Mandaean Human Rights Group

Mandaean Human Rights Annual Report

March 2008

The Mandaean Human Rights Group is a self organized group dedicated for the help and protection of follow Mandeans in Iraq and Iran given the situation in those two countries. The Human Rights Group watches, investigates and exposes human rights violations against Mandeans. We have volunteers in the United States, Canada, Australia, United Kingdom, Europe and Iraq. Our model in our work is the United Nation's Human Rights Declaration of 1948. The MHRG is a non profit organization registered at Companies House, UK 6271157. It is a member of the Mandaean Associations Union .

Acknowledgment

We gratefully acknowledge the dedicated help and advice of many organizations, without which this work would not have been completed. Numbered among them for this edition are:

1. The Mandaean Associations Union.
2. The Spiritual Mandaean Council – Baghdad, Iraq
3. The Mandaean General Assembly – Baghdad, Iraq
4. The Mandaean Human Rights Association- Baghdad, Iraq
5. The Mandaean Society in Jordan.
6. The Mandaean Society in Syria.

The Sabian-Mandaean religion is one of the oldest monotheistic religions in the Middle East. It is independent of Judaism, Christianity and Islam. It follows the teachings of John the Baptist; baptism being its central ritual. Like most religions it emphasizes marriage, family, and peaceful coexistence with other groups. Mandeans (Sabians or Sub'ba, in spoken Arabic) are the people who believe in this religion. One is born a Mandaean; the group accepts no converts. Well before the Islamic era and from early Christianity, Mandeans have lived in Southern Iraq and Southern Iran. In Iraq, after WWI, they migrated to large cities such as Basra and Baghdad. Like Hebrews and Copts, Mandeans are both a religious and ethnic minority they are part of an endogenous Aramaic people. The word Mandaean refers to their distinct Aramaic language, which is still spoken by Iranian Mandeans. In Iraq on the other hand, the Mandaean language survives only in liturgy.

Demography

Although it is difficult to estimate, the Mandeans are around sixty thousands at the present time. Their decreased numbers are due to continued persecution and forced mass conversions as well as relocation and assimilation. Currently, they live in large cities such as Baghdad, Umara and Basra; few remain in other Iraqi cities like Nasiriya and southern Iranian cities like Ahwaz. During the past decade, and especially the past three years, thousands have escaped Iraq and Iran, choosing self-exile and immigration over death and persecution. There are about 15,000 Mandaean in different parts of Europe, 1500 in the United States, 1000 in Canada and about 4000 in Australia. There is also a large refugee population in various other countries: 2100 families in Syria, 500 families in Jordan, 50 individuals in Yemen and smaller numbers in Thailand, Mali, Egypt, Lebanon and Libya.

Short History of the Sabian Mandeans

It is difficult to chart the origins and history of the Mandaean people because their literature does not deal with these topics. Presently only one Mandaean text has emerged which refers, but in a very confused manner, to their history. It is the "Diwan of the great Revelation, called 'Inner Haran'" or Haran Gawaita.

In Haran Gawaita there is a description of the Nasoraean escaping from persecution and staying in the "Median Hills" under the rule of King Ardban. King Ardban has been identified with the Parthian King Artaban III, IV or V. This description shows how the Mandaean community, or part of it, penetrated into the Iranian territory of that time, that is during the period of the later Parthian kings, in the first or second centuries A. D. This same text describes how a Mandaean community was established in Mesopotamia and discusses its further history under the Sassanian rulers.

The emigration of the early Mandaean community from the Jordan valley in Palestine into eastern territories, brought about because of conflicts with the locals, must have taken place during the second century A.D. at the latest, because several Mesopotamian and Parthian elements presuppose a fairly lengthy stay in these regions. The emigrants went first to Haran, and the Median hills, and then entered the southern provinces of Mesopotamia.

