(5) PTB * k/g ywaŋ NOSE

This etymon very frequently occurs as a second element in compounds with PTB s-na ≍ s-naːr NOSE (§1.2.8). The vocalism of the reflexes varies from -a- to -u- or -o-, motivating the diphthongal reconstruction -wa-. A few reflexes, however, have high front vowels (Garo, Sema, Bwe), so that we reconstruct a double medial glide -yw-.

	mehˬ toˆ	beak / bill	Matisoff 1987 [c]

[a] The second syllable of this form might well be derived from PLB ʔgaŋ, but this syllable also appears in several other words (mɔ̀ʔ-qɔ 'mouth', làʔ=tɔ-qɔ 'palm of the hand', mû-lɔ̀ʔ-qɔ 'daytime; afternoon'), and is glossed 'noun formative of elusive meaning' in DL:250.
[b] The first syllable of this Akha form occurs with a large number of nouns, mostly animal names. It is possible that this morpheme is only a prefix here.
[c] Stopped second syllable in Akha points to allofam with final -k.

(2) PTB *ku(w) MOUTH

It is so far unclear whether this root should be reconstructed with simple -u or with the diphthong or long vowel -əw. This uncertainty is conventionally reflected by the reconstruction -u(w).

The putative Tangut cognate has undergone a change from velar stop to velar nasal.

There is an excellent Chinese comparandum.

(5) PTB *s-muk MOUTH

It is sometimes difficult to distinguish between the reflexes of this root and PTB s-muːr MOUTH / LIP / HOLD IN MOUTH / CHEW / FACE / GILLS (§1.3.1). In general, reflexes with front, mid or centralized vowels (i, e, ø, ə) are deemed to belong to the latter etymon.

The Chepang forms for ‘snout’ with final nasals have also been assigned to this root.

(8) PTB * b / p i MOUTH

Reflexes of this root are divided with respect to voicing of the initial, as well as in terms of vowel height. Since PTB -i is much better attested than PTB -e, we have opted to reconstruct this etymon with the former.

(9) PTB *m-p(r)(w)aŋ MOUTH

Two forms with final velar stop (Bokar Lhoba gum puɯk and Tsangla Motuo ʔa pak taŋ 'mouth') seem at first glance to be related to this root. However, Bokar nap pang and Tsangla no waŋ 'mouth' suggest that a separate root is involved.

The resemblance of these stop-finalled forms to Thai (cf. Siamese pàak 'mouth') seems quite fortuitous.

So far the nasal prefix has only been found in Qiangic.

1.3.1.3 Yawn/Gape

(1) PTB *ha-y YAWN

The reflexes show a certain amount of vocalic variation, only to be expected in such a sound-symbolic root.

There is a similar root PTB m-ha(ː)m ≍ *kam YAWN (§1.3.1.3), which should be kept distinct, since some languages (Nocte, Tangsa, Tamang) have compounds containing both etyma.

Several forms reflect a diphthongal rhyme -ay, either directly (Tangsa, Lalung, Thakali, Lahu) or indirectly via a fronted vowel (Apatani, Chokri, Karbi).

(2) PTB *m-ha(ː)m ≍ *kam YAWN

This root is still another example of the widespread variational pattern between h- and initial velars. See Matisoff (1997) and HPTB:57. Chepang, Kulung, and Jingpho have velar stops, while several other languages (rGyalrong and the Burmish languages Achang, Bola, Lashi) have velar fricatives.

Many reflexes show a nasal prefix, which has perhaps developed due to rhinoglottophilia (Matisoff 1975).

There is also a related root PTB ha-y YAWN (§1.3.1.3) with initial h-, demonstrating that these etyma are sound-symbolic.

Written Burmese sâm is of doubtful cognacy.

1.3.1.4 Blow

(1) PTB *mu $\frac{\text{r}}{\text{l}}$ BLOW

This tentatively reconstructed root seems quite independent of the more widespread etymon PTB k/s-mut BLOW (with mouth) (§1.3.1.4). The Ersu forms are assigned to this root by analogy with the homophonous Ersu form ma^{ɪ55} 'hair' < PTB s/r-mul ≷ s-mil ≷ s-myal HAIR / FUR / FEATHER (§1.6.1).

Ao (Mongsen: Longchang)	tü pa	tooth	Marrison 1967

[a] Jackson Sun notes, "Padam-Mising L has a form a-je, which seems to reflect a different root, cf. the Mising T doublet a-je; iː-paŋ. This root could be related to PTB *m-ćway 'tusk/tooth' (Prof. Matisoff, p.c., cf. PTB m-dzyway TOOTH / TUSK (§1.3.4)); the problem is that PT *-i(ː) normally reflects PTB *-əy rather than *-ay." Sun 1993a:102 (A historical-comparative study of the Tani (Mirish) branch of TB).

We have nevertheless treated both the Padam variants and a similar doublet in Apatani as reflexes of the present root for the time being.

[a] The order of the morphemes in this Darang compound seems strange, since the head noun so 'tooth' should appear before the modifier tyang.

5. TUJIA

Tujia	si^{33} ta^{35}	tooth	CHEN Kang 1986d:3.10

[a] loan from the Marpha form

[a] This form is found on Qiangyu Jianzhi p. 38. Jackson Sun's Mawo consultant does not recognize this form; for him, ʂə-z means 'canine tooth'; dzə 'fang'. On Sun Hongkai's own body part sheets, he gives the Mawo form ʂə-zdi instead of ʂə-z.

[b] For the same 'tooth' + 'flesh' combination, cf. Chinese yá ròu 'gums'.

[a] Guiqiong hui^{53} could be a different rendering of xɯi^{53} 'tooth' .

[b] This form is found on Qiangyu Jianzhi p. 38. Jackson Sun's Mawo consultant does not recognize this form; for him, ʂə-z means 'canine tooth'; dzə 'fang'. On Sun Hongkai's own body part sheets, he gives the Mawo form ʂə-zdi instead of ʂə-z.

MANY TB words meaning MOLAR are compounds: Lepcha fo-góm and Bokar ji:-kam are compounds of TOOTH + JAW. (See PTB gam JAW / CHIN / MOLAR (§1.2.5.2).) Lahu cì-ɡ̈à?-ma ‘molar’ is a compound of PTB m-dzyway TOOTH / TUSK (§1.3.4) and PTB rak WEAVE / DRIVE / CHASE (§6.24). Lushai (Mizo) ha-pui ‘molar’ is a compound of PTB s/p-wa TOOTH (§1.3.4) and PTB pwi(y)-n FEMALE / MOTHER / BIG / MOLAR (§1.3.4.2).

1.3.4.3 Gums

MOST TB languages reflect the PTB root r-nil ≍ s-nil, which STC claims to be possibly related to PTBr-ni ‘red’ . The Northern Qiang forms for ‘gums’ -zdi and ‘red’ ɕi- (Taoping χn̥i-), however, seem to come from different initials. The form khV- is also common in BL and Qiangic (Bradley reconstructs Proto-Loloish ʔ-ko^{3} on the basis of Lahu Shi and Southern Loloish). Attested compound formations in TB include TOOTH + GUMS, TOOTH + RED, TOOTH + BASE and TOOTH + FOOT; the Chinese formation TOOTH + FLESH is also attested.

(1) PTB * $\begin{matrix}\mathbf{r}\\\mathbf{m}\end{matrix}$ -nil GUMS

As STC surmises (note 58, p. 16), this root is very likely connected with PTB r-ni RED (§9.4), so that the original meaning seems to have been “tooth-redness”.

The m- prefix (attested in Paangkua, Moyon, Angami) seems to be secondary in this root. This is reminiscent of the development of prefixal r- in Jingpho, which has regularly become a syllabic nasal. See STC:109-110 and HPTB:129.

A few languages (Kanauri, Written Tibetan) have developed an s- prefix, which is clearly a reduction of PTB s/p-wa TOOTH (§1.3.4). The WT forms so-rnyil and snyil illustrate this prefixization process.

(3) PTB * $\begin{matrix}\mathbf{r}\\\mathbf{n}\end{matrix}$ iŋ GUMS

The Garo form wa-riŋ is derived from an earlier rni in STC #3, where it is assigned to PTB r/m-nil GUMS (§1.3.4.3), but the present analysis seems preferable.

(4) PTB *kwaŋ PALATE / GUMS

This rather sparsely attested root has an apparently strange range of meaning, including both GUMS and PALATE, perhaps explicable by their common reddish color.

The second element of the Lahu compound cì-qhɔ is a possible phonological descendant of this root, but is better assigned to PTB (g/k)uŋ HOLE / ORIFICE / INNER PART (§3.2.7).

It seems likely that there is a connection between this root and PTB kwaŋ MOUTH (§1.3.1).

In line with the frequently noted tendency of words meaning NECK / THROAT to have velar initials, we have reconstructed no fewer than eleven etyma with initial velars or velar clusters: PTB s/r-gwa-n NECK / NAPE (§1.4.2), PTB s/m-key-k NECK (§1.4.2), PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB k-(r/l)aw THROAT / PALATE (§1.3.5), PTB k/s-raw(k/ŋ) ≍ *k-rwa(k/ŋ) THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB grey-k THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB kak THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB ka THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB kwa THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2), and PTB ku NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2).

It is highly likely that some of these etyma are allofams of each other. It is equally likely that a given supporting form may have been assigned to the wrong etymon. However, on the basis of the available data, this may be the best that can be done at this point.

(2) PTB *lwam THROAT

This etymon, which never occurs as an initial syllable in a compound, bears a certain resemblance to PTB lam ROAD (§9.10.1), with a putative semantic association based on the throat's being a pathway to the interior of the body.

(5) PTB *l-kwak THROAT / NECK

The Karbi and Meithei forms with kr- clusters may well have arisen by metathesis from the *liquid prefix and *velar root initial.

In line with the frequently noted tendency of words meaning NECK / THROAT to have velar initials, we have reconstructed no fewer than eleven etyma with initial velars or velar clusters: PTB s/r-gwa-n NECK / NAPE (§1.4.2), PTB s/m-key-k NECK (§1.4.2), PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB k-(r/l)aw THROAT / PALATE (§1.3.5), PTB k/s-raw(k/ŋ) ≍ *k-rwa(k/ŋ) THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB grey-k THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB kak THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB ka THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB kwa THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2), and PTB ku NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2).

It is highly likely that some of these etyma are allofams of each other. It is equally likely that a given supporting form may have been assigned to the wrong etymon. However, on the basis of the available data, this may be the best that can be done at this point.

(8) PTB *s(y)a (m / ŋ) THROAT

This sparsely attested root, which in TB languages refers to the neck, seems to be distinct from PTB s(y)am-s BREATH / LUNG / SPIRIT / VOICE / HEART (§1.1.2.2), whose semantic center of gravity is more abstract.

The putative Chinese comparandum, however, has a more "internal" meaning, referring to the voice or throat. Cf. Mandarin sǎngzi 'voice', which occurs neither in GSR 704 nor in Baxter's system, so that it probably has no early attestation. By analogy with sāng 'mulberry', which is in both sources, it would be reconstructed sâng by Karlgren and sangʔ by Baxter.

(10) PTB *grey-k THROAT

This etymon was formerly reconstructed as gre-k.

In line with the frequently noted tendency of words meaning NECK / THROAT to have velar initials, we have reconstructed no fewer than eleven etyma with initial velars or velar clusters: PTB s/r-gwa-n NECK / NAPE (§1.4.2), PTB s/m-key-k NECK (§1.4.2), PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB k-(r/l)aw THROAT / PALATE (§1.3.5), PTB k/s-raw(k/ŋ) ≍ *k-rwa(k/ŋ) THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB grey-k THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB kak THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB ka THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB kwa THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2), and PTB ku NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2).

It is highly likely that some of these etyma are allofams of each other. It is equally likely that a given supporting form may have been assigned to the wrong etymon. However, on the basis of the available data, this may be the best that can be done at this point.

(2) PTB *tsyi-k WINDPIPE / ADAM'S APPLE

This etymon appears similar to PTB dzəy SEED / TESTICLE / ROUND OBJECT (§1.9.7), as suggested by the WB compound WB lañ-ce' 'larynx' (lit. 'neck seed').

On the other hand, several languages have distinct reflexes of these two roots, e.g. Chokri tsa 'seed' vs. (u) ru^{11} che^{35} 'windpipe/trachea', and nor Darang tɑ^{31} piɑi^{55} 'seed' vs. shig-ceig 'windpipe', so that it seems best to keep them separate.

6.1.2.1. Northern Loloish

Gazhuo	lɛ^{323} pɛ^{33} tsɻ^{35} tsɻ^{35}	adam's apple / larynx	Dai Qingxia 1989c:4.1.4

[a] [Source Note] (lit: neck-egg).

1.3.5.4 Adam's Apple/Larynx

NOTE the semantic connection between LARYNX and KNOT or SEED., e.g. WT 'ol-mdud 'throat-knot' ; WB lañ-ce' 'neck-seed' ; Lisu tɕɐɑ^{35}miʔ^{21}tɔ^{55}siˇa a^{1} 'monkey-knot'.

Note the similarity between the Lolopho form ɒ^{44} kɣ̱^{44} lɣ̱^{44}, the Lahu form qá-qâʔ-lâʔ, and the Lisu form bø^{44} kɔ^{21} lɔ^{35} (all 'larynx/Adam's apple'). There seems to be a Loloish binome here, currently tagged PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5) + PTB lwak LARYNX (§1.3.5.4), but this could just be imitative, as in English 'gullet', 'glug'.

(1) PTB *lwak LARYNX

This promising root requires further confirmation.

Lisu (Northern)	bø^{44}kɔ^{21}lɔ^{35}	windpipe	Bradley 1994

[a]The immediate ancestor of Lahu qá- would be PLB ʔgak.

(2) PTB *baw LARYNX / WINDPIPE / NECK

Mandarin 脖 bó 'neck' bears a superficial resemblance to this TB etymon, but it seems to be a relatively recent addition to the Chinese vocabulary, since it does not appear in GSR or the Shuo Wen.

1.3.5.6 Swallow

Note the following three WT forms for 'throat': 'og-ma ≍ lkog-ma ∗ 'ol-ma.

