.

Yankees 9, Red Sox 7

NEW YORK — Streaking Bernie Williams had an RBI single during an eight-run fifth inning and later hit a solo home run, sending the New York Yankees over Boston.

Minnesota second baseman Jeff Reboulet goes airborne during the Blue Jays' 6-3 win Tuesday at the Metrodome. After tagging out Toronto's Robb Butler trying to steal, John Olerud extended his hitting streak to 20 games.

The Yankees won for the fifth time in six games. Boston has lost nine of 10.

Williams, who hit a grand slam in Monday's 4-0 victory, has driven in nine runs in three games.

Neal Heaton (1-0) was the winner and Steve Farr got his 16th save. Loser Frank Viola (4-7) is 0-6 in seven starts since his last victory April 28.

Orioles 4, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Brady Anderson and Mark McLemore hit consecutive home runs Tuesday night and Jamie Moyer allowed four hits over seven innings as the Baltimore Orioles beat Milwaukee for their 12th win in 13 games.

Anderson, who has now homered in three straight games, drove a 2-1 pitch from Ricky Bones (3-4) just over the fence and beyond the leap of right fielder Tom Brunansky to lead off the sixth.

Moyer's (2-3) victory enabled him to win consecutive starts for the first time since April 1989.

Castillo responds to pressure

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Frank Castillo put some pressure on himself and responded in a big way.

He snapped a personal three-game losing streak with 7½ shutout innings and added his first career multi-hit game Tuesday as the Chicago Cubs beat the Florida Marlins 3-0.

"I told myself before the game that this was the most important game of my career," Castillo (2-4) said. He wasn't worried.

"It was simply, that I told myself to go out there and have a good game. Give yourself a chance of winning. Get back in the flow of the game."

It didn't take the Cubs long to score. In the second, with Rick Wilkins on third, Castillo hit a grounder to deep short and Alex Arias had to make a long throw that he just beat.

In the seventh, Castillo singled and scored all the way from first when Greg Briley dropped Dwight Smith's fly ball into the left field corner.

Castillo said his hitting was due largely to the knuckleballs of Charlie Hough (3-7), who allowed seven hits and three runs in seven innings.

Randy Myers, the fourth Cubs pitcher, notched his 20th save in 21 opportunities, joining Goose Gosage as the only pitchers since saves became official in 1969 to record 20 with four different clubs.

Braves 2, Mets 1

ATLANTA — Pinch-hitter Brian Hunter's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the ninth inning gave Atlanta the victory.

Braves starter Tom Glavine (8-3) snapped a three-game losing streak, allowing six hits without a strikeout or walk.

Jeff Blauser opened the ninth with an infield single off Eric Hillman (0-3), who had just replaced New York starter Bret Saberhagen. He was sacrificed to second and went to third on an infield single by David Justice. John Franco relieved and, after an intentional walk, Hunter hit the fly ball to center.

U.S. OPEN

Langer looking for foreign takeover

Bob Green

Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. — After a scouting mission over Baltusrol, Bernhard Langer noticed a crack in the course's defenses that could be exploited by Europeans this week in the U.S. Open.

Unlike previous Opens, where target golf usually was the order of the day, Langer said the Baltusrol Golf Club had "some openings to the greens ... the rough is not so penalizing as before ... and the greens are reasonably fair."

All of which plays to the strength of the 28 foreign players in the field of 156. In fact, Langer said if everything is just right, he could win the tournament that starts on Thursday.

The Masters champion added that other Open courses "were not at all what Europeans are familiar with," citing collars of rough around the greens that prohibit the run-up shot that is a standard of British golf in particular and European golf in general. He also mentioned the more narrow fairways and the penalizing rough that, he insists, "takes chipping out of the game."

During his practice round, Langer was optimistic about a European winning the Open for the first time since Englishman Tony Jacklin in 1970.

Langer also said that if British Open champ Nick Faldo, generally regarded as the world's best player, "is on his game, he can win on any golf course."

U.S. Open golf courses, however, have been far from hospitable to foreign players. While the Europeans have dominated world golf in recent years, winning the Masters and British Open with regularity, the U.S. Open has remained an American stronghold.

Before Jacklin's win in '70, you have to go back to 1927 to find the last European to win the Open. In all those years, South African Gary Player and Australian David Graham are the only other non-American winners.

Tom Watson, who owns five British Open titles, said Baltusrol could even lift the Europeans into the role of favorites.

"Under the conditions we have this year, it's very much like a British Open course," Watson said. "I'd say it favors them, makes them the favorites."

Langer certainly didn't want to go that far.

"I don't think it matters who is the favorite," he said. "It all depends on who is playing best. That could be as many as 50, 70 players. I think it is totally wrong to narrow it down to five or six."

Wrong or not, Langer and Faldo certainly would be included on any such short list. In addition to his Masters triumph, Langer won the European PGA earlier this season and last week missed a playoff in Hamburg, Germany, by a stroke.

Faldo has won one European Tour title this year, but owns his role as a probable contender simply because he's regarded as the game's top player. He also has a strong record in the Open — fourth or better in three of six starts, including a playoff loss to Curtis Strange in 1988.

Other foreign contenders include Australian Greg Norman and PGA title-holder Nick Price. Top American candidates include defending champion Tom Kite, leading money-winner Paul Azinger, Fred Couples, Payne Stewart, Davis Love III and John Cook.

Masters champion German Bernhard Langer surveys the 18th green at the Baltusrol Golf Club in Springfield, N.J., Tuesday.