Haran Gawaita attests to the foundation of a community in Baghdad, i.e. in Mesopotamia, and the appointment of Mandaean governors in this region. In contrast to the Parthian rulers, under whom the Mandeans obviously prospered, relations with the Sassanians were bad. The same scroll refers to considerable reduction in the number of the Mandaean Mandis (Worship Houses) at that time. It is also clear from the inscription of the Zoroastrian high priest Kartar that those practicing non-Iranian religions – and the Mandeans were among these – were persecuted during the reign of King Shahpur I.

With the rise of Islam there came renewed oppression. In spite of the mention of the Sabians as a “people of the book” in the Qur’an, Mandaeans were hardly ever tolerated. Thus, the afflicted community retired more and more into the inaccessible marshes of southern Iraq and the river districts of Khuzestan, where the Mandaeans are even now to be found.

During this journey in history, Mandaeans were faced with several massacres and genocide attempts. Examples of which are in:

- The 14th century in Umara, Iraq by the hands of The Sultan Muhsin Ben Mahdi and his son Fiadh the ruler of Shushter. Thousands of Mandaeans were killed¹.
- The massacre of 1782 in South Iran and east Iraq when the Muslim rulers wanted the Mandaean books and the Mandaeans refused to give it in fear of destruction. Leaders of the community were tortured and killed and the rest had to escape².
- The massacres of Muhamra 1837³
- The massacre of Suk Al-Shiuk 1839⁴
- The Massacre of 1870 in Shuster By the hands Nassir Al-Deen Shah the ruler of Iran⁵

In the beginning of the twentieth century, the Mandaeans returned to the large cities (Baghdad and Basra), and found opportunities for education and social improvement.

After the First World War and with the rise of Turkish nationalism, Arab nationalism took precedent over religion and the Arab Muslims fought against the Muslim Ottoman Empire. A new phase of persecution appeared where the ethnic identity of minorities in the Arabic Islamic rule had to dissolve in the pan Arab chauvinistic identity. This included the Mandaeans, Christians, Kurds and all other ethnicities. The Mandaeans lost their language (Mandaean Aramaic), distinctive dress and heritage to Arabic culture. This arabization process, especially in 1950 to 1960’s, adversely affected their religion⁶. Mandaeans were forced to deny certain Mandaean mandates. For instance as Mandaean children attended schools they are required to cut their hair, this is in direct violation to Mandaean rules. Since the sons of priests are barred from the priesthood if they cut their hair, this forced act have dwindled the pool of acceptable applicants. In addition they were drafted by force in the armed forces again against their religious mandate which prohibit carrying guns⁷.

During the Baath and Saddam era the Mandaeans were under extreme pressure. The dictatorship affected the Iraqi society over the last several decades in a brutal way. This dictatorship held an iron grip over all Iraqis and stained the recent history with terror and the blood of the innocent. The Mandaeans took their share of misery and pain in the suffering that occurred. Several hundred Mandaeans died during Saddam rule for trying to express their thoughts in public. Hundreds of their young men and women were killed, condemned to horrible tortures, or simply vanished. Hundreds more were killed during the Iraq-Iran war under the forced drafting rules. This make s substantial portion of young male population. They were forced to go against their religious doctrine of not carrying weapons and never shedding blood, even in self-defence⁸.

The concept of freedom in the Baath regime, especially religious freedom, was directly correlated with the personal favour demanded of Saddam Hussein and the regime⁹. The Mandaeans were no different; they suffered politically, economically, socially, and religiously from the persecution that has occurred against them. The Mandaean have endured severe discrimination in employment, education, the legal system, and were subjected to forced military service and social shunning. This forced over 15,000 of the Mandaean to flee from Iraq during that period. This represents a major percentage of the total numbers of the Mandaean in Iraq, making them the most affected minority. Also, interference of authorities in religious matters and decisions led lots of the Mandaean priests to leave Iraq.