It is difficult to distinguish among the velar-initialed etyma: PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB kwa THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), and PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2). Compare Sangkong aŋ^{33}khoŋ^{31} and Phunoi ʔã^{55}ko^{11} (both 'throat'). The Phunoi form cannot be from -waŋ, since -waŋ > on/õ, cf. 'wing' ʔấ tố < PTB dwaŋ WING / HAND (§1.5.1), 'thigh' ʔấ-pon < PTB (p/b)waŋ HIPS / BUTTOCKS / TAIL / ANUS (§1.4.9.2).

1.3.5.7 Choke

(1) PTB *ha(ː)k HAWK / GAG / CHOKE

This etymon definitely has an onomatopoetic component (witness the English near-homophone hawk). There is a possible allofamic relationship with PTB kwak COUGH (§1.8.3.3) and/or PTB k(r)aːk PHLEGM / SPUTUM / MUCUS (§1.8.3.1).

1.3.5.8 Eat/Devour

(1) PTB *m-dz(y)a-{k,n,t,s} EAT / FOOD / FEED / RICE

This root evidently could take a variety of suffixes, as well as a nasal prefix (Qiangic / rGyalrongic, Baima, and Naxi). The -t and -n suffixes had a nominalizing force, giving meanings like 'food', 'rice', 'deer' (see the references to #66 in the Index of STC, p. 200).

(2) PTB *hwap DRINK

This root is best attested in Kiranti, with a likely Tujia cognate and a good Chinese comparandum.

The final nasal in the first syllable of Yakha hom ma: 'drink' is due to assimilation to the initial nasal of the second syllable.

1.4.2 Neck

NOTE the semantic connection between NECK and WAIST; the latter is the neck of the body. This is analogous to the extension of words for 'neck' to other thin flexible areas of the body, as in Korean son-mok 'wrist' ('hand neck') and pal-mok 'ankle' ('foot neck'). There is thus probably a relationship between WT sked-pa ~ rked-pa 'waist; middle' and ske ~ skye ~ skya 'neck, throat'.

For the semantic connection between NECK and SHOULDER, see Chapter 1.4.3.

The Karen forms, which all look something like ko, could either be from PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5) or from PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2).

Note also the similarity between the Hani forms for 'neck' k^{h}ɔ^{31} lɔ^{55}, k^{h}ɔ^{31} laŋ^{55}, k^{h}ɯ^{31} l̥ɯ^{55} and the Karen (B) form k^{h}o^{31} lø^{31} t^{h}i̱^{55}.

There is a widespread binome in LB consisting of etyma PTB g/m-liŋ NECK (§1.4.2) + PTB tsiŋ NECK (§1.4.2).

There is a possible semantic connection between THROAT/NECK and HEART; the first syllables of Limbu niŋ-mā 'throat' and Bisu niŋ-tshɨ 'neck' mean 'heart' .

(4) PTB *gwaŋ NECK / THROAT

This etymon is very similar to PTB s-ŋwa(ŋ/k) NECK / WAIST (§1.4.2), and is very likely in an allofamic relationship to it.

In line with the frequently noted tendency of words meaning NECK / THROAT to have velar initials, we have reconstructed no fewer than eleven etyma with initial velars or velar clusters: PTB s/r-gwa-n NECK / NAPE (§1.4.2), PTB s/m-key-k NECK (§1.4.2), PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB k-(r/l)aw THROAT / PALATE (§1.3.5), PTB k/s-raw(k/ŋ) ⨯ *k-rwa(k/ŋ) THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB grey-k THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB kak THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB ka THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB kwa THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2), and PTB ku NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2).

It is highly likely that some of these etyma are allofams of each other. It is equally likely that a given supporting form may have been assigned to the wrong etymon. However, on the basis of the available data, this may be the best that can be done at this point.

(6) PTB *s-ŋwa ŋ / k NECK / WAIST

Note that this root appears in some words for 'waist', as in Bokar Lhoba huŋ-ŋəŋ. It's a natural extension for 'neck' to refer to any thin, bendable body part, as in the Korean words son-mok 'wrist' (literally 'hand-neck') and pal-mok 'ankle' (literally 'foot-neck').

This etymon is very similar to PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2), and is very likely in an allofamic relationship to it.

(7) PTB *bran ≍ *pwat NECK / THROAT

Despite the fact that reflexes of this root show variation between initial b- and p-, between medial -r-, -y-, and -w-, and between final -n and -t and open syllables, we are referring them all to a single etymon. The second syllable of Lahu qɔ^{31}pe^{31} definitely points to PLB -an.

(9) PTB * s r -gwa-n NECK / NAPE

The final -n in the reconstruction is motivated by the Thulung and Khaling forms. The root as a whole seems fairly well established.

In line with the frequently noted tendency of words meaning NECK / THROAT to have velar initials, we have reconstructed no fewer than eleven etyma with initial velars or velar clusters: PTB s/r-gwa-n NECK / NAPE (§1.4.2), PTB s/m-key-k NECK (§1.4.2), PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB k-(r/l)aw THROAT / PALATE (§1.3.5), PTB k/s-raw(k/ŋ) ≷ k-rwa(k/ŋ) THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB grey-k THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB kak THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB ka THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB kwa THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2), and PTB ku NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2).

It is highly likely that some of these etyma are allofams of each other. It is equally likely that a given supporting form may have been assigned to the wrong etymon. However, on the basis of the available data, this may be the best that can be done at this point.

(17) PTB *ku NECK / THROAT

In line with the frequently noted tendency of words meaning NECK / THROAT to have velar initials, we have reconstructed no fewer than eleven etyma with initial velars or velar clusters: PTB s/r-gwa-n NECK / NAPE (§1.4.2), PTB s/m-key-k NECK (§1.4.2), PTB l-kwak THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB k-(r/l)aw THROAT / PALATE (§1.3.5), PTB k/s-raw(k/ŋ) ≍ *k-rwa(k/ŋ) THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB grey-k THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB kak THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB ka THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB kwa THROAT / NECK (§1.3.5), PTB m-g(u/i)l THROAT (§1.3.5), PTB gwaŋ NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2), and PTB ku NECK / THROAT (§1.4.2).

It is highly likely that some of these etyma are allofams of each other. It is equally likely that a given supporting form may have been assigned to the wrong etymon. However, on the basis of the available data, this may be the best that can be done at this point.

1.4.3 Shoulder

For the semantic relationship with KNEE, see Chapter 1.5.8.4 (PTB put-s ≍ *pit-s KNEE (§1.5.8.4)). Note also the semantic connection between SHOULDER and the adjoining NECK. PTB m/p-lyaŋ SHOULDER (§1.4.3) is probably related to PTB g/m-liŋ NECK (§1.4.2).

Some words for SHOULDER are derived from roots meaning CONVEX, as WB pa' khûm.

Note the general proliferation of etyma for SHOULDER with labial initials.

Note the striking similarity between the Lahu form làʔ-qá-pɨ and Qiang (Taoping) lɑ^{31} χɑ^{55} pi^{33}, both meaning 'shoulder' and both tagged as PTB lak HAND/LIMB (§1.5.1) + PTB s-ka(ː)k FORK / BRANCH / CROTCH (§1.4.9.1) + PTB (p/b)i ROUNDED PART / NIPPLE / FOREHEAD / SHOULDER (§1.9.4).

(1) PTB *baw SHOULDER

The basic meaning of this etymon, which occurs both in monosyllables and in compounds, is apparently 'rounded part', cf. PTB pu BALL / EGG / ROUND OBJECT (§1.9.1).

1.4.4.3 Chest

NOTE the relationship between CHEST and BELLY; the Kiranti root PKir pwam CHEST (§1.4.4.3) is from PTB pʷam BELLY / STOMACH / WAIST (§1.9.6).

PTB s-kəw BODY / CHEST / THORAX / CORPSE (§1.1.1) is the source for WT sku-braŋ 'chest (resp.)', and also of the honorific prefix used with many body parts in WT. It should be kept distinct from PTB k(r)u CHEST / RIB (§1.4.4.3), which is reflected in Thakali 'ku, Kaike gu, etc.

It is interesting to note that both 'chest' and 'trunk' are ambiguous in English between body-part and receptacle!

(1) PTB *k(r)u CHEST / RIB

The r in the reconstruction is motivated by rGyalrong tə s gru, as well as by Lahu kû, since Lahu velars are from earlier clusters with r. rGyalrong has an s- prefix, while Chepang has an -s suffix. Both of these elements are possibly from the animal root PTB sya-n FLESH / MEAT / GAME ANIMAL (§1.1.1).

(3) PTB *k(w)a CHEST

A few languages (Qiang, Bai) have a labial semi-vowel, but this might be secondary, in view of a similar tendency to labialize velar onsets in languages like Lisu: cf. e.g. BITTER PTB b-ka-n/m/ŋ, Lisu khwa^{21}.

The first syllable of Chang ku khu might also reflect this labialization, a similar development is characteristic of Chinese (cf. Mandarin ku^{3} 'bitter' from PTB b-ka-n/m/ŋ BITTER / SALTY / BILE / LIVER (§1.7.3.1)). See STC p. 186.

For a phonosemantically similar root, see PTB kywak CHEST / RIB (§1.4.4.3).

[a] For a similar Lisu vocalic reflex, cf. PLB ʔgoŋ^{2} NECK/NECK-LIKE PART > Lisu (Northern) kɤ^{55}tsi^{55}. (-ɤ is the vowel corresponding to Fraser' s -rgh; tsi^{55} is 'joint'.). -ɤ (-rgh) may be the regular reflex of -oŋ after velars.

(10) PTB *ru CHEST

This etymon is attested in scattered languages as the final syllable in compounds. Several other roots in the semantic area with initial r- seem unrelated (cf. PTB s-ri(p/m) RIB / SIDE (§1.4.4.4), PTB s/b-ram RIB (§1.4.4.4), and PTB b/g-raŋ CHEST (§1.4.4.3)). The widely attested etymon for BONE (PTB s/m/g-rus BONE (§1.6.3)) is also distinct.

The position of articulation of the final nasal in this etymon is difficult to reconstruct based on the Rongmei, Tangkhul, and Khoirao reflexes; but perhaps the Sangkong form can settle the matter in favor of -ŋ. For now, we symbolize the uncertainty by using an N.

For the formations WAIST + BONE = RIB and BELLY + BONE = RIB, see Chapters 1.4.6 and 1.4.7.

The two roots PTB s-nam RIB (§1.4.4.4) and PTB s-ni HEART / BREAST / CHEST / RIB (§1.7.1) are sometimes difficult to distinguish, especially in Lolo-Burmese, but in general it seems that PTB s-nam RIB (§1.4.4.4) is more typical of Burmish, while PTB s-ni HEART / BREAST / CHEST / RIB (§1.7.1) is more typical of Loloish.

The Angami, Jirel, Kulung, Moyon, Bodo, Lalung, and Apatani forms appear to be closely related.

Note the relation WAIST + BONE = RIB in Phunoi ʔã cò 'waist', ʔã^{55} co^{11} jɑu^{11} 'rib' (jɑu^{11} is 'bone'); for the similar construction BELLY + BONE = RIB, see Chapter 1.4.7.

Note that in the Loloish languages (e.g. Lisu, Xide, Gazhuo), compounds for WAIST often have PTB tsik JOINT (§1.5.8) as a constituent; these morphemes should not be confused with PTB m-(t)syi(ŋ/k) WAIST / LOWER BACK / LOINS (§1.4.6).

Note the following NE Indian 'parallel' binomes which appear to have the same etymological structure, all glossed 'waist': Meluri a-khü-shi; Miji gɯ-tsiʔ; Miri ki-čik; Galo pak-pu-cik (last syllable only); Ntenyi a-khü-shü. The final syllables may be stop-final allofams of PTB m-(t)syi(ŋ/k) WAIST / LOWER BACK / LOINS (§1.4.6); the first syllables may possibly be related to PTB k(r)aw ≍ *k(y)aw BACK (§1.4.8) or PTB krya(t/n) WAIST / LOINS (§1.4.6).

(1) PTB *gyu-k ≍ *dzyu-k WAIST

Written Burmese has a doublet krô ~ kyô 'back' ≍ kyok 'back of an animal', kyok-kap 'kidney', indicating that the final velar stop was sometimes treated as a suffix and dropped.

It is sometimes difficult to say to which of these allofams a Loloish or Qiangic open-syllable reflex belongs.

The Bisu doublet kjɔ̀ ~ tšɔ̀ clearly justifies the allofamic reconstruction with both a palatalized velar and a palatal affricate initial.

(3) PTB *m-(t)syi ŋ / k WAIST / LOWER BACK / LOINS

Several reflexes of this root have final -n instead of -ŋ. More research is required to ascertain whether this variation is merely allofamic or whether two separate etyma are involved.

The nasal prefix is reflected in Jingpho, Rengma, Tangut, and perhaps Rongmei.

[a] Several of these Qiangic forms were assigned to PTB gyu-k ≍ dzyu-k WAIST (§1.4.6) in HPTB:358, although it now seems preferable to include them under the present etymon.

(4) PTB *krya t / n WAIST / LOINS

Written Tibetan has both an r- and an s- prefix, with the former apparently metathesized to a glide in other languages (Apatani, Tshona, Tamang).

The Tangut form may reflect the nasal allofam, although its cognacy is by no means certain.

The first member of the Apatani doublet har-č(ʰ)eʔ 'groin' and kʰrjɯ-po 'waist' has a palatal affricate initial, similar to the Lepcha and Hpun forms, leading one to wonder whether two separate roots are involved.

1.4.7 Belly/Abdomen

NOTE the relation BELLY + BONE = RIB in Apatani a-k^{h}rjɯ 'belly' , a-k^{h}rjɯ a-lo 'rib' (a-lo is 'bone'); for the similar construction WAIST + BONE = RIB, see Chapter 1.4.6.

1.4.8 Back

MANY Lolo-Burmese forms for 'back' are apparently descended from a bi-syllabic protoform PTB m-daŋ BUTTOCKS / HIPS / TAIL / LOWER BACK / LOINS (§1.4.8.1) + PTB k(w)a(ŋ/k) WAIST / HIPS / BUTTOCKS / TAIL / BACK (§1.4.6), as Bisu taŋ-khaŋ. We also note the frequent pattern PTB guŋ BODY / BACK (§1.1.1) + PTB m-daŋ BUTTOCKS / HIPS / TAIL / LOWER BACK / LOINS (§1.4.8.1), as Lisu gu^{35} du^{31}. Lolo-Burmese languages show no real evidence for PTB k(r)aw ≍ *k(y)aw BACK (§1.4.8) or PTB (k/g)um BACK / BODY (§1.4.8).

Note the following forms for 'back' : Sde-dge Tibetan dʑɑ?^{31}lo?^{53}, Sherpa 'gyap-lā, Shixing dʑo^{33}lɑ^{35}. The second syllables seem to be related to WT logs 'side', for which we have no PTB etymology.

(4) PTB *m-k(y)un BACK / KIDNEY

This root is reconstructed as m-glun (HPTB 73, 125, 198), largely because of the voiced initial in the OC comparanda d̂i̯ĕn and di̯ən (GSR #368h 'kidney' and #450h-i 'small of the back'). On the TB level, however, it now seems best to reconstruct it with a voiceless root initial.

(6) PTB * k g um BACK / BODY

This root is etymologically distinct from PTB guŋ BODY / BACK (§1.1.1) and PTB (k/ʔ)uk BEND / CROOKED / RETURN / BACK / YEAR (§9.1).

The Bai forms are rather arbitrarily assigned to this root, although roots PTB guŋ BODY / BACK (§1.1.1) and PTB s-kəw BODY / CHEST / THORAX / CORPSE (§1.1.1) are also possibilities.

(7) PTB *tu $\begin{matrix}\mathbf{k}\\\mathbf{ŋ}\end{matrix}$ BACK (of body)

Cf. also PTB m-daŋ BUTTOCKS / HIPS / TAIL / LOWER BACK / LOINS (§1.4.8.1), where the semantic center of gravity is lower in the body (i.e. lower back, buttocks, tail); however, the Sherpa, Lepcha, and Yakha forms are included here because of their stopped finals.

We recognize three quite similar etyma in this semantic area: the present root PTB tu(k/ŋ), PTB m-daŋ BUTTOCKS / HIPS / TAIL / LOWER BACK / LOINS (§1.4.8.1), and PTB du TAIL / BUTTOCKS / BACK (§1.4.10). In the case of phonologically eroded languages (e.g. Loloish, Qiangic, Baic), it is sometimes difficult to decide among them. Several Loloish languages have distinct reflexes for at least two of them, e.g. Lahu tɔ̀ 'lower back / loins / lumbar region' < PTB m-daŋ vs. ɔ̀-mē-tu 'tail' < PTB du; Written Burmese taŋ-pâ 'buttock' < PTB m-daŋ vs. khâ-tuiŋ 'lower back / loins / lumbar region' < PTB tu(k/ŋ). Two Southern Loloish binomes are particularly problematic (Akha dɔ̀-dàŋ 'buttocks' and Sangkong toŋ[31] taŋ[55] 'buttocks'), where the first syllables are from PTB m-daŋ, while the second syllables are of uncertain origin despite their superficial resemblance to PTB m-daŋ.

1.4.8.1 Lower Back/Small of Back

SMALL OF BACK —— KIDNEY

(1) PTB *m-daŋ BUTTOCKS / HIPS / TAIL / LOWER BACK / LOINS

We recognize three quite similar etyma in this semantic area: the present root PTB m-daŋ, PTB tu(k/ŋ) BACK (of body) (§1.4.8), and PTB du TAIL / BUTTOCKS / BACK (§1.4.10). In the case of phonologically eroded languages (e.g. Loloish, Qiangic, Baic), it is sometimes difficult to decide among them. Several Loloish languages have distinct reflexes for at least two of them, e.g. Lahu tɔ̀ 'lower back / loins / lumbar region' < PTB m-daŋ vs. ɔ̀-mɛ̄-tu 'tail' < PTB du; Written Burmese taŋ-pâ 'buttock' < PTB m-daŋ vs. khâ-tuiŋ 'lower back / loins / lumbar region' < PTB tu(k/ŋ). Two Southern Loloish binomes are particularly problematic (Akha dɔ̀-dàŋ 'buttocks' and Sangkong toŋ^{31} taŋ^{55} 'buttocks'), where the first syllables are from PTB m-daŋ, while the second syllables are of uncertain origin despite their superficial resemblance to PTB m-daŋ.

(2) PTB *m-kal ≍ *s-gal BACK (lower) / KIDNEY / LOAD / CARRY

The PKC etymon khel (a meso-root of PTB (k/g)yal BACK (lower) / BUTTOCKS / HIPS (§1.4.9.2)) definitely seems related to this root, perhaps pointing to a PKC variant k(y)al.

The meaning of this etymon ranges from KIDNEY / SMALL OF BACK to the notion of CARRY ON THE BACK / LOAD. There also seems to be a relationship with the widespread root PTB m-kul TWENTY / ALL (§9.9), which perhaps indicates an original meaning like 'a complete load; everything that can be placed on a beast of burden at one time.'

The original meaning of the graph 荷 of the Chinese comparandum was 'lotus', as witness its "grass radical", but it came to be used as a loan character for the concept CARRY (in the Confucian Analects [Lún Yǔ 论语]) and for SUSTAIN (in the Zuǒ Zhuàn [左傳], one of the commentaries on the Spring and Autumn Annals).

This etymon bears a strong resemblance to PTB g-raŋ ≍ k-laŋ BUTTOCKS / ANUS / HIPS (§1.4.9.2), but the semantic center of gravity of the two roots is quite different, so that we are considering them to be separate etyma at the moment.

(3) PKC *khraal GROIN

This PKC root appears distinct from PTB m-kal ≷ s-gal BACK (lower) / KIDNEY / LOAD / CARRY (§1.4.8.1), as witness the different reflexes in Mizo, Lai (Hakha), and Tiddim. Certain forms, however, seem to go equally well with either root (e.g. Paite khal, assigned by VanBik (2009) [#1344] to the present root).

(3) PTB *mu $^{n}_{ŋ}$ BUTTOCKS / TAIL / BACK

This etymon seems to partially overlap with PTB man BACK (lower) / BUTTOCKS (§1.4.8), and should perhaps be merged with it in the future.

This weakly attested but fairly solid root has so far been found almost exclusively in Himalayish languages, with a likely Deng cognate. Hayu shows variation between final -n and -m, but the basic form of the etymon seems to reflect the former, especially since Tsangla has a final dental stop.

(11) PTB *du TAIL / BUTTOCKS / BACK

We recognize three quite similar etyma in this semantic area: the present root PTB du, PTB m-daŋ BUTTOCKS / HIPS / TAIL / LOWER BACK / LOINS (§1.4.8.1), and PTB tu(k/ŋ) BACK (of body) (§1.4.8). In the case of phonologically eroded languages (e.g. Loloish, Qiangic, Baic), it is sometimes difficult to decide among them. Several Loloish languages have distinct reflexes for at least two of them, e.g. Lahu tɔ̀ 'lower back / loins / lumbar region' < PTB m-daŋ vs. ɔ̀-mɛ̄-tu 'tail' < PTB du; Written Burmese taŋ-pâ 'buttock' < PTB m-daŋ vs. khâ-tuiŋ 'lower back / loins / lumbar region' < PTB tu(k/ŋ). Two Southern Loloish binomes are particularly problematic (Akha dɔ̀-dàŋ 'buttocks' and Sangkong toŋ[31] taŋ[55] 'buttocks'), where the first syllables are from PTB m-daŋ, while the second syllables are of uncertain origin despite their superficial resemblance to PTB m-daŋ.

(1) PTB *r-may ≷ *m-ray TAIL / PENIS

This extremely widespread etymon seems distinct from PTB s-mi ANUS / BUTTOCK (§1.4.10). A number of languages have developed a dental or palatal nasal through the influence of a following yod or front vowel. A similar development has occurred in roots like PTB s-myak ≷ *s-mik EYE (§1.2.6).

This etymon, although nowhere near as widespread as PTB r-may ≍ m-ray TAIL / PENIS (§1.4.10.1), seems quite valid, despite its rather scattered distribution. The velar prefix is found in Tshona.

1.5 Limbs, Joints, and Body Measures

1.5.1 Hand, Arm, Wing

FOR the first attempt to deal with this area of semantic space, see Matisoff 1985 (’Out on a limb’).

The presentation of the roots follows a certain roughly logical order. First come the etyma that seem basically to have meant HAND. The most widespread of these, which we might call «the lak-family», comes in some nine variant forms (allofams), with semantic spillover into the areas of CUBIT and FOOT (Etyma #’s 1a-1i). This HAND section also comprises 6 more etyma, of varying degrees of solidity (#’s 2-7).

Next come the roots whose basic meaning is deemed to have been ARM (#’s 8-15), followed by the more numerous etyma in the WING area (#’s 17-32), one of which (#17) has 5 variants. This study is rounded out by several roots meaning PALM or WRIST (#’s 33-37); then three roots referring to measurements made with the upper limb (CUBIT, HANDSPAN; #’s 38-40); finally an etymon with both nominal (ARMPIT) and verbal (TICKLE) dimensions (#41), and a group of 7 Proto-Kuki-Chin reconstructions referring to actions performed with the hands (#’s 42-48).

Most of the reconstructions offered are at the Proto-Tibeto-Burman level. When available, meso-reconstructions are also included (e.g. pKaren, pKiranti, pKuki-Chin, pLolo-Burmese, pTani). Usually these are subsumed under the PTB etymon they represent, and do not receive a separate number (#’s 1c, 2, 8, 19, 20b, 22), but occasionally they have so far only been reconstructed for a single subgroup, and so receive separate numbers (#’s 15, 26, 30, 42-48).

For 13 of these etyma, Chinese comparanda are suggested, so that they may plausibly be reconstructed back to the Proto-Sino-Tibetan level.

For the sake of completeness we include an Indo-Aryan root (#32) which has been borrowed into several Himalayan languages.

Detailed as these etymologies are, they by no means exhaust the semantic field of the UPPER LIMB, which includes such notions as FINGER, FIST, ELBOW, NAIL, etc.

NOTE the connection between HAND and LEAF, cf. Nocte dʌk ‘hand’ , [1]ʌ-dʌk ‘leaf’ ; Konyak (Tamlu) yak ‘hand’ , bɯn-yak ‘leaf’ ; Garo jak ‘hand’ ; bi-jak ‘leaf’ ; etc. In other languages, the words for ‘hand’ and ‘foot’ both contain the same morpheme, which is allofamically related to a morpheme in ‘leaf’ . For example, Lisu lá[6]-hpá[2] ‘hand’ , hchi[3]-hpá[2] ‘foot’ , si[2]-hpyá[5] ‘leaf’.

(1) PTB *lak ≷ *C-yak ARM / HAND / WING

This etymon, far and away the most widely attested root in this semantic area in TB as a whole, is characterized by considerable morphophonemic complexity. The basic allofam is PTB lak (1a), but in many daughter languages the lateral has become a yod, yielding forms like PTB yak (1b). By a further sound change, this yod has developed into z- or ʑ-, but reflexes with these initials are also assigned to (1b). In other languages we find forms with d- rather than l-. Two explanations are possible here: (a) These languages could have added a prefix d- to the yodated variant, yielding PTB d-yak (1c), which sometimes developed into reflexes with voiced affricate initials like dʑ-; in other cases, the prefix “preempted” the initial entirely, giving forms like PTB dak (1d). (b) Alternatively, we might assume that these latter forms arose directly from PTB lak via a sporadic “deltacism”, perhaps via an intermediate lyak. A handful of reflexes contain both an l and a d, probably best explained of reprefixation after the original l had become d.[] Other reflexes point to a prefix g- added to the yodated root, PTB g-yak (1e), with secondary meanings like ‘cubit’ or ‘armpit’; some reflexes with affricated initials are assigned to this variant rather than to PTB d-yak (see especially the Written Burmese triplet for ‘armpit’). Finally, an honorific Written Tibetan form for ‘hand’ reflects a labial prefix, PTB p-yak (1f).

Note that all these prefixes (d-, g-, p-) are deemed to have been added to the variant with y- rather than l-, as reflected in the pan-allofamic formula given above, where “C-” stands for a consonantal prefix:

g -yak
p

Benedict originally reconstructed this root simply as lak, but in the revised version of STC he included prefixal g- in the protoform (STC #86). This reconstruction was followed by Weidert (1987:#689), and by French (1983:500) for Proto-Northern Naga. This elevation of g- to special proto-status seems unwarranted, however, since the d- prefix is actually much more widespread. There are in fact no unambiguous reflexes of a prototype g-lak.

It is extremely interesting to note that a number of languages have forms for FOOT that reflect the open syllables la or ya, both of which could also take a prefix (either d- or g- that sometimes led to affrication of the initial). This is noted with puzzlement in STC (p. 34 and n. 308), but it seems irresistible to posit some sort of connection with this etymon for HAND.

[a] These Bodo-Garo forms illustrate a reduction of the lateral initial to zero.
[b] The final -n in Jingpho phan is attributed to a PTB dual suffix in STC n. 284, p. 99.

[a] Hale (1973) uses a plus under the vowel to indicate breathy phonation.

[a] The voiceless Newar initial perhaps points to a variant with the s- prefix. On the other hand, the Dolakha form suggests that this initial results from the fusion of a disyllabic prototype.

[a] Literally "dogshit finger", so called because of its size and shape.

[a] The trigraph -rgh was described by Fraser as representing "the sound of involuntary retching", and seems to have represented the high central vowel ɨ.

9.0.1. Old Chinese

Chinese (Old/Mid)	li̯ək/li̯ək	strong, strength, force	Karlgren 1957:925a-b

9.0.3. Modern Chinese

Chinese (Mandarin)	lih liahng	strength	Sun 1985b:277
	lì qì	strength	Evans et al. 1991

[a] The final consonant in Phunoi sùp has perhaps assimilated to the preceding vowel.

Chinese comparandum

The graph seems to depict an arm with a hand. Also, in the same phonetic series, 仂 OC lək ⪤ li̯ək, GSR #928c 'a tenth' (from the 10 fingers); Mand. lè, and 扐 OC lək, GSR #928d 'space between the fingers' (where divination sticks were inserted); Mand. lè.