During the last decade and before the fall of Saddam regime, there was a surge in Islamic fundamentalist ideology both in the Sunni and Shia school of thoughts resulting from many factors out of the scope of this report. These extreme Islamic views carry, among other things, an extreme view of how Muslims should deal with other religions like Christianity, Judaism and Mandaism. Un-acceptance and forced conversion is the only solution that these ideologies would accept. The followers of these sects used all the means available to them including money, threats and intimidation to convert other religious minority members like Mandaean to Islam. These tactics were successful with a lot of Mandaean families in areas like in Faluja and Ramadi and some areas of Baghdad. The use of threats, intimidation, brain washing of children, and kidnapping of girls forced a lot of Mandaean families to surrender completely and accept their fate. During that period many Mandaean were killed for their faith only¹⁰.

Sabian Mandaean after the fall of Saddam Hussein's regime.

Major changes have taken place in Iraq since the fall of Saddam Hussein. The situation has deteriorated further since our previous report in March 2007¹¹. Chaos and sectarian violence are continuing. The sectarian Muslim identity among Iraqis has preceded the national identity¹². Sunni and Shia death squads are roaming the streets of Baghdad and other cities of Iraq. These death squads are killing based on the last name and religion presented on Iraqi ID¹³. Mandaean and other Iraqi minorities are targeted by both sides¹⁴. Many insurgencies involving a number of communities and organizations are struggling for power inside Iraq at the moment. The conflicts have become internalized between Iraqis as the polarization of sectarian and ethnic identities reached ever deeper into Iraqi society and has caused the breakdown of social cohesion. This was recognised in a Chatham House Report in May 2007, titled "Accepting Realities in Iraq"^{15 16}

Sectarian and political violence has escalated throughout the year. According to Amnesty International's report on Sectarian violence (23rd May 2007)¹⁷, members of different armed groups, including Ba'athists, Sunni and Shi'a extremists and others, targeted civilians for deliberate killings, abductions and other abuses.

The level of casualties sustained as a result of attacks by insurgency groups, armed militia and criminal gangs remains difficult to gauge, given the constraints imposed by the security situation¹⁸. The situation of minority communities in Iraq deteriorated significantly since mid April 2006 in many parts of the country.” In addition it was reported that several fatwa’s was issued against the Mandaeans.¹⁹

According to the USCIRF May 2007 Annual Report: The Commission is also concerned about the grave conditions affecting non-Muslims in Iraq, including ChaldoAssyrian Christians, Yazidis, Sabean-Mandaeans, and other minority religious communities. These groups face widespread violence from Sunni insurgents and foreign jihadis, and they also suffer pervasive discrimination and marginalization at the hands of the national government, regional government, and Para-state militias, including those in Kurdish areas. As a result, non-Muslims are fleeing the country in large numbers. The commission continues to monitor conditions for Iraqi refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs), particularly those minority groups experiencing a degree of religious intolerance and persecution vastly disproportionate to their numbers. Together with the rising tide of sectarian violence, conditions for religious minorities require heightened attention and more effective action by the U.S. government.²⁰

Since Mandaeans are pacifists and conscientious objectors by doctrine they cannot defend themselves from this violence by carrying arms. The UNHCR guidance note, October 2005, noted that “Unlike most Iraqis, the Mandaeans do not belong to tribal groupings. In the past, Mandaeans were able to negotiate protection agreements with tribes by paying considerable sums of money. However, due to the present situation of general insecurity in Iraq, Mandaeans can no longer count on this type of arrangement and are therefore extremely vulnerable.” In addition Mandaeans do not have their own identified geographical area like other religious and ethnic minorities, but are scattered around the country. As a result it is extremely difficult to move them to one particular location as part of a protection scheme. They have therefore fled the country in large numbers to save their lives, making them the most genuine refugees.²¹