For a similar semantic association, cf. Japanese ude 'arm' and te 'hand', which may often be used in the sense of 'ability, competence, skill'.

ZJH: Handel 2009:133-4 considers Chinese 亦 'armpit' yì and 翼 'wing' yì, both with OC *lateral initial, to be the most direct cognates to the basic PTB root lak, while 力 lì with initial r- is probably a more distantly related member of the Chinese word family. See PTB yak ARM / HAND / ARMPIT / TICKLE (§1.5.1) and PTB d-yak HAND / ARM / LEAF (§1.5.1) for more details.

SPB: Note that Schuessler (2007:349-50) considers 仂 lè and 扐 lè to be unrelated etymologically to 力 'strength' lì; he considers them to derive from a basic sense of 'vein (in soil)', and thus connects them to 理/里 'cut in a regular way, divide into even sections' (cf. li̯əg, GSR #978a,d; Mand. lǐ).

9.0.1. OLD CHINESE
Chinese (Old/Mid)	zi̱ɑk/i̱ăk	armpit	CHOU Fa-kao 1972:800m

[a]The Lahu high-rising tone indicates that this was an originally stopped syllable with some kind of glottalized onset, perhaps ʔ-yak.

Chinese comparandum

亦 OC zi̱ăk, GSR #800a-c; Li 1971: rak; Baxter 1992: (*ljAk); B & S 2011: m-q(r)Ak; Schuessler 2007:568; Mand. yì.

掖 OC zi̱ăk, GSR #800m; Li 1971: rak; Baxter 1992: (*ljAk); B & S 2011: –; Schuessler 2007:568; Mand. yì.

These three characters are considered by GSR to represent the same lexical item.

ZJH: It seems likely, as noted in Handel 2009:133-5, that the Chinese word began with l- rather than Karlgren's z-, so that this word is a perfect match for the basic PTB root PTB lak rather than PTB yak. Schuessler (2007:568), who like Baxter (1992) reconstructs initial j-, compares this Chinese word instead to PTB (g-)yak just as Matisoff does here. Baxter & Sagart's most recent (2011) reconstruction, m-q(r)Ak, would seem to make the comparison to PTB problematic, but the general correspondence patterns of their uvular initial q- in Tibeto-Burman are unclear, so the possibility of a comparison of the root qAk to PTB g-yak is not out of the question (m- is a human body part prefix). Because Baxter and Sagart have not published a full explanation of their individual reconstructions, it is not clear why they have chosen to reconstruct q- for this word, but most likely it is because uvular initials are reconstructed for other words in GSR #800 and #954.

(1c) PTB *d-yak HAND / ARM / LEAF

The source of this prefix is a matter of speculation, but cf. the apparently prefixal dental that occurs before other roots referring to the upper limb in scattered TB languages: e.g. [Himalayish] WT dpuŋ 'shoulder'; [Qiangic] rGyalrong te*khlye 'upper arm'; [Asakian] Kadu ta*paung, *tə*hù 'arm', Sak ta*kú 'arm', Lui ta*khu 'arm'; [Naga] Ao Chungli te*ben 'arm', ta*shikang 'wing', Ao Mongsen tü*pen, *tü*cha 'arm', ta*cha 'wing', Yacham Tengsa ta*ka 'wing'; [Tani] Taraon ta:*lõ 'feather'.

We assign to this allofam reflexes with affricate initials (e.g. Tujia, Qiang, Naga).

The cluster dl- is not tolerated in most TB languages[*], so that the presence of the dental prefix has favored the palatalization of the root-initial lateral.

This allofam is the immediate source of the Karenic forms assembled below PKar *ʔde?^{D} WING (§1.5.1).

Forms from Northern Naga languages show initial variation among the simple palatal semivowel, dental stops, and palatal affricates: e.g. Tamlu bɯn-yak, Tangsa ^{3}pul-džak, and Nocte ^{1}ʌ-dʌk, all meaning 'leaf'. To Weidert belongs the credit for identifying the morphemic structure of these compounds as "tree-hand". For convenience's sake, we list all these forms under the present allofam.

6.1.1. Burmish

Burmese (Written)	gyak-kăli' ~ tshak-kăli' ~ lak-kăli'	armpit	Benedict 1972:265

[a] Note the assimilation of the medial consonants in rGyalrong jɐŋ mki.

Chinese comparandum

翼 OC *gi̱ək, GSR #954d 'wing'; Li 1971: (*rək); Baxter 1992 #469: lji̱k; B & S 2011: ɢrəp; Schuessler 2007:570; Mand. yì.

ZJH: As discussed in Handel 2009:133-134, if reconstructed with initial OC l- (a view shared by Schuessler 2007:570), this is a perfect match to PTB lak, a comparison that is preferable to d-yak. Chinese 翼 'wing' yì and 亦 'armpit' yì thus differ only in the reconstructed main vowel (ə vs. a), both of which correspond regularly to PTB a. The nature of the word-family relationship of the two words within Chinese is unclear.

Note that Baxter & Sagart (2011) reconstruct coda -p for 翼 yì, with "dialectal" development of -p to later -k, because they believe this is the same word as that written with the homophonous character 翌, also 'wing', which has phonetic 立 ending in -p. Their reconstruction would separate 翼 'wing' yì and 亦 'armpit' yì into two different Chinese words families, and preclude the comparison of the former to the lak/yak family of PTB arm/hand/wing roots.

(1d) PTB *dak ARM / HAND

The Nocte forms require no further comment. Of special interest is the Jingpho form lətá?, for which several explanations have been offered (cf. STC nn. 102, 109, 137). In my opinion, what happened was, after the obstruentization of original l to t in Jingpho, yielding ta?, the form was reprefixed by the general root lak, here reduced to lə. Note that in Jingpho, a secondary prefix lə- occurs in many verbs describing action with either the hands or the feet (see my portion of STC, n. 308 and O. Hanson 358-85). The Tangut and Ergong forms seem to have a similar origin.

Another explanation might be in terms of metathesis, d-lak > l-dak, in order to avoid the disfavored dl- cluster.

(1e) PTB *g-yak ARM / HAND / CUBIT

This allofam with velar prefix has been specialized semantically into the areas of armpits/tickling and cubits. Of particular interest is the triplet in WB below, reflecting three separate allofams of our etymon: the naked root in lak-kăli, the variant with dental prefix (written tshak-kăli in the transcription of STC but better interpreted as chak-kăli), and the present variant with velar prefix (gyak-kăli).

The Lahu form with voiced initial, jâ?, points to a variant with a nasal prefix, perhaps at the Proto-Loloish level.

There is a separate root 'right hand', reconstructed as g-ya ≍ g-ra in STC #98.

There is still another resemblant root g-ya TICKLE (STC #51) underlying WT gya-ba 'tickle, itch', Jingpho kəyá 'id.', WB yâb 'itch'.

腳/脚 OC kɨɑ̯k, GSR #776g-h 'leg, foot'; Li 1971: (*kjak); Baxter 1992: (*kjak); B & S 2011: s.kak, [k]ak; Schuessler 2007:309; Mand. jiǎo.

匊/掬 OC kɨə̯ôk, GSR #1017a,c 'both hands joined; grasp with both hands; double-handful'; Li 1971: (*kjəkw); Baxter 1992:770: k(r)juk; B & S 2011: (*k(r)uk); Schuessler 2007:–; Mand. jū.

JAM: GSR reconstructs this morpheme (翼), Mand. yì with initial gi̯-, but STC prefers di̯-, since the phonetic series (GSR #954) also contains 趩 t'i̯ə̯k/t̂'i̯ə̯k, Mand. chì 'sound of marching'. Baxter's (2011) reconstruction ɢrəp reverts to the interpretation with velar (actually postvelar) onset.

Benedict (p.c.) later agreed with the GSR reconstruction, assuming that it is underlain by an earlier gli̯ə̯k. He then derived the allofam in t'- from an alternant with prefixal s-, i.e. skɨə̯k, but this is not very convincing.

Yang 1980 suggests further Chinese comparanda: 腳/脚 OC kɨɑ̯k 'leg, foot', GSR #776g, Mand. jiǎo; and 匊/掬 OC kɨə̯ôk 'both hands joined; grasp with both hands; double-handful', GSR #1017a-c, Mand. jū.

ZJH: Of these four Chinese comparanda, only the first, 翼 yì 'wing', is defensible, although the more likely PTB comparandum is (g-)lak (Handel 2009:133-5). Both 趩 chì and 匊/掬 jū are impossible as they are not close in terms of sound correspondences; 腳/脚 jiǎo 'foot' is conceivable if we assume prefix-preemption of PST g-yak on the Chinese side, but the semantic shift makes this comparison speculative at best.

(1f) PTB *p-yak ARM

This allofam is represented principally by a single WT form with honorific meaning. The source of the labial prefix remains to be discovered. Jäschke (1881:347-8) gives 'bow, compliment, reverence' as an additional meaning. Whether this or 'hand' is the basic meaning is reminiscent of the phenomenon in the history of English whereby a verb meaning 'to pray' had its reference shifted by metonomy to 'bead used in prayer'. (OE gebed 'prayer' > ME bede, bead 'prayer, prayer bead, bead')

There are also good-looking Lepcha, Limbu, and Karbi cognates, as well as a convincing Chinese comparandum.

The Karbi variant with pak seems basically to mean 'leaf', or more generally 'flat object'. The Karbi morpheme -pak is glossed as 'num. part., flat things' (Walker 1925:119). See also PTB r-pak LEAF / LEAFLIKE PART / FLAT OBJECT (§1.5.5).

Chinese comparandum

臂 OC pi̯ĕg, GSR #853s 'arm'; Li 1971: (*pjigh); Baxter 1992: (*pjeks); B & S 2011: pek-s; Schuessler 2007:164; Mand. bì.

ZJH: The front vowel in Old Chinese would normally preclude a correspondence to PTB a. However, it can be noted that the bulk of the TB evidence points to e; Tibetan occasionally has (dialectally-influenced?) ya < e where we would normally expect e. (Tibetan also has (y)a < PTB e before dental codas, but that is not relevant here.) The comparison can stand, but only if the PTB form is reconstructed as pek, which would have a number of ramifications for the TB etymology, viz.: (1) Unless reconstructed pek ≍ pyak, the word-family connection to yak 'arm' would be harder to maintain; (2) the Karbi form ri-pak would have to be attributed entirely to a separate root r-pak 'leaf', with subsequent conflation within Karbi of pak and pek because of semantic and phonetic overlap. In short, the validity of this Chinese comparison is subject to the uncertainty of the PTB reconstruction stemming from the small number of identified reflexes.

(1g) PTB *la LEG / FOOT

As mentioned above, a number of languages have forms with open syllables and initial l-, y-, or d- with the meaning 'foot'. Although this might seem strange, it cannot be excluded that these etyma for hand and foot are somehow related. This is rather analogous to the situation with NOSE and EAR, which are reconstructed as s-na and r-na ≍ g-na, respectively.

The prefixal lə in Jingpho forms referring to the feet are assigned to this etymon, while similar referring to the hand are interpreted as deriving from PTB lak. This ambiguity is the result of the weakening of the rhyme in the prefixization process.

(2) PTB *k(r)u-t HAND / FIST / ARM

This widely distributed root appears in Kuki-Chin, North Assam, Himalayish, and perhaps Qiangic.

Several forms (Sulung geɻ^{33}, Kanauri khyuč, Sunwar guy, and Pattani guz̧) show palatalization of the final consonant.

A few other languages have forms with medial glides: Chepang krut, Kanauri khyuč, and Bunan khyutsi. Mru rut shows loss of the initial velar, so that the medial became the initial consonant. Several Himalayan languages have similar looking forms which are borrowings from Nepali pākhurā 'arm': Gurung pā:khruq, Thakali yā pākhura, and Sunwar pā:khrā:.

The second syllable of Magar mi-huṯ 'hand' might also descend from this etymon, but cf. Nepali hāt.

Many other forms show loss of the final t in compound-initial position, e.g. Lakher (Mara) ku paro; Lushai (Mizo) ku-tang; Meithei khudôn, etc.; Bunan khuṭub; and WT khu-tshur.

The Mongsen Ao form tə-khát or tükhet does not descend from this etymon, but rather from a totally distinct root PTB kat ONE (§9.9) (cf. STC p.94 and JAM 1995:3.12). Daniel Bruhn, based on a suggestion from T. Temsunungsang, points out a similar semantic development in Chungli Ao: kà 'one', tə́-kà 'hand' (cf. the next etymon). There is a fascinating parallel in Written Burmese: hnac 'two', khu' hnac 'seven', where the first syllable (under the creaky tone) seems likely to descend from this etymon, with the meaning 'five', pointing to a former quinary system of counting, as in modern Khmer. The semantic connection between the hand and the numeral five is also found in Austronesian (cf. Indonesian lima 'five, hand').

(4) PTB *wul HAND

This etymon seems valid, but has a restricted distribution, having been so far discovered only in Nungic and a single Naga language.

HPTB unwisely considered the present root (there reconstructed as ʔur) as being allofamic with PTB kwar HAND / WING (§1.5.1) (there reconstructed as kur). It now seems much more preferable to keep the two roots separate.

(7) PTB *g-wan HAND / WRIST / FIN

This etymon is represented in the Naga, Qiangic, and Himalayish branches. The Amdo (Bla-brang) form hwoŋ wa seems to represent a distinct root. The velar prefix is attested in both Ntenyi and Lepcha.

The second syllable of Ersu da^{55} vɛ^{55} n̥o^{33} looks like a possible reflex of this etymon, but vɛ^{55}n̥o^{55} is glossed as 'intestines'. However, the semantic development of HAND + INTESTINES > ARM seems quite implausible.

There is a good Chinese comparandum meaning 'wrist'.

[a]These forms coexist alongside akwang 'arm' (< PTB k(w)aŋ ARM (upper) / WING (§1.5.1)), demonstrating that these represent separate etyma.

Chinese comparandum

腕 OC ʔwân, GSR #260n 'wrist'; Li 1971: (*·uanh); Baxter 1992: (*ʔons); B & S 2011: * [ʔ] ʿo [r] -s; Schuessler 2007:582-3 (see 迂 below); Mand. wàn.

捥 OC ʔwân, GSR #260m 'wrist'; Li 1971: (*·uanh); Baxter 1992: (*ʔons); B & S 2011: * [ʔ] ʿo [r] -s; Schuessler 2007:–; Mand. wàn.

ZH: The Old Chinese words may have ended in -n or -r, which merge in later stages of Chinese; the brackets around r in Baxter & Sagart's (2011) reconstruction are meant to reflect these two possibilities. Bodman (1980:65) suggested a comparison with Old Tibetan 'khord 'to turn around' > WT 'khor and reconstructed OC skwars.

Schuessler 2007:582-3 instead derives the Chinese word for 'wrist' from an open-syllable root meaning 'bend' (迂, Mand. yū), with nominalizing suffix -n, an etymology unrelated to this PTB root.

OC forms reconstructed with o (wa in Karlgren and Li) should normally correspond to PTB o, not wa. But the support for this root in TB is sparse enough that a reconstruction with PTB o probably can't be ruled out; besides, comparisons involving zero or glottal initial may have different correspondences that remain to be clearly worked out.

(8) PTB *ban ARM / HAND / SHOULDER

The stronghold of this etymon is Kuki-Chin, with possible scattered cognates in Himalayish, as well as in Tujia.

Reflexes of this etymon never seem to mean 'wing'. For similar-looking reflexes with that meaning, see PTB m/s-pa WING / FEATHER (§1.5.1).

This root is phonosemantically similar to PTB pwaŋ ARM (upper) / SHOULDER (§1.5.1), but seems distinct from it. The final nasal in the present root is always -n, while that of PTB pwaŋ ARM (upper) / SHOULDER (§1.5.1) is always -ŋ.

(9) PTB *pow ARM / HAND

This etymon is attested in Jingpho, Lolo-Burmese, and perhaps in Qiangic.

There is a similar but distinct etymon PTB s-pu meaning WING / FEATHER.

[a]Note the destressing or "prefixization" of WB phə.

(10) PTB *k(w)aŋ ARM (upper) / WING

The Bodic forms listed here seem to exemplify this etymon, but there is a complication. WT goŋ basically means 'upper part' (Jäschke 1881:72), as in p'rag-goŋ 'upper arm' (p'rag 'shoulder'), bol-goŋ 'upper part of foot', k'a-lpags goŋ-ma 'upper lip'. Less obvious compounds with this morpheme are lha-goŋ 'larynx' and mur-goŋ 'temple'.

Cf. also PTB g-raŋ WING / HAND / ARM (§1.5.1).

Note the Jingpho doublet with final velar nasal sìŋ-kōŋ.

A number of other forms with velar initial and high back vowel are also candidates for assignment to this etymon, including (Asakian) Sak ta-kú, tăhù 'arm', Lui takhu, tahu 'arm'; (Kiranti) Limbu ku-lāp 'wing', ku-co 'feather'; also Chepang waʔ-ko 'small feather'.

There seems no reason to assign Proto Tani PTani m-kloŋ FEATHER / WING (§1.5.1) to this root since there seems to be no trace of a liquid medial.

9.0.1. OLD CHINESE
Chinese (Old/Mid)	kwəng/kwəng	arm, esp. upper arm from elbow to shoulder	Karlgren 1957:887a-e

[a] This Chang form perhaps represents a stop-final allofam of this root.

[b] WT dpuṅ-pa rkaṅ also means 'upper arm', but is to be analyzed as "shoulder's leg" (dpuṅ-pa 'shoulder'). Perhaps the girth of the upper arm reminded speakers of a leg.

[c] This word was originally glossed 'whole arm (shoulder to wrist)' during JAM's 1965-66 field trip, but was revised to 'narrow part of forearm where it joins the hand' when the data was revised on subsequent trips (cf. qɔ̄ 'neck'). Given the imprecision of body part terminology, it is very possible that both glosses are correct.

Chinese comparandum

肱 OC kwəng, GSR #887f 'arm, upper arm'; Li 1971: kwəng; Baxter 1992 #522: k^{w}iŋ; B & S 2011: [k]^{wʕ}əŋ; Schuessler 2007:256; Mand. gōng.

ZJH: Schuessler (2007:256) says this Chinese word "has apparently no outside cognate", and derives it from Chinese 弓 'bow (the weapon)', Mand. gōng. The proposed correspondence to PTB k(w)aŋ is reasonable on semantic and phonetic grounds, but the competing internal Chinese etymology must also be considered.

(11) PTB *pwaŋ ARM (upper) / SHOULDER

This root is well distributed in several subgroups, with a good Chinese comparandum. It frequently appears as the second member of compounds after reflexes of PTB lak. Semantically, it is firmly in the area of UPPER ARM rather than HAND.

Jingpho mə*bù? 'wing' (poetic couplet of sìŋkō) seems to point to an allofam with homorganic final stop, as is probably the case with the first syllable of Sangtam pük yang 'arm'.

Reflexes of this root are divided between plausible prototypes with -aŋ and those with a back vowel (-oŋ or -uŋ). Hence the reconstruction with -w-. For similar outcomes, cf. PTB dwaŋ WING / HAND (§1.5.1).

This root is phonosemantically similar to PTB ban ARM / HAND / SHOULDER (§1.5.1), but should be kept distinct from it.

9.0.3. Modern Chinese

Chinese (Mandarin)	chì bǎng	wing	Evans et al. 1991
	jiān bǎng	shoulder	Evans et al. 1991

Chinese comparandum

膀 ‘upper arms’; GSR: not in #740; Li 1971: (*bangx); Baxter 1992: (bangʔ); B & S 2011: ( [b] ʿaŋʔ); Schuessler 2007:170 (see below 膊); Mand. bǎng.

JAM: Yang 1980 cites 肩膀 ‘shoulder’ Mand. jiānbǎng and 翅膀 ‘wing’ Mand. chìbǎng, where the second element 膀 has the same phonetic as other members of GSR #740, with the basic meaning of SIDE. For instance:

房 OC b’iwɑng, GSR #740y ‘side-room’; Mand. fáng
旁 OC b’wɑ̂ng, GSR #740f’ ‘side, on all sides’; Mand. páng
傍 OC b’wɑ̂ng, GSR #740m’ ‘at the side of; assist’; Mand. bàng.

ZJH: 膀 bǎng is not attested in early Chinese sources, which is the reason it is not found in GSR or the other sources for OC reconstruction (the reconstructions I have provided may therefore be anachronistic); it is either an old colloquial/dialectal term that was not recorded in texts, or a later development within Chinese. Schuessler (2007:170) raises the possibility that it derives from Chinese 膊 *pâk ‘shoulder blade’ (Mand. bó). But in terms of semantics and phonetics, 膀 bǎng is a good match for the TB root.

(12) PTB *pum ARM / SHOULDER

This etymon looks rather similar to s-bwam PLUMP / SWOLLEN [STC #172] as well as to PTB bwap CALF / LEG (§1.1.5.2) [STC #30], since the bicep of the arm is protuberant like the calf of the leg. Cf. Mizo puam ‘swell’, pan-puam ‘muscle of upper arm’.

Both Meithei and Lui show assimilation of the final consonants of the first syllable (< PTB ban) to the initial of the second. The Liangmei form seems to show radical reduction of the first syllable to syllabic m, implying a two-stage development: assimilation to the initial of the second syllable, followed by reduction and prefixization of the first syllable.

[a] The initial nasal in this form is perhaps from the final consonant of a formerly preceding syllable (cf. the Rongmei and Meithei forms where the first syllable is to be assigned to PTB ban ARM / HAND / SHOULDER (§1.5.1)).
[b] Note assimilation of the medial consonants.
[c] The Lahu rhyme -ɛ is often from PL -um.
The putative Bisu and Phunoi reflexes of this weakly attested root show initial h- rather than a labial stop. If these are indeed valid reflexes, they would point to a development reminiscent of Old Japanese p- going to Modern Japanese h-.

(15) PTB *dwaŋ WING / HAND

This is the best attested root with the meaning WING. The reflexes vary between a low central and a mid back vowel, suggesting a prototype with labial medial dwaŋ. The two Black Lahu variants tō-làʔ-qú ~ tɔ̄-làʔ-qú reflect this: Lahu o frequently derives from -oŋ, while Lahu ɔ often derives from -aŋ. Similarly, Jingpho sùm thāŋ lə phùm 'arm' reflects -aŋ, while Jingpho dòŋ 'cubit' comes from -oŋ.

The Naxi and Zhaba forms reflect a variant with prenasalized initial.

There is an almost identical set of reflexes with the meaning CUBIT (see PTB dwaŋ CUBIT (§1.5.1)), which is undoubtedly related to the present root.

This root is to be distinguished from the phonologically similar PTB tuŋ KNEE / ELBOW (§1.5.8).

[a] This form shows an interesting semantic association between WING and EYELID, possibly because both of these body parts can flutter.

[b] The change du > bu is regular in Ersu. See Ersu bu^{33}mo^{55}/Lyuzu (TBL) du^{53}mu^{53} 'mad person'; Er. bu^{55}/Lz. (Mianning) 'du 'plow'; Er. jɑ^{33}bu^{55}/Lz. 'ʒduʒdu 'thick'; Er. bu^{55}tʂhɛ^{55}/Lz. dʐu^{53}tʂhɯ^{31} 'year'; and Er. bu^{55}phɑ^{55}/Lz. (Mianning) dʐyp^{h}æ 'stomach'. This development is plausibly to be explained in terms of assimilation to the rhyme -u which is realized as a bilabial trill in this environment (Dominic Yu, p.c.).

(16) PTB * m p s - l d ap ARM / HAND / WING

This well-established root is attested in the North Assam group and Himalayish. The basic allofam has a simple lateral initial, but several prefixes (p- and n-) are also attested. The initial is realized as a dental stop after the nasal prefix (see n-dap below). Possibly ultimately related is the root ya:p "wave, fan, paddle" [HPTB p.340]

There is a similar root PTB s-lap LEAF / LEAFLIKE PART (§1.5.5) (STC #321), with perhaps the same origin, the connection being the perceived flatness of leaves and wings.

(16a) PTB *lap WING / FEATHER

This root is perhaps allofamically related to PTB s-la LEAF / TEA / FLAT THING (§1.5.5).

Chinese comparandum

葉 OC dịɑp, GSR #633d 'leaf, foliage, generation'; Li 1971: rap; Baxter 1992 #1037: ljap; B & S 2011: l [a] p; Schuessler 2007:562; Mand. yè.

ZJH: The ordinary Chinese word for 'leaf' (葉 Mand. yè) is a likely cognate to this PTB root for 'wing'; the shape-based semantic connection is obvious. Furthermore, Schuessler (2007:562) notes that "In some southern dialects [of Chinese] 葉 also seems to be the word for 'wing'". Schuessler compares the Chinese to PTB lap 'leaf' (STC #321). It seems to me that PTB lap 'wing' and PTB lap 'leaf' are likely to be in the same word family, and that this Chinese word for 'leaf' is cognate.

(16b) PTB *s-lap WING / FLUTTER / EYELASH / GILL

There is perhaps a connection with PTB s-lyap LIGHTNING / FLASH / GLITTER / BUTTERFLY (§3.2.1) (STC #213). Cf. Lepcha lyop 'glitter, flash, glisten', where the medial -y- could be a reflex of the s- prefix. See Benedict 1943.

2.4. KHAM-MAGAR-CHEPANG

(16c) PTB *p- l y ap WING / FEATHER

The Tamangic forms have medial -y-, which appears to be secondary. It is possible that this -y- derives from earlier prefixal s- (see Benedict 1943, Secondary Infixation in Lepcha). Note the similar alternation between l- and y- in PTB lak HAND/LIMB (§1.5.1) and PTB d-yak HAND / ARM / LEAF (§1.5.1).

There is apparently no connection PTB (p/b)yam FLY (v.) (§6.7.5).

In Chepang, prefixal preemption has evidentally occurred, yielding an immediate antecedent pap. Chepang evidently shows a preemptive propensity; cf. Chepang pop 'lung' < PTB p-wap (VSTB 113-123).

(16e) PTB *m-dap WING / FEATHER

Written Tibetan has initial ḥd-; the a-chung prefix is usually realized as prenasalization in modern dialects (cf. e.g. Batang), and is probably responsible for the hardening of the lateral into a voiced stop (see Matisoff 2013, "The dinguist's dilemma").

(17) PTB *g-raŋ WING / HAND / ARM

This etymon is well-attested in North Assam, Northern Naga, Bodo-Garo, and Bodic. Darang shows preemption by the velar prefix.

This root is distinct from PTani m-kloŋ FEATHER / WING (§1.5.1).

Chinese comparandum

翔 OC dzi̯ɑng, GSR #732p 'roam back and forth; fly to and fro' ; Li 1971: (*rjang); Baxter 1992:797 z(l)jang; B & S 2011: s-[g] aŋ; Schuessler 2007:533; Mand. xiáng.

JAM: 翔 OC dzi̯ɑng 'go to and fro; fly backwards and forwards; soar; walk with elbows kept as outstretched wings' GSR #732p.

Yang 1980 reconstructs PST s-g/ki̯ang, since the same phonetic (羊) occurs in 姜 'surname' (Mand. jiāng), a word reconstructed with a velar initial as ki̯ɑng in GSR #711a.

ZJH: This Chinese word belongs to a phonetic series that presents unique challenges of reconstruction, as evidenced by the wide variation seen in the proposed reconstructions. Most words in the series suggest a lateral initial, but a few have velar initial; this is an atypical pattern. Li's reconstruction of rj- is the norm for words with Middle Chinese zj-, and makes a good match with the PTB syllable raŋ. But there is enough uncertainty about the Old Chinese to throw the comparison as a whole in doubt, especially since the Chinese meaning seems to have a semantic center closer to 'wander' than to 'wing' (contra the presence of the 'wing' element (羽, Mand. yǔ) in the written character).

Schuessler (2007:533) reconstructs "s-jaŋ or s-laŋ (?)" and places it in the same word family as 徉 'to walk irresolutely, wander', Mand. yáng.