The Appendix attached shows the increase in the number of atrocities against the Mandaeans from January 2007 to February 2008. There were 42 killings, 46 kidnappings, 10 reported threats and 21 attacks reported. This is obviously a large proportion out of the approximately 4,000 Mandaeans left in Iraq. The sectarian cleansing of Baghdad by both Sunni and Shia groups proceeded despite a major US troop deployment aimed in part at stopping it²² It was noticed that some families requested MHRG not to publish the names of some of the killed and/or kidnapped. It was also noticed that some killings were not for money or ransom but to terrorize the families. A substantial number of the victims were women and children. In many cases the families were forced to sell everything to pay off the ransom, as they understood that the threats were quite serious. Many of the families were threatened to leave the country or else to be killed. Despite the ransom being paid in some cases the killing was nevertheless carried out. Many of the families were internally displaced when it was too dangerous for them to flee the country.

Mandaeans are being targeted and killed primarily for their beliefs and secondly for their position in the community as professionals and jewellers. The appendix in this report will also show the numbers of Mandaeans killed, kidnapped or attacked since 2003 .Several religious clergy have been assassinated. Al-Halali Raad Mutar Falih was machine gunned in his house in Sewara in front of his family. Al-Halali Talib Salman Arabi in the Ur section of Baghdad was killed at his doorstep in front all his family and neighbours.

were looted, melted and some were sold in the international markets for antiques. It is the Mandaean identity and culture that is specifically targeted by these terrorist, not just the individuals.

Forced conversions are happening at an alarming degree. Boys are being kidnapped, forcefully circumcised (a major sin in Mandaean religion) and forcibly converted to Islam (case has been shown to representative of Amnesty International during their visit to Amman in 2006), Amnesty International annual report. 23rd May 2007²³. Young girls have been kidnapped, raped, or forced to marry Muslims. Families receive threats demanding that they either convert or pay “Jizia,” (a ransom tax paid by non-Muslims). Often these threats come in the form of phone calls, letters, or through direct contact. All these cases and other similar cases together with updates have been presented to the UNHCR in Jordan and detailed accounts presented to UNHCR in Geneva in may 2006.

Confiscation of property is also becoming a common, unpunished practice. Mandaean houses are being taken in areas of Baghdad like Dora, Adhamia, and Sidia, in addition to other cities like Basra and Baquba. As they flee the area, their property is immediately occupied and often, police and neighbours are unwilling to provide assistance. In one instance, a Mandaean family in the Adamia region of Baghdad went to the police to register the confiscation of their house. They received assistance from neither the police nor the neighbours. Their case was immediately dismissed, and they later received a death threat advising them to either leave Baghdad or face the consequences. Mandaean houses of worship were also confiscated. The Mandi (a Mandaean House of worship) in Qalaa Salih, Umara and the Mandi in Baquba were both taken by armed militia. In addition, a Mandaean community centre in Baghdad and Mandaean land in Basra were all forcefully taken without compensation. Systematic destruction of Mandaean heritage like artefacts, scriptures and Holly books is continuing (Appendix).

More than 80% of the Mandaean community has been displaced outside Iraq. The Mandaean community in Iraq has dwindled from more than 60 thousand in the early 1990s to between 4-5 thousands today²⁴. Most have escaped to Syria and Jordan and others have also fled to Yemen and other countries. Some are very desperate to reach western democracies and fell victims to human trafficking, spent all their saving and endured more difficulties in other countries. Currently there are 10 Mandaean refugees jailed in Thailand because of being caught while trying to reach a safe refuge Mandaeans who are unable to leave Iraq are internally displaced moving to different cities inside the country or moving together in houses in order to gain a sense of security and protection. Some have tried to move to Kurdistan, however there is no system of support for refugees and the authorities are not prepared to accept refugees. With recent regulations it has become even more difficult to enter the area except for the well off section and the highly educated. In addition Mandaeans fear that religious persecution may be carried out by Islamic extremists whilst in Kurdistan.