(18) PTB *g-(t)syəw- {k, ŋ} WING / HAND

The nasal-final allofam of this widespread root is attested in Chepang and Nungic. Note the semantic association in Tibetan between WING and SIDE OF BODY. The velar prefix shows up in Tibetan and Qiangic.

It is sometimes difficult to distinguish reflexes of this etymon from those of PTB s/k-la ARM / HAND / WING (§1.5.1).

There is a Chinese comparandum.

Chinese comparandum

手 OC śi̯ôg GSR #1101a-b 'hand'; Li 1971/76: (*hrjəgwx); Baxter 1992 #274: hjuʔ; B & S 2011: n̥uʔ; Schuessler 2007:469; Mand. shǒu.

ZJH: Contra Karlgren's GSR reconstruction, this Chinese word certainly did not begin with a coronal fricative in Chinese. More recent scholarship shows that the initial was a voiceless resonant of some sort. The comparison with the PTB root is therefore unsustainable.

(19a) PTB *sya WING

This root bears a strong resemblance to PTB s/k-la ARM / HAND / WING (§1.5.1), but it remains to be seen whether they should be grouped into a single etymon.

The development of PTB sy- > PCN tʃh- is irregular.

	lhi^{2}	wing	Sofronov c1978
	ndzwɪ^{2}	wing	Sofronov c1978 [a]

[a] The immediate precursor of this form seems to have been something like m-tswa. This seems to be a legitimate doublet of lhi^{2}, from s-la. These two words are written with distinct characters (Matisoff 1985:436).

(20) PTB *ka-t WING / HAND

Like PTB k(r)u-t HAND / FIST / ARM (§1.5.1) above, this root seems to show a semantic connection with the numeral ONE: cf. Chungli Ao ka 'one', teka 'hand' and Lepcha kát 'one', ʔákâ 'hand'.

Yacham-Tengsa takhat and Ao (Mongsen) tükhet 'hand' seem to point to a dental suffix, which may well be the same element to be found in Newar lhā ≍ lhāt 'hand, arm'.

Sangtam khe and Lotha okhe 'hand' might also be reflexes of the suffixed version of this etymon.

(21) PTB *kwar HAND / WING

This root is found in the closely-related Tangut, Qiangic, and rGyalrongic branches, as well as in Himalayish, including Kiranti.

HPTB unwisely considered the present root (there reconstructed as kur) as being allofamic with PTB wul HAND (§1.5.1) (there reconstructed as ʔur). It now seems much more preferable to keep the two roots separate.

(22) PTB *m-kiŋ WING

The labial prefix is attested in Kuki-Chin and Naga. The Sema/Simi forms seem to show reduplication of the root. Palatalization of the initial has occurred in Nungic and Qiangic. The Wakung and Nungic forms provide evidence for the velar nasal final.

[a] There is some difficulty in interpreting these Naga forms from Weidert, since they are glossed literally as “one’s wing”.

(23) PTB * m / s -pa WING / FEATHER

This relatively sparsely attested root occurs especially in Qiangic with likely but scattered cognates in Kuki-Chin and Newar. Both the nasal and sibilant prefixes show up in Qiangic.

There is a possible etymological connection with PTB w(a/u) and PTB pʷu. See HPTB p. 165 and TBRS #1. For the interplay between labial stops and semivowel in Tibeto-Burman, see Matisoff 2000 (“An Extrusional Approach to p-/w- Variation in Sino-Tibetan”).

This root seems quite distinct from the Indo-Aryan derived IA pak WING / ARM (§1.5.1).

Chinese (Mandarin)	fɑ	hair	Karlgren 1957:276i

Chinese comparandum

髮 OC *__pi̯wăt__ 'head hair 'GSR #276i; Li 1971: pjat; Baxter 1992 #997: pjot; B & S 2011: –; Schuessler 2007:228-9; Mand. fǎ, fà.

肺 OC *__pwât__ 'small hairs on body' GSR #276f; Li 1971: (*bat); Baxter 1992: (*bat); B & S 2011: –; Schuessler 2007:228-9; Mand. bá.

The Chinese and Yakha forms suggest a possible allofam pwat.

ZJH: The OC vowel might be either *__a__ or *__o__; with a labial initial and dental coda, the developments to Middle Chinese are identical, making it difficult to determine the OC vowel with certainty. However, either reconstruction is problematic for a comparison with PTB *__u__. OC *__o__ does sometimes correspond to Tibetan u, but only in open syllables (where we find Burmese uiw, as in the well-known words for 'steal': 寇 OC *__k[hs]o-s__; WT rku; WB khuiw; Mand. kòu), and before velars (where we find Burmese o, as in 'torch, light, flame': 燭 OC *__tok__; WT dugs; WB tok; Mand. zhú). There is no evidence for anything other than a coda *__-t__ in Chinese, and no evidence for any kind of stop coda in the TB reflexes; the makes both the vowel and the coda problematic for cognacy. An internal Chinese derivation from 發 'come out; emit' (Mand. fā) is also possible for these Chinese words (Schuessler 2007:228-9).

A comparison of the Chinese to WT phud 'hair-knot' is tempting given the dental coda, but OC *__o__ does not correspond to Tibetan u before dentals.

(25) PTani *m-kloŋ FEATHER / WING

This root is well-attested in the North Assam group, although there is no Proto-Tani reconstruction in J. Sun 1993.

The interesting Idu forms perhaps include what we have called "incestuous compounds", where two members of the same word family cooccur, one with a velar cluster and one with a simple lateral. The resemblance between these forms with velar clusters and PTB *__g-raŋ__ WING / HAND / ARM (§1.5.1) seems to be fortuitous.

(26) PTB *tir FEATHER / WING

Although this root is of quite limited distribution, the exact but unusual rhyme correspondence between Thulung and Nungic inspires confidence that this is a genuine etymon.

The first syllable of Rengma te ro ha 'feather' looks related but it might mean 'bird' (cf. tegü or tegvu 'bird'). Cf. PTB daw BIRD (§2.1.10) (STC pp. 149, 192), attested otherwise only in Bodo-Garo and Karenic.

This etymon is usually found as the last element of compounds, but appears as an independent monosyllable in Kham. The nasal prefix is attested in Simi, while the s- prefix is reflected in the Nungic words for 'finger'.

(30) PTB *w $\begin{matrix}\text{a}\\\text{u}\end{matrix}$ BIRD / EGG / WING / FOWL

This etymon definitely shows variation between -a- and -u-, undoubtedly because of the rounding power of initial w-. As in many other TB etyma, there is also variation between the labial semivowel and labial stops. Cf. PTB p^{w}u EGG / BIRD / ROUND OBJECT (§1.9.1) (TBRS #1).

This etymon appears as first element in a number of Kuki-Chin binomes, e.g., PKC wa-huy PIGEON (§2.2.4), PKC wa-kok ≍ -ʔok HORNBILL (§2.2.4), etc.

[a] Comparison with other Qiangic forms indicates that the final -s in Yadu is a truncated verson of stə or stu. This apocopation of the vowel of second elements in compounds is characteristic of Qiangic. See Benedict (1983), "Qiang monosyllabization: a third phase in the cycle" (LTBA 7.2:113-4).

(32) PTB *$\begin{matrix}\mathbf{p}\\\mathbf{b}\end{matrix}$ lyaŋ PLANK / PALM / FLAT SURFACE / WING

This phonologically distinctive root has so far been uncovered only in a few Himalayan languages.

There is a closely similar root meaning PALM in several Kiranti languages, which seems rather to be related to *pleŋ ‘flat surface; plank; slab’ (STC #138).

As discussed in Matisoff 1988 (“Straight, flat, full”), this root is allofamically related both to PTB *(p/b)liŋ FULL / FILL (§1.1.3.2) and PTB *(p/b)lyaŋ STRAIGHT / STRAIGHTEN (§7.1.5), the common semantic core being “a complete or ideal realization of a quality appropriate to a particular dimensionality in space”.

(33) PTB *mu: $\begin{matrix}\mathbf{k}\\\mathbf{ŋ}\end{matrix}$ ARM / CUBIT

Most reflexes of this etymon (possibly including WB muik) have a final velar stop, but other Burmese forms point to an allofam with final velar nasal. Several Himalayish languages of Nepal have borrowed an accidentally similar Indo-Aryan root with the meaning ‘fist’: Kanauri muṭhu, mŭṭṭhu, Chantyal murki, Kham mutka < cf. This root is reconstructed for SE Kiranti. A previous reconstruction by Baxter for Chinese 手 looks quite similar to these Kiranti forms, see PTB g-(t)syəw-k/ŋ WING / HAND (§1.5.1) for more discussion on this Chinese comparandum. Baxter and Sagart's more recent reconstruction is OC *n̥uʔ.

1.5.1.2.3 Underarm/Armpit

(1) PTB *g-li-k ARMPIT / TICKLE

This "funny" root is quite well attested in several branches of the family, usually as a sesqui- or disyllable. Several languages (Ao, Bisu, Magar) show a variant with final velar stop, while others (WB, Gurung) show some sort of laryngeal feature after the vowel.

Yang 1985 cites several extra-TB lookalikes: Khmer kliək, Indonesian ketiak 'armpit', Cham kəlĕk 'tickle'. See also Benedict 1975a:410 ("Austro-Thai Language and Culture, with a glossary of roots").

[a] The first syllables of this important triplet represent three separate allofams of the first etymon in this study: gyak < PTB g-yak ARM / HAND / CUBIT (§1.5.1), tshak (also transcribable as chak < PTB d-yak HAND / ARM / LEAF (§1.5.1), and lak < PTB lak HAND/LIMB (§1.5.1).

[a] The Lahu high-rising tone indicates that this was an originally stopped syllable with some kind of glottalized onset, perhaps ʔ-yak.

1.5.2 Foot

(1a) PTB *r-k(y)aŋ FOOT / LEG

This etymon bears a strong resemblance to PTB r-kwa(ŋ) FOOT (§1.5.2), and should perhaps ultimately be combined with it.

1.5.2.1 Heel

NOTE that words for 'heel' are sometimes collocations of FOOT + EGG or FOOT + BUTTOCK.

(1) PTB *tsyu HEEL

The last syllable of the Lahu form khɨ-mē-*cu 'heel' also occurs in làʔ-mē-*cu 'elbow' and qhɔ-*cu 'hill, mountain peak', and seems to mean "rounded object". (The form cwi is a more colloquial variant of cu. See GL:19.)

Further confirmation of this root would be welcome.

STC #418 reconstructs pwa or bwa. A similar but probably distinct root is PTB r-pak LEAF / LEAFLIKE PART / FLAT OBJECT (§1.5.5), which underlie forms like Mizo kut-pha? 'palm', ke-pha? 'sole' and Karbi ri-pak ~ ri-pek 'palm', keŋ-pak 'sole'.

For now, we are treating the Proto-Tani form as a reflex of this root.

[*] I do not understand why Baxter & Sagart (2011) reconstruct a cluster k.t- instead of plain t- here. Their notation with a period (as opposed to a hyphen as in k-t-) indicates that they have no evidence for a morphological prefix k-, but I don't see any motivation for reconstructing a purely phonological pre-initial element k.

	ʨɭ^{34}-n̥ɔ^{33}-tsɭ^{55}	ankle	CHEN Shilin & LI Min, et al., eds. 1979

[a] This form has perhaps been mis-glossed, in view of the fact that this morpheme means 'joint' in the other rGyalrong forms.

Chinese comparandum

韠 OC pi̱ĕt, GSR #407m 'knee cover'; Coblin 86:101 pjit; B & S 2011: pit {pi [t] }; Mand. bì.
韍 OC pi̱wət, GSR #276l 'knee cover'; Coblin 86:101 ST pjut > OC piət > pjwət; Mand. fú.
市 OC pi̱wət, GSR #501a-b 'knee cover'; Mand. fú.
芾 OC pi̱wət, GSR #501c 'knee cover'; Mand. fú.

The primary comparanda here are 韠 bì and 韍 fú, which are allofamic in OC.

The ideograph 市 fú meaning 'knee cover' apparently antedates 韍 fú, but the latter eventually became the predominant form. Likewise, the ideograph 芾 fú was optionally a loan character for 市 fú (see note, GSR #501c).

(1b) PTB *pu KNEE

There is a possible connection between this allofam of the etymon and PTB pu EGG (§1.9.1), owing to the ball-like appearance of the patella.

1.5.9.2 Left

(1) PTB *b(w)ay LEFT (HAND)

This etymon is certainly co-allofamic with PTB (p/b)a:y LAME / LIMP / ASKEW (§1.5.12), via a set of semantic associations familiar from Western languages, where left-handedness has been regarded as “gauche” or “sinister”.

HPTB pp. 219, 510 ill-advisedly reconstructs an allofam r-bi(y) to account for Karbi ar-vi, though STC correctly assigns it to the general b(w)ay etymon.

W.T. French 1983:445 sets up a Proto Northern Naga root pha:y AFTER (> e.g. Chang pai ‘backwards, behind’), which he also suggests to be related to the notions of LEFT and LAME / LIMP. (See PNN p^{h}a:y AFTER (§9.1.5).)

A number of Nungish and Qiangic forms with velar + labial clusters must also reflect this root. If we were to set up an allofam gway, this would be tantamount to admitting this root into the select company of etyma with *labiovelar initials like DOG, NEST, COMB, TRUMPET, etc.

[a] Benedict proposes a development from PLB lak-bai > laŋ-wai > mai > mɛ̄. This analysis implies that there was a subsequent re-compounding of this mɛ̄ with the morpheme làʔ 'hand'.

[a] [Source Note] (< phai 'go aside') (Benedict 1976).

(1) PTB *m-twa HANDSPAN

This root is extremely well established, with an impressive cognates even in Baic and Karenic. Several forms (Lyuzu, Ersu, and Southern Tujia) have affricated initials, which bear some resemblance to Mandarin Chinese zhǎ 拃, although the latter shows no sign of a labial medial.

1.5.10 Nail

(1) PTB *m-(t)sin NAIL / CLAW

This root was originally reconstructed as m-(t)sin in STC #74, with the remark that the PTB initial was "uncertain". The reconstruction was revised to m-tsyen in note 24, expanded in note 122 (p. 37).

Several allofams must be posited: one with final -l (PTB m-tsyal NAIL / CLAW (§1.5.10)), one with an open syllable (PTB m-tsyey NAIL / CLAW (§1.5.10)), and one where the nasal prefix seems to have preempted the affricate initial (PTB m-(y/r)in NAIL / CLAW (§1.5.10)).

A number of languages have reduced the initial affricate to a simple fricative, hence the parentheses around the t in the PAF.

This root bears a strong phonosemantic resemblance to PTB pit NUMB (§1.5.11), and perhaps should be considered part of the same etymon.

1.5.12 Lame/Limp

(1) PTB * p/b a:y LAME / LIMP / ASKEW

W.T. French 1983:503 reconstructs Proto Northern Naga ba:y with the meaning JUMP, clearly a related notion to LAME / LIMP in the sense that special movements of the lower limbs are involved.

This etymon is certainly co-allofamic with PTB b(w)ay LEFT (HAND) (§1.5.9.2), via a set of semantic associations familiar from Western languages, where left-handedness has been regarded as "gauche" or "sinister".

Chinese comparandum

The following set of Chinese etyma is offered on the basis of discussion in Schuessler 2007:158-9, 170-71 et pass; (also see Matisoff 1995: ST Palatal Suffixes Revisited). These etyma can be considered allofams within Chinese, as well as primary comparanda for PTB (p/b)a:y on both phonological and semantic grounds:

跛 OC pwâ, GSR #25m 'walk lame'; Schuessler 2007:171 pâiʔ; B & S 2011: pˤajʔ; Mand. bǒ.
頗 OC p'wâ, GSR #25p 'slanting, oblique, perverse'; Schuessler 2007:158 phâi; Mand. pō.
坡 OC (p'wâ), (not in GSR #25) 'slope, slanted'; Schuessler 2007:158 phâi; Mand. pō.
陂 OC piɑ, GSR #25i 'river bank, dike'; Schuessler 2007: pai; B & S 2011: paj {p(r)a [j] }; Mand. bēi, bī.
詖 OC piɑ, GSR #25h 'biased, insincere'; Schuessler 2007:158 paih; Mand. bì.

1.6.1 Body Hair/Fur

(1) PTB * s/r -mul ⪤ *s-mil ⪤ *s-myal HAIR / FUR / FEATHER

Although a number of rGyalrongic forms apparently descend from this root, many others are better assigned to a prototype with front vowel, i.e. PTB r-(n/m)ey HAIR OF HEAD (§1.2.3).

[a] Moshang kə looks as if it is a reduction of PTB m/s-gaw HEAD (§1.2.1) (cf. ku mul), but the gloss seems to show that it is body hair, not head hair, that is referred to.

[a] The denasalization of m- to p- in Chepang pulʔ is undoubtedly due to assimilation to the preceding consonant.

[a] Lit. "ear-hair"
[b] Lit. "goat-beard" (cf. English 'goatee', for a similar semantic association between goats and facial hair).

(1b) PTB *mum CHIN / BEARD

This root seems definitely to stand in an allofamic relationship with PTB s/r-mul ⩙ s-mil ⩙ s-myal HAIR / FUR / FEATHER (§1.6.1), with the final -m perhaps due to assimilation to the initial.

The phonological resemblance to PTB m-ʔum ⩙ mum HOLD IN MOUTH / CHEW / EAT / KISS (§1.9.4) seems accidental.

Chinese comparandum

奭 OC χi̱ək ~ (śi̱ĭk), GSR #913a ‘majestic, red’; B & S 2011: qʰək {qʰək} ~ qʰak {qʰAk}; Mand. shì.

Comment: The primary comparanda here are 赤 chì and 赫 hè. OC sources yield conflicting reports as to the exact reconstruction of 奭 shì, and whether 赫 and 奭 represent two separate etyma or are graphic substitutes one for another instead (see e.g. Karlgren’s remarks in GSR #913a; discussion in Schuessler 2007:188-9). These issues, however, do not detract from the validity and overall usefulness of the comparandum at hand. [SPB]

1.6.2.1 Blood Vessel/Vein/Artery

(1) PKC *tha-ruy ≍ *-hruy VEIN / ARTERY / SINEW

The first syllable of this PKC binome is to be assigned to PTB r-sa VEIN / SINEW / INTERNAL CHANNEL / PULSE (§1.6.6). The morphemic identity of the second syllable is yet to be determined.

1.6.3 Bone

BONE ——— HARD OBJECT

Note that quite a number of Himalayish languages have borrowed Nepali hāD (hāḍ) ‘bone’ for words for ‘bone’ and ‘rib’. See Turner p. 807, who reconstructs haḍḍa- (Ass. hār; Beng. hāṛ) and notes that the “connection with aṣṭhi very doubtful”.

(1) PTB *$\begin{matrix}\textbf{s}\\\textbf{m}\\\textbf{g}\end{matrix}$-rus BONE

A few languages (Jingpho, Ntenyi, Puiron, Rongmei) have developed a nasal prefix in this root. Many others reflect the s- prefix, so characteristic of Tibeto-Burman animal and body part names (< PTB sya).

(2) PTB *g-r {w/y} a {ŋ/k} BONE / SKELETON

Note the superficial similarity between this genuine TB etymong-ryaŋ and the Nepali word karang 'rib'. While Dimasa sang-khreng 'rib' and Lalung krengʔ 'bone' are descended from g-ryaŋ, Chantyal kərəŋ and Yakha karaŋ are borrowings from Nepali.

The Karbi forms show preemption by the velar prefix.

The Miji and Darang forms reflect an s- prefix.

(3) PTB *g-ra-t BONE

There are several Tujia forms with initial velar (e.g. si^{3}lu^{1}*ga^{1} 'pig's bone', lu^{1}*ga^{1} 'bone'), which might belong to this root, if we assume preemption by the prefix. On the other hand, we are considering the Bai forms to descend from this etymon on the strength of the -w- medial.

Jingpho has developed a nasal prefix with this root.

Chinese comparandum

呂 / 吕 OC gli̱o, GSR #76a-c 'spine; pitchpipe'; Schuessler 2007:367 raʔ; B & S 2011: raʔ {[r] aʔ}; Mand. lǚ.
梠 OC gli̱o, GSR #76e-f 'beam supporting rafters of a roof'; Schuessler 2007:367 raʔ; B & S 2011: (raʔ {[r] aʔ}); Mand. lǚ.
旅 OC gli̱o, GSR #77a 'arrange in a series; one after another; troops, multitude'; Schuessler 2007:367 raʔ; B & S 2011: raʔ {[r] aʔ}; Mand. lǚ.

Comment: The etymon above glossed 'arrange in a series...', etc. is apparently the earliest to be associated with the graph 旅 lǚ in Chinese. The same graph, 旅, was later borrowed to represent another, unrelated etymon glossed 'guest, stranger, ... lodging', which is also a comparandum for PTB d-gra STRANGER / ENEMY (§4.4.3).

Note that the graph 膂 (GSR #77e), Mand. lǚ, is essentially the same etymon as 旅, with the same OC reconstruction.

(4) PTB *g-du(ŋ) BONE

Karbi kang-duk 'cartilage' possibly reflects a stopped allofam of this root.

The second syllable of Jingpho di-rung 'bridge of nose' looks temptingly similar to this root, although the development of PTB d- > Jingpho r- is not otherwise attested.

(4) PTB *bu(r) FAT / FATTY (MEAT)

The final -r in this root is so far only attested in Nungic and Tangkhulic. The reconstruction of the rhyme needs further evaluation. In particular, some of the forms with open syllables might be better assigned to #163.

Note the striking similarity of the Dulong form to Karlgren's OC reconstruction b'i̯wər.

(6) PTB *di FAT

This root closely resembles PTB tsil FAT (n.) / GREASE / OIL (§1.6.4), but Magar si-di (where the first syllable is assigned to tsil) seems to indicate that two separate roots are involved.

1.3.1. Central Naga (Ao Group)

3.2. Qiangic
Qiang (Mawo)	zdi	fat	Sun 1986 [a]
9.0.1. Old Chinese
Chinese (Old/Mid)	di̱u/i̱u	fat on belly; intestines; fat; fat on belly, intestines, fat	Chou Fa-kao 1972; Karlgren 1957:126e
	di̱ər/i	fat (over the stomach)	Chou Fa-kao 1972:551

[a]This form bares a suspicious resemblance to Qiang (Mawo) zda, which has been assigned to PTB s-da FAT (§1.6.4). However, since the Qiangic languages have a strong tendency to develop the high front vowel i from PTB a, a phenomenon which has been referred to as "brightening", these two Mawo forms may actually one and the same etymon.

(7) PTB *s-n $\frac{u}{a}$ m FAT

This root seems to show vowel gradation. For a similar pattern of variation, see PTB b-s(u/a)ŋ SMELL / SCENT / FRAGRANT (§1.2.8.5) and PTB s-l(a/u)p FAT (§1.6.4).

(2) PTB *s-mar GOLD / YELLOW / BUTTER / OIL

The s- prefix is reconstructed here on the basis of the Newar and the Nusu (Central) forms.

Many forms, especially in Qiangic, Tamangic, and Tani, seem to be borrowings from Tibetan.

Cf. also PTB mwa-ŋ FAT (§1.6.4).

For the semantic connection between YELLOW and BUTTER, cf. Mandarin □□ huángyóu 'butter' (literally, "yellow oil").

1.6.5 Skin

THE fact that so many roots can be reconstructed for SKIN is undoubtedly due to the wide variety of associations this concept has with other points in semantic space: human, animal, and vegetable. The notion of outer covering is equally applicable to the skin of humans, the hide of animals, the bark of trees, the rind of fruits, the husks of corn, or the shells of nuts.* Since several sub-parts of the body have their own skin-like coverings, morphemes for SKIN appear in many compound words for such specialized body-parts as eyelids, lips, and foreskins. A further semantic chain leads from the body-part to the associated verb, TO SKIN/REMOVE THE SKIN. Semantic flowcharts provide a visual representation of SKIN and related concepts; the associations with SKIN are in fact so complex that two flowcharts are given.

Etyma in this semantic area are reconstructed with widely different degrees of certitude, ranging from the rock-solid to the shaky. They are presented below roughly in the order of the strength of their attestations.

(1) PTB * $\begin{matrix}\mathbf{m}\\\mathbf{s}\end{matrix}$ -k-rəy SKIN

The nasal prefix is well-attested in Loloish and Qiangic. It appears overtly in many Northern Loloish languages, and indirectly in e.g. the Lahu voiced initial.

(2) PTB * $\frac{s}{r}$ -kawk ≍ * $\frac{s}{r}$ -kwak OUTER COVERING / SKIN / BARK / RIND

See kok STC #342 and n. 229. The allofam with medial labial is reconstructed on the basis of the Chourasya, Thulung, and rGyalrong forms. The r- prefix is reconstructed based on the rGyalrong forms. The initial reflexes of this etymon vary from k- to h-.

The WB form cannot descend from the variant with medial -wa-, since that would have given WB -wa-.

[a]Pa-O khɔ̀k likely a borrowing from Burmese khauk 'skin'. Pa-O has glottal stop as the regular reflex of all proto-Karen final stops. Pa-O final oral stops occur largely (though not entirely) in loans from Shan and Burmese.

Chinese comparanda

革 OC kɛk, GSR #931a-b 'hide, skin'; WHB-OC #1325; Li 1971: krək; Baxter 1992: krɨk > Mand. gé 'leather'.

The reconstructed PTB form has a rounded element, reflected either in the main vowel (o) or in the medial (w). The Chinese form must be reconstructed without a rounded element. The correspondences of initial consonant, main vowel, and final consonant are regular (including the vowel correspondence PTB a : OC ə).

Generally, we expect to see OC medial -r- corresponding to PTB -r-. However, there are some proposed cognates in which PTB prefixal r- before velars appears to correspond to medial -r- in OC, for example PTB r-kang 'shin': OC 胻 grangs 'shinbone', Mand. héng (for more details, see Handel 2009:188, 190-1). Whether this indicates that metathesis has taken place in one or both languages, or that additional variants of the root existed, is not clear.

鞹 OC k'wâk, GSR #774h-i 'leather'; Coblin 86:134 ST khwak > OC khwak; Schuessler 2007:341 khwâk; B & S 2011: (k^{wh}ˤak); Mand. kuò.

Bodo-Garo has developed voiced initials in this root, and also shows its typical medial -u- ⋉ -i- alternation, leading to a possible Proto Bodo-Garo reconstruction gul ⋉ gil.

(4) PTB *p^{w} i/u l/n SKIN

Like other roots reconstructed with p^{w}-, the reflexes of this etymon vary between labial stops and w-, v-, or zero initial.[*] This root also shows the widespread Tibeto-Burman patterns of variation between medial -i- and -u-, and between final -l and -n.

A key doublet justifying this reconstruction are the Lushai (Mizo) forms pil and vun, both cited in Marrison 1967:233.

The Sunwar forms with initial s- and final -l (’ku-sul ‘skin’, ’sul-cā ‘feel (by touch)’, kru*sul ‘bark (of tree)’, ku*sul* ’u:-cā ‘skin’) might also be related, if we assume an intermediate form like *s-wul. Cf. also French’s (1983) Proto-Northern-Naga reconstructions wur SKIN and swun FLESH.

(6) PTB *d(y)al LIP / SKIN

See HPTB pp. 405-6.

The final liquid in this root is well-attested: directly in Mizo, Garo, Khaling, and Tangut, and indirectly by Jingpho final -n.

The first syllables of a pair of forms from the North Assam group (Darang thɯ^{55} no^{55}, Idu tia^{35} ndze^{55} ‘lip’) look rather like the reflexes of this etymon, but they appear to represent a body part prefix which occurs in several other words related loosely to MOUTH: Darang t^{h}ɯ^{31} liɯŋ^{53} nɑ^{35} ‘tongue’, t^{h}ɯ^{31} ɹɯm^{53} m̥^{55} ‘beard’, t^{h}ɯ^{31} tiɑ^{55} ‘chin’, Idu tia^{35}pɹa^{35} ‘tooth’.