Employment in Iraq is now related to political, sectarian and ethnic affiliation rather than qualifications. The ministries are divided among the Shia, Sunni, and Kurdish factions and they deny all other religious and ethnic minorities any chances of employment. Large numbers of Mandaeans are gold smiths and silver smiths and cannot go to work as they are easy victims. Many of their businesses have been confiscated²⁵.

Mandaeans have tried to express their concerns through the political process in Iraq. However, they have no voice in the parliament and no direct solid connection to any of the effective officials. Contacts with officials, religious leaders, and political party leaders have resulted in empty promises and no end to any of the above atrocities. Many of Iraq’s most powerful and well-positioned leaders are not always working toward national interests but sectarian interests²⁶. The police force is corrupt, often helping attackers, and has little to no role in protecting minorities²⁷.

The situation of the Mandaean refugees in the middle countries (where asylum seekers wait for approvals and resettlement)

Mandaeans are escaping mainly to Syria and Jordan. It is rather important to point out that the Mandaean situation is different from other minorities as they do not have any identified geographical area within Iraq to go to. They have no choice other than to leave Iraq. Moreover Mandaeans are virtually unknown outside Iraq with no international establishments that look after them like other religious sects.

There are about 2100 families in Syria, mostly in the Germanha area of Damascus, and about 500 in Jordan, mostly in Amman. The conditions of the refugees differ only slightly between the two countries. These countries are neither ready nor able to deal with a large influx of refugees by their own resources. They are not refugee accepting countries. Asylum seekers and refugees are left to their own resources without any specific legal, social, medical, educational or financial support. At the border, they are given temporary stay, and after that time, they become illegal. These regulations are changeable which does not provide security. Illegal residents are not allowed to work and have no legal or social support from the governments, and they are under the threat of deportation if they have an encounter with the police, even as victims. This leaves the door wide open for all sorts of abuse.

Abuse of refugees by employers is widespread. Refugees are forced to work for long hours and are either paid with meals or are denied compensation and are constantly threatened with deportation if their case reaches police. Many families have been there for years and used all of their savings. They therefore end up accepting any available employment.

Women and children are falling prey to all sorts of abuse. Pressures of illegal employment, deportation, and even hunger forces women in the pit of sexual abuse. Some girls are being lured into the sex trade and some are kidnapped and married by sex traders to be sold in other countries as sex labourers. Such cases are known but will not be reported due to social stigma in the Middle East communities.

Children are not allowed to enter the education system easily in both countries though some changes in the regulations happened recently. Private education is very expensive. Most of the parents cannot afford to put their children in schools and thus many are left without education. Children are forced to work to help their parents. Some factories take advantage of the government policies regarding refugees and employ children for nominal fees and long hours. Such cases are being reported on personal level but never reach the regulatory bodies or the police.

Most refugees cannot afford the expensive health care systems in both Syria and Jordan. There is no system for providing proper health care for the refugees. Few humanitarian organizations in Amman provide some health care for free but they do not have medications to treat many acute illnesses much less chronic ones. Most malignancies are diagnosed late, patients are not treated, and some are left to die. To add insult to injury, most families have no money to bury their dead. Some families started to beg in mosques and churches and some even search the dumpsters for food. Psychological problems including depression and posttraumatic stress syndromes are widespread among both adults and children.

All the listed above increased more last year as the years of suffering endured by them is continuing and their resources are dwindling. It was also noticed that a few kidnappings occurred in these countries. Threats from gangs linked to Iraqi gangs appeared. Some Iraqi kidnappers were identified by their victims and were reported to the local police; however, because the crimes happened in Iraq the criminals were freely still roaming and threatening the Mandaeans.

Most Mandaeans have presented their cases to the UNHCR offices in Amman and Syria. They are usually granted temporary protection cards, but those cards have no value with the authorities in both countries. More than a thousand cases have been processed for resettlement. The UNHCR regional offices in Jordan and Syria had limited number of staff and resources until last year²⁸. They were not able to deal with large numbers of refugees. However the UNHCR did expand their offices last year but still need more resources and help to deal with hundreds of thousands of refugees and help find proper solution to their dilemma.