(7a) PTB *kwap SKIN / LIP / SCALES (fish) / SHELL

This etymon is probably related to PTB (g/k)wap HATCH / INCUBATE / COVER (§6.13). Cf. e.g. Ao (Chungli) si küp ‘skin’, küp bang ‘cover (v.)’. Jingpho ǹ-gùp ‘mouth’, despite its resemblance to Kaman gùp ‘skin’ and a possible semantic connection with LIP, is only a remote candidate for relationship.

In several putative cognates (see Yakha, Achang, and perhaps Ahi and Lolopho) this etymon means ‘scales of fish’.

See also PTB krap SHELL / SHIELD (§1.6.5) for a phono-semantically similar but probably distinct root.

A number of supporting forms for this etymon have fricative initials h- or f-. Interplay between laryngeal and velar initials is a common phenomenon in TB; see Matisoff 1997:33 ("Primary and secondary laryngeal initials in TB") and HPTB:54-58. Lepcha a-šî looks like a possible reflex of this root, but the lack of a final -p is a problem. This root was formerly reconstructed as sep (HPTB:376).

The final velar in the Limbu form is unexplained.

(11) PTB *p $\frac{r}{y}$ a SKIN

Tamangic points to a possible connection between this etymon and the concept FLAT. Cf. Thakali (Tukche) 'plja-lɔ 'flatten dough (with roll)'.

The allofam with medial -y- is reconstructed because of vowel fronting in several forms (Pattani, Tshona, Lepcha, Thakali). There are two possible Chinese comparanda (see below).

Chinese comparanda

膚 OC pli̱wo, GSR #69g 'skin'; WSC-SH:134; WHB-OC #1367; Schuessler 2007:243. Li 1971 pjag; Baxter 1992: prja > Mand. fū.

皮 OC b'iɑ, GSR #25a-c 'skin'; WHB-OC:1057; Li 1971: bjiar; Baxter 1992: b(r)jaj > Mand. pí.

The form written 膚 likely reflects the Chinese root, with the form written 皮 derived from it by a prefix that voiced the labial initial (as well as by an unexplained change to the coda). The most likely prefix is m-, which is found in a number of OC words for human body parts and is cognate to the PTB prefix m- having a similar function. In their latest system, Baxter and Sagart reconstruct this prefix in words for 'nose', 'belly', 'head', and 'right hand', as well as 'skin'. The OC pronunciation of 皮 can be reconstructed as m-pra-j, with root pra. (See Sagart & Baxter 2010.)

Ignoring the medial -j- (whose existence in OC is increasingly discounted, and which does not correspond regularly to anything in PTB), the correspondences between the variant PTB form pra and the OC root are regular.

(12) PTB *l-pak SKIN

Several forms from Tibetan dialects show lenition of the initial to w-. For the widespread TB variation between labial stops and w-, see Matisoff 2000, "An extrusional approach to p-/w- variation in Sino-Tibetan".

(13) PTB *p(y)ik SKIN / PEEL

Several Bodo-Garo forms begin with a syllable bi(ŋ), which superficially resembles this root. However, R. Burling points out that this is merely a prefix which occurs with many body part terms, e.g. Garo bi-bik 'intestines', bi-bil 'afterbirth', bi-gil 'skin; bark; peel; pod; leather', bi-gron 'testicle', bi-ka 'liver', bi-kit 'gall bladder', bi-mang 'body of person or thing; shape, form; middle portion of an object, such as a glass', bi-rot 'pimple, boil, pox'; also Meche biŋgur, bigur 'skin'. See Burling 2003.

The first syllables of Tshona (Mama) phe[55] khu[53] 'skin' and WT p'yi srin 'vermin living on skin' also superficially resemble this etymon, but are really a different morpheme meaning 'outside'. See Jäschke (1881:348-50). Thus, 'vermin living on skin' means lit. "outside vermin".

A few Karenic forms (Pa-O 'beŋ[1], Pho (Delta) ɓẽ[4], Sgaw ɓẽ[4] 'skin, bark') point to a final nasal, but these could well reflect a different etymon. The morphemic identity of the second syllables of Karen (Sgaw/Hinthada) a[31] bę̱[31] and p[h]i[55] bę̱[31] 'skin' remains obscure.

(14) PTB *bak STRIP OFF

This root is so far sparsely attested, with support only from Lahu and Chinese. The voiced Lahu initial points to a PLB prenasalized consonant mb-.

6.1.2.2. CENTRAL LOLOISH
Lahu (Black)	bàʔ	slice/cut into lengths; cut into boards	Matisoff 1988a:933; Matisoff 1972b:111(d)

	bʌ^{21}	cut (firewood)	SUN Hongkai et al. 1991:604.33
9.0.1. OLD CHINESE
Chinese (Old/Mid)	pŭk	cut, flay, peel; lay bare	Karlgren 1957:1228a

[a] Lahu bà means 'throw away' in isolation, but as an auxiliary verb means 'to perform an action so that something is gotten rid of'. See HPTB, p. 231.

Chinese comparandum

剥 OC pŭk, GSR #1228a 'cut, flay, peel'; WHB-OC 544; Schuessler 157; Li: pruk; Baxter: prok > Mand. bō ~ bāo.

The poor vowel correspondence, and the lack of a directly attested -r- on the TB side,[*] cast doubt on the proposed cognate, but more TB support for the root would be necessary to reconstruct a reliable PTB root and fully evaluate the connection.

Schuessler cites Manomaivibool 1975:120 and relates the Chinese word to Thai pɔɔk^{D1} 'to peel' and Thai lɔɔk^{D2} 'to skin, peel' ⩤ plɔɔk^{D1} 'encasement, slipcover, sheath' < PTai dlɔɔk.

(15) PTB *pu RIND / SHIELD / SKIN (n.)

This root occurs mostly in Kuki-Chin (cf. PKC phoo VanBik 2009:#353), but also apparently in Nungic and Loloish. The semantics of this root are interesting, since the skin is here conceived of as a protection or shield from the outside world.

[a] According to Judson, Written Burmese yam is a loanword from Pali, meaning 'division; watch of the night' (cf. Lahu yâ(n) 'time' < Shan < Burmese), but the other Burmish forms, as well as those from Himalayish languages, suggest that this may actually reflect a PTB root.

(20) PTB *s-lwa SKIN

This root resembles PTB s-lwap SKIN (§1.6.5), and Phunoi seems to show variation between an open and a stopped reflex. We tentatively include the Phunoi forms under this open syllable etymon because Phunoi does preserve PTB -p.

(24) PTB *tsəw SKIN

This tentatively reconstructed root is largely restricted to the final syllables of Loloish compounds, with a possible cognate from Kulung.

Baima ʃhɑ[53] pɑ[53] 'skin' (Sun 1991, "Body Parts Questionnaire") and Tamang (Sahu) grahm-pa-sa 'lip' and sya 'skin' (Taylor et al. 1972: 1.28, 2.24) look suspiciously like Baima shɑ[13] kɛ[35] 'flesh, meat' and Tamang (Sahu) ra sya 'meat', suggesting that these syllables derive from PTB sya-n FLESH / MEAT / GAME ANIMAL (§1.1.1), rather than from the present etymon.

Several forms with initial palatal sibilants are assigned by W. T. French to PNN Ç-k[h]uar, which we in turn assign to PTB kur ≍ *kwar SKIN (§1.6.5).

(25) PTB *kwaŋ SKIN

This root is distinct from PTB kur ≷ kwar SKIN (§1.6.5). Cf. Lalung khong? 'skin' (from the present etymon) vs. kur 'skin' and mokun 'eyelid' (from gul). Neither does there seem to be a connection between this root and PTB s/r-kawk ≷ s/r-kwak OUTER COVERING / SKIN / BARK / RIND (§1.6.5). The second syllable of Lahu mâ-*qɔ 'lip' might well be derived from PLB ʔgaŋ, but this syllable also appears in several other words (mɔ̀ʔ-qɔ 'mouth', làʔ = tɔ-qɔ 'palm of the hand', mû-lɔ̀ʔ-qɔ 'daytime; afternoon'), and is glossed 'noun formative of elusive meaning' in Matisoff 1988:250. See PTB kwaŋ MOUTH (§1.3.1), to which we temporarily assign Lahu 'mouth'.

1.6.6 Obscure Internal Channels

(1) PTB *r-sa VEIN / SINEW / INTERNAL CHANNEL / PULSE

This root is distinct from PTB sya-n FLESH / MEAT / GAME ANIMAL (§1.1.1), although words meaning MUSCLE are sometimes assignable to it, since the bulging contour suggests the meaning FLESH. The general meaning of PTB r-sa VEIN / SINEW / INTERNAL CHANNEL / PULSE (§1.6.6) refers to body parts of rather obscure function that extend throughout the body. (These were referred to as "obscure internal channels and connections" or OICCs in VSTB.) The Karbi form artho, with meanings including 'vein', 'artery', 'ligament', 'muscle', 'sinew', and 'tendon', well illustrate this point.

Also to be assigned to this etymon is the first syllable of PKC tha-ruy ⩙ *-hruy VEIN / ARTERY / SINEW (§1.6.2.1).

9. SINITIC

"Pre-Chinese"	njing	heart / kind	Coblin 1986:92

9.0.1. OLD CHINESE

Chinese (Old)	njin	kind / good	Coblin 1986:92 [a]

[a] Coblin (p.92) argues for the semantic connection between this Chinese etymon and the TB root by citing the English expression 'have a heart.'

Chinese comparandum

仁 OC ni̯ĕn, GSR #388fg 'kind, good'; Coblin 1986:92 (Sinitic) njing, (Old Chin.) njin; B & S 2011: niŋ {*ni [ŋ] }; Mand. rén.

(1b) PTB * s/k -nik HEART / MIND

This root is distinct but closely related to PTB s-ni HEART / BREAST / CHEST / RIB (§1.7.1) and PTB s/k-niŋ BRAIN / HEART / MIND (§1.7.1). In general it is more 'hearty', while PTB s-ni is more 'chesty' .

(2) PTB *s-diŋ HEART / LIVER

For the moment, we are reconstructing this root as a separate item from PTB s/k-n(y)i-k/ŋ HEART / MIND / BRAIN (§1.7.1). However, Kanauri stiŋ is a regular reflex of the latter, since the initial sequence sn- is regularly obstruentized into Kanauri st- (see HPTB p. 103).

A number of Qiangic forms with complex initials are also provisionally assigned to this root.

It is highly likely that this root is indeed ultimately related to PTB s/k-n(y)i-k/ŋ HEART / MIND / BRAIN (§1.7.1).

1.7.2 Lung

The flowchart below depicts the semantic relationship between LUNGS and LIVER in Jingpho.

(1a) PTB *tsywap LUNG

As explained at length in VSTB:113-123, the root reconstructed as tsywap in STC #239, is actually a fused version of a binome *tsi-wap, where the first element is the root PTB ts(u/i)-t LUNG (§1.7.2). The original meaning of the second element seems to be 'soft, spongy', which is its meaning in Jingpho. The Jingpho form sìn-wóp, literally "spongy organ" is opposed to Jingpho sin^{31} tʃa?^{31} 'liver', where the second element means 'hard, firm'. These two organs, dominant in the thoracic and abdominal cavity respectively, are evidently conceived of as antonymous, similar to the Turkish pair ak-ciğer 'lung' (lit. 'white liver') and kara-ciğer 'liver' (lit. 'black liver').

(1b) PTB *p-wap LUNG

The initial pr- cluster in Khaling seems to be a fusion of PTB pwar LUNG (§1.7.2) with wap. The Padam-Mising form also looks like a fusion of these two morphemes, with its syllable initial r- from pwar, and the proto-sequence wap becoming the rhyme -op.

The final dental in the Chinese comparandum might be due to labial dissimilation from the initial, as in "wind (n.)" 風, which is reconstructed as pi̯ŭm for Old Chinese, but which became pi̯ung by the Middle Chinese period. Another explanation is that this Chinese word is under the qusheng (Tone "C"), which arose, according to Haudricourt's famous theory, through the influence of an -s suffix, that could have favored the assimilation of a final labial to apical position.

(1c) PTB *s-wap LUNG

The s- prefix might well be a reduction of PTB sya-n FLESH / MEAT / GAME ANIMAL (§1.1.1), which appears in many words for parts of the body in various Tibeto-Burman languages.

We include these Southern Loloish forms in this word family, even though the change from w to m has not yet been discovered elsewhere. Perhaps these forms reflect a doubly-prefixed prototype s-m-wap, which in turn derives from the full disyllable sin-wap that we find in Jingpho.

(4) PTB *r-pay SPLEEN

Care must be taken to distinguish the reflexes of this etymon from those TB forms borrowed from Indo-Aryan; see IA p(l/r)i:han SPLEEN (§1.7.4).

This root was first reconstructed as pay ≍ play (VSTB: 217-218).

The Jingpho compounds for 'spleen' (kan-pai ~ kum-pai ~ hkum-pai ~ hkin-pai) have several initial syllables which seem to serve as body-part classifiers. kān means 'stomach' (cf. Dai et al. 1983:362) in isolation, while kùm ~ hkùm ~ gùm is a sort of body-part classifier (cf. Dai et al. 1983:263 and our root PTB (k/g)um BACK / BODY (§1.4.8)).

This root is quite similar to PTB r-(p/b)al SPLEEN (§1.7.4), with which it perhaps stands in an allofamic relationship.

(7) PTB *g-la SPLEEN / KIDNEY

The velar prefix is reflected directly in Khumi, Barish (Kokborok, Meche, Bodo), and Karenic (Bwe, Sgaw). The Loloish forms with voiceless laterals perhaps point to a variant with the s- prefix.

The front vowels in several scattered forms (Karenic, Nosu, Ergong) point perhaps to a variant with a palatal suffix, la-y (see Matisoff 1995 "Sino-Tibetan palatal suffixes revisited").

(1) PTB *d- $\frac{p}{b}$ u-k BELLY / STOMACH / CAVE

This root has many allofams, displaying variation in prefix, voicing or leniting of the initial, alternation between the high vowels -u- and -i-, and presence or absence of final stop. The reflexes also display considerable variation in meaning, ranging from the body part 'stomach' to other vital organs like 'heart' to hollow natural objects like 'cave'.

See the extended discussion in Matisoff 1978b:124-126 (VSTB).