Conditions in Jordan and Syria are becoming inhumane. Turning a blind eye or remaining silent has ceased to be acceptable options for the international community. In Jordan many families who escaped before 2006 were not recommended for resettlement by the UNHCR, despite their individual valid cases and their far prolonged suffering. In Syria the UNHCR recommended a limited number of families for resettlement despite belonging to the vulnerable groups such as single mothers, elderly, the very ill and families of victims of murder.

On March 8th 2008 Mr. Muhanad Safaa Al-Dehaisi was killed in AlBaya area in Baghdad less than twenty four hours after his return to Baghdad . He was in Jordan as a refugee and was forced to return for lack of resources. The situation is getting worse and a solution has to be found urgently.

We urge the UNHCR to look at the most vulnerable of the minorities. The Mandaeans don't receive particular support from any governmental or non-governmental agencies. Other Iraqi refugees have resources of financial support from countries and organizations affiliated to their faiths.

There are Mandaean communities in USA, Australia and Sweden and we hope that the rest of the resettled refugees will follow their kind (community) to be able to continue their faith freely in a safe place.

There are 50 Mandaeans who escaped to Yemen even before the fall of Saddam and have been there for more than five years. Their cases were processed by the UNHCR and presented to the United States for resettlement, but the process was put on hold after 9/11. They are under tremendous stress from the community around them who do not know, understand, or accept the Mandaean religion. As their identity becomes known to the locals they are being deprived even of the meagre resources they have gained over the last 5 years. Employment is denied, women are sexually harassed, and they face religious persecution. There are no facilities or running water for the Mandaeans to practice their faith. If such facilities were provided, many families would not want to use them because they would expose themselves to much danger. In the community, young Mandaean women are being pressured to marry Muslim men.

There are several Mandaean families who were victims of human trafficking and ended up in Thailand without support or legal identity. We hope that the Thailand government will be more sensitive to their situation, release them from detention and allow them to have a safe refuge.

What is the solution?

Under the current situation in Iraq it is not safe for the Mandaean refugees to return. The UNHCR does not believe that the time has come to promote, organize or encourage returns. Moreover, there is no particular safe area within Iraq for the Mandaeans to return to. In a letter dated 23rd of October 2006 from the European Centre for Kurdish studies addressed to the highest court authority in Düsseldorf (Germany) it was mentioned that it is not possible for Mandaeans to establish presence in northern Iraq due to lack of job opportunities, language difficulties and continued religious harassment by Kurdish extremists.

The Mandaeans' continued presence as refugees in Syria and Jordan is fraught with difficulties. Mandaeans are currently living in an uncertain future. The only durable solution to their plight is to be offered resettlement in a safe third country such as the US, Australia or a European country. To save their culture and religion from extinction their preferable option will be to relocate as a group together. Otherwise their ancient culture, tradition, religion and language threaten to disappear forever.

In march of 2008

The UNHCR launched an appeal document (Jan 8th 2008) to fund its operations for 2008 on behalf of Iraqi refugees and stresses that UNHCR “cannot at this time promote or encourage the return of Iraqi refugees, citing continuing security concerns and other factors”²⁹.

However, it is fare to say that the safety situation is improving in some areas in Iraq for certain refugee population. For the Mandaean refugees, however, return could mean a death sentence.

The international community and especially the USA, the UK, Australia, the EU countries, UNHCR and all other NGO’s should act to prevent this humanitarian disaster from continuing. One of the oldest and most peaceful communities in the Middle East is being annihilated under the eyes of the international community³⁰.

The U.N declaration for the protection of indigenous, ethnic and religious minorities is compatible with the situation of the Mandaeans and should be applied. Furthermore, the International law for the prevention of genocide should be considered³¹

Because of the role and responsibility of the United States in Iraq, and the commitments that the Coalition governments have made before and after the invasion of Iraq, the United States, the United Kingdom and Australia have special obligations least of which is morally to step up and save the Mandaeans and other religious minorities in Iraq³². These governments should acknowledge that Mandaeans will not be safe from persecution in Iraq in any eventuality and should therefore provide Mandaeans with permanent protection by accepting them for resettlement.

The United States of America especially has obligations to save the Mandaeans and other religious minorities in Iraq. The United States Government should give the Mandaeans a P2 visa without delay as an extremely endangered religious minority that is at the verge of extinction due to religious persecution.

The USA government should start speeding up its processing of the current referred cases from UNHCR and stand up for its obligations to admit 12000 refugees this year. These obligations were not met last year.

The United States Commission on International Religious Freedom has already urged Under Secretary of State for Democracy and Global Affairs Mrs. Dobriansky to create new or expand existing options for allowing members of Iraq’s Chaldeo-Assyrian and Sabean Mandaean religious minority communities to access the U.S. refugee program, and to urge UNHCR to resume full refugee status determinations for all Iraqi asylum seekers and assess all claims without delay³³.

The international community should look seriously in helping the Mandaean refugees to resettle in one country which permits religious freedom and practices and where a community of Mandaeans can preserve their existence for the future. UNESCO has already declared the Mandaean language a threatened language.

The UNHCR has an immediate and urgent obligation to start processing more cases for resettlement. We suggest the Organization should take active steps to provide protection for the refugees in Jordan and Syria and give them a proper legal status to prevent abuses.

The UNHCR should consider granting all Mandaean a full refugee status as a group and not on an individual basis, and give them complete protection from forcible returns to Iraq.

Proper Medical, and humanitarian assistance should be offered and financial support to any agency that can provide that help to the refugees. Active steps from the European Union and USA should be taken to secure the funds allocated to the refugee Mandaean.

Changes should be made to the Iraqi constitution to guarantee the rights of mandaeans and other minorities and the Iraqi government and the legal system should implement these changes to gain the trust of minorities in a safe and secure future.

The Iraqi Government should be held responsible for providing financial help for the refugees through independent agencies to provide them with the necessary humanitarian support.

The Iraqi Government should be responsible on recording and saving the properties of the Mandaean community in Iraq including their archives, documents and history until such time that their return is safe.

Militia leaders should be held accountable for crimes against humanity when they or their followers are caught by police in the future.

Conclusion

The Mandaean are part of the indigenous people of Iraq. They are a religious and ethnic minority that is facing annihilation. All articles of the UN declaration that apply to the protection of the indigenous, ethnic and religious minorities are compatible with their situation and should be applied. The Sabian Mandaean in Iraq are looking for protection from the hate crimes that they are facing. They are looking for the USA and the international community to save their lives, their children and their future and prevent the genocide that is happening.

Threats and Assaults

1. In different areas in Iraq (both Shiaa and Suni areas) like Sadr City in Baghdad (Shiaa area) , Falluja (Suni area) and Basra (mixed) , during the Friday mosque sermon, extremist clerics have declared that it is religiously acceptable to attack and loot the property of the “infidels” as long as part of the loot is given for the “Islamic cause”.
2. May 2003: The arson of the alcohol brewery and looting of belongings of Salam Ajil Shahir’s in Baquba city.
3. May 7th 2003: The Mandaean community in Baghdad was terrified by the brutal attack on Mr. Mahir Sherad Zebala, his pregnant wife and their four children ages 10, 7, 4, and 2 in their house in Sidiah, Baghdad by thugs shouting religious slurs against the Mandaean religion.
4. The burning of a house and personal property in Hawijah, Kirkuk. This act of arson resulted in the murder of a handicapped 23-year-old Mandaean girl who was unable to flee the house.

5. April through June of 2003 saw the destruction of homes and businesses with explosives in Sowerah, Kut. The criminals who committed these bombing attacks were well-known Muslim extremists from the area. The following is a list of the victims:
