I. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This Final Inventory Report prepared by PCR Services Corporation (PCR) summarizes the results of the survey of original fine and decorative arts located aboard the Royal Mail Ship (RMS) Queen Mary docked in Long Beach, California. The inventory project was completed to assist the City of Long Beach (City) in conducting an annual inspection of the ship's valuable assets. This project is part of the City's program to protect and preserve the RMS Queen Mary, which is listed in the National Register of Historic Places and is the last remaining luxury liner of its type.

The inventory documented over 4,700 individual items on the Queen Mary, which ranged from large examples of fine art (e.g., paintings and sculpture, etc.) to small-scale decorative objects and utilitarian hardware. The documentation included written descriptions and photographs of each item surveyed. The inventory did not include the architectural, structural or mechanical components of the ship. Room views of each of the spaces surveyed were included in the inventory database for reference purposes to show the present context and location of the inventoried items. From the list of over 4,700 items, approximately 2,400 were deemed character-defining "valuable assets." These valuable assets consist primarily of fine art, decorative art and other examples of lighting and furniture (freestanding and built-in) from the ship's 1934 to 1936 period of significance. It is recommended that these items be regularly inspected and monitored in order to ensure they are retained, protected and preserved.

The inventory report includes a discussion of the project's survey and documentation methods, a description of the inventory database classifications, a general historical overview of RMS Queen Mary's construction and design, a history of the fine and decorative arts in public spaces and staterooms on the RMS Queen Mary, written descriptions of the existing public spaces and the associated fine and decorative arts assets inventoried, a written description of the fine and decorative arts inventoried in the staterooms, determination of valuable assets, conclusions and recommendations. The project deliverables include one unbound camera-ready hard copy of the report and inventory, one electronic PDF file of the report and inventory, and an electronic Microsoft Access version of the final inventory database.

A. INTRODUCTION

The RMS Queen Mary sailed the North Atlantic Ocean from 1936 to 1967 for the Cunard White Star Line. In 1967, the City of Long Beach (City) purchased the RMS Queen Mary and the ship has since been permanently docked in Long Beach Harbor, where it has operated primarily as a hotel and tourist attraction. In August 2007, the investor's group, Save the Queen, was awarded a long-term lease for the ship from the City. The group plans to develop a theme entertainment area that will include additional hotel rooms, shops, and restaurants. In preparation for the proposed redevelopment, a comprehensive inventory project was initiated to record and document the ship's numerous and valuable works of fine and decorative art. The purpose of the inventory project is to clearly identify and record the ship's valuable assets so they can be managed and maintained through regular inspections.

PCR Services Corporation's (PCR) art and architectural historians visually examined, inventoried, and documented each extant item of fine art and decorative art original to the ship in all accessible spaces. Original fine arts generally include, but are not limited to, paintings, prints, and sculptures. Original decorative arts generally include, but are not limited to, glasswork, metalwork, woodwork and furniture (including both freestanding pieces and built-ins), as well as the fixtures and hardware designed specifically for the ship's public spaces and staterooms. Items were defined as original to the ship if they could be dated to the ship's period of significance from 1934 to 1936. In order to effectively organize the large amount of inventory data, PCR staff developed a custom-designed Microsoft Access database that provided a unique record with a narrative description and a photograph for each item. The intent of the database was to provide a user-friendly means for City staff to conduct an annual inspection to track those items identified as valuable assets.

B. BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The inventory project was intended to create a comprehensive database to be used for the City Auditor's annual inspection of fine art and decorative art assets located aboard the RMS Queen Mary. The City provided PCR with a copy of the current City Auditor's inventory of the ship, which consists of a spreadsheet documenting approximately 162 items with their description, location, and assessed value. However, the current City Auditor's inventory was limited to items of fine art with a high monetary value. The inventory did not generally include items with a relatively low monetary value (less than approximately $200), items of decorative art, or items with primarily historical, versus monetary, value. In order to comprehensively expand the existing inventory, the current project conducted by PCR also included items with low monetary value and/or primarily historical value.

Visual inspection and review of ship plans by PCR's architectural historians indicated that the ship has undergone numerous major alterations since its launch in 1936. Most changes appear to have occurred during the post World War II retrofit period and, then, as a result of renovation efforts during the conversion to a hotel and tourism center after the ship's 1967 arrival in Long Beach, California. Nonetheless, the majority of the interior public spaces and staterooms on the ship still retain their integrity. The inventory project documented all the spaces on the ship that currently contain original fine art and decorative art items.

The inventory project conducted by PCR staff includes examples of “high design” as well as utilitarian objects. Freestanding items (e.g., moveable objects, such as chairs and tables, etc.) have been included along with built-ins (e.g., furniture, fixtures, fittings, etc.). The project does not typically include the ship’s architectural or structural features although some allowances have been made for those items that PCR staff has determined have value as architectural and/or structural features and as items of fine or decorative art (e.g., doors, columns, etc.). While the results of the PCR inventory update project will provide useful information for a future environmental review process, the survey and inventory has been conducted for the purposes of tracking assets and is not intended to serve as an architectural survey.

The PCR team was led by Margarita J. Wuellner, Ph.D., Director of Historic Resources/Principal Architectural Historian. Dr. Wuellner is an Art and Architectural Historian with extensive experience managing and conducting architectural surveys and inventories for large-scale planning, development, and cultural resources management projects as well as experience researching and curating objects of fine and decorative art. The PCR team is comprised of Jon L. Wilson, M.Arch., Senior Architectural Historian, Marlise Fratinardo, M.L.A., Associate Architectural Historian, and Amanda Kainer, M.S., Assistant Architectural Historian, whose qualifications all meet and exceed the Secretary of the Interior’s professional qualifications standards in history, architectural history, and historic architecture. Mr. Wilson assisted Dr. Wuellner in the day-to-day management tasks for the project and provided project support and oversight. Ms. Kainer has training and background in Art History, Interior Design and Conservation and served as survey team leader, assisted by Ms. Fratinardo. Gabriella Nagy, Historian Intern, has extensive background in the conservation and restoration of European architecture and provided project support for the survey and inventory effort. The professional qualifications of key personnel are provided in Attachment A, Professional Qualifications of Key Personnel.

C. SCOPE OF WORK

PCR developed a comprehensive Scope of Work based upon our understanding of the City’s needs. As previously described in the Scope of Work included in the PCR team’s proposal to the City dated September 5, 2008, PCR staff conducted extensive background research on the history and design of the RMS Queen Mary. The team prepared a Microsoft Access database to identify, describe, record, and assess the existing conditions of the ship’s fine and decorative arts, which include, but are not limited to, paintings, sculpture, metal work, glass work, furniture, fixtures and fittings. The Phase I Survey was conducted during October 2008 and served as a test case for the project as the team’s survey methods were revised and improved. The Phase II Survey took place during October, November, and December 2008. Following the completion of the Phase I and Phase II Surveys, PCR staff reviewed, analyzed and classified the data. PCR staff met with City staff on December 9, 2008 in order to obtain feedback on the project’s progress to date. Necessary modifications were made, as appropriate. Deliverables provided to the City include a Draft Inventory Report, a Final Inventory Report, and copies of the Microsoft Access database developed for the project.

D. SURVEY AND DOCUMENTATION METHODS

The survey and documentation methods described below were developed by the PCR team in order to systematically record the numerous original items of fine and decorative art presently located aboard the RMS Queen Mary. Archival materials, research libraries, and on-line sources were used to obtain background information on the ship's general history and the provenance of its fine art and decorative items. Background research included a thorough examination of relevant art, architecture and maritime history resources ranging in date from the 1930s through the present, which were used to aid in the identification, description, recordation, and condition assessment of the identified objects. Oral history, current and historic plans, construction permits and other reference materials that were provided by the City and RMS Queen Mary staff were reviewed by PCR historians. In addition, PCR staff undertook a comprehensive field inspection of the RMS Queen Mary, which included intensive-level visual examinations and photographic documentation, particularly on the portions of the ship that appear to exhibit potential historical associations.

With an understanding of the RMS Queen Mary's construction and design history in hand, PCR staff developed a Microsoft Access database to record and categorize the ship's items of fine and decorative art. The goal was to create a clear and comprehensive database that would allow enough flexibility for analytical needs by PCR staff and, ultimately, the City. To this end, the items were grouped into several categories and corresponding subcategories in order to facilitate the organization of the ship's numerous items. For example, a general "lighting" type was created, which allowed for detailed classification by subtype categories based upon the ship's numerous types of light fixtures.

The following approach was used for each public space and stateroom on the ship. First, the items of fine and decorative art were photographed individually, along with general "room photos" that documented the overall context of the space. Next, Tablet PC's were used to enter the data directly into the project database fields. Items were also individually assessed regarding their condition and assigned into one of four categories: poor, fair, good, or excellent. Items were usually photographed only once, except in cases of particularly fine, unusual, or hard-to-photograph examples that warranted additional documentation. The items were researched in order to determine if they were associated with the ship's original construction period of 1934 to 1936.

The database was refined as the team gained experience with the numerous types of items on the ship. Revisions were made to accommodate an expanded list of item types and names, improvements to the organization of data fields, and expansions of several fields to increase the database's user-friendliness and efficiency. Descriptive categories were also refined, with some new ones added and others removed, in order to increase the database's overall comprehensiveness.

As the team continued to explore the ship, data collection methods evolved into two separate approaches, one for staterooms and the other for public spaces. While nearly every stateroom has a unique layout and components, PCR staff discerned that there were enough basic elements present in each room that a standard set of types, subtypes, and item names could be developed. Public spaces, however, have distinct functions and therefore little in common with one another. Public spaces generally include numerous, varied examples of large scale fine and decorative art items. In contrast to staterooms, items of fine and decorative art in the ship's public spaces were generally of a higher aesthetic and historic value than the items of fine and decorative art in the staterooms and therefore required a considerably greater level of detail to document them appropriately. The PCR database thus incorporated these two approaches in the database. There is a basic record for examples of fine and decorative art items in staterooms and, a somewhat more detailed record for the fine and decorative art items located in public spaces. The specific item names that were developed are described below in Part IV, Database Field Descriptions.

The PCR team streamlined several aspects of the inventory data collection process in order to more efficiently capture large amounts of data as well as respond to the types of items found on the ship. For example, some common items appeared so frequently on the ship that the team did not document each individual occurrence but instead included the item as a single database entry followed by item notes detailing its frequency. This approach was appropriate for typical "noncontributing" items (e.g., air vents, passageway railings) that appear with some regularity (e.g., approximately five air vents per stateroom, and railings along the passageway hall). As another example, the database contains a "measurement" field; however, measurements were generally only included for items of fine and decorative art in public spaces and not items located in staterooms. Database categories were named in order to help differentiate "original" items, which date to one of the ship's periods of significance, from reproduction items (e.g., "basin, original" refers to wash basins that appear to date from the 1934 to 1936 period of significance while "basin, other" refers to later, replacement wash basins.).

In other cases, items were documented in groups, rather than individually, in order to reflect their functional arrangement as an "ensemble." For example, rather than documenting a bedroom set by each individual item that comprised it (e.g., with individual database entries for the headboard, bedside tables, associated shelves, etc.), the items were grouped as an "ensemble" under a single database entry. This approach was intended to more accurately represent the functional relationships of individual items to one another. This approach was also intended to suggest that these items should be considered together as a functional unit, rather than individually. Considering rooms by the functional groupings of items also served to clarify the design schemes of built-in furniture.

II. HISTORICAL OVERVIEW OF CONSTRUCTION AND DESIGN

A. RMS QUEEN MARY: “A BRITISH MASTERPIECE”

... the Queen Mary seems to me the perfect embodiment of British views on what a passenger ship should be, both technically and decoratively. She was conceived in the right way, and her design, as well as the completion of every detail, [was] supervised in accordance with certain fixed general principles, firmly held in view.

- John De La Valette, in a lecture to the Royal Society for the Arts, London, 1936

The Cunard Steamship Co., Ltd., commissioned the shipbuilders John Brown and Company at Clydebank, Scotland to construct the Queen Mary in 1930. Due to the Depression, the project was delayed and did not resume until 1934.¹ The commission responded to the extravagant new wave of ocean liners constructed by the Germans, Italians and French. However, the Great Depression halted the construction of the Queen Mary, then known as hull number 534, on December 31, 1931.² The British government gave Cunard a loan to commence construction if they agreed to merge with the White Star Line, so Cunard White Star, Ltd. was formed and construction resumed in 1934.³ By 1936 the construction of the Queen Mary was completed and she sailed on her first maiden voyage in May.⁴ The Queen Mary and her sister ship, the Queen Elizabeth, established the first balanced two ship express service in 1940.⁵ Thus, Cunard White Star, Ltd. became one of the most successful transatlantic ocean liner companies.

During World War II, the Queen Mary was given the nickname the “Grey Ghost” after she was painted grey and served as troop transport averaging 15,000 soldiers per trip, compared to 2,000 passengers during peacetime travels.⁶ Only the dining rooms were left partially intact, all other rooms were converted into sleeping facilities for the troops and the furniture and other fineries were removed for the wartime accommodations.⁷ The Queen Mary resumed luxury service in the fall of 1947.

Post World War II, the interior of the Queen Mary was altered before transatlantic passenger service was resumed. A detailed alteration history does not exist; however, comparison of plans from the date of original construction with post World War II plans, illustrates some of the changes. The majority of the changes occurred on the Promenade Deck: the first class (cabin class) Ballroom, Starboard Gallery and Long Gallery was converted into the Midships Bar, retail stores and a cinema; the covered port and starboard First Class (Cabin Class) Covered Promenade outside of the First Class (Cabin Class) Smoking Room was converted into a Garden Lounge with a cocktail bar; the Observation Bar was expanded onto the deck; the Music Studio converted into a Nursery; the port Writing Room enclosed and converted into a Radio/Telephone Room; and the Lecture Room and Children's Playroom were subdivided and lost their original use. Other changes included the conversion of the Third-class Garden Lounge into a Shore Excursion Office, the alteration of the Main Deck Travel Bureau and other small, miscellaneous changes.

Unfortunately, the popularity of airlines instead of ocean liners forced Cunard to retire the Queen Mary from service in 1967. Afterwards, the City of Long Beach purchased the Queen Mary for $3.45 million for use as a maritime museum, hotel, restaurant and tourist complex.⁸ On October 31, 1967, the Queen Mary set sail from Southampton on her final voyage to Long Beach and arrived on December 9, 1967.⁹

After the City of Long Beach obtained possession of the RMS Queen Mary, the ocean liner was refitted to convert the seafaring British ship to California building codes. First, three of the four propellers and four fin stabilizers were removed, and roughly ninety hull openings were sealed.¹⁰ All of the wiring, plumbing and heating were updated. The initial conversation included gutting and enlarging the small second and third class staterooms on the Main, A and B Decks, creating vaulted exhibition spaces below the R Deck that in turn created structural problems, as weight bearing posts, engine and broiler room equipment, and the funnels disintegrated.¹¹ Once the city completed a comprehensive inventory of the all assets, multiple auctions were held including a large ongoing warehouse sale held until the cost of the staff and rent exceeded the city's revenue.¹² The author Renee B. Simon states in Destination Long Beach, "all stateroom furniture, all linens, all kitchen cooking supplies, dining room furniture, china, glassware, and silver, all bedding, EVERYTHING the city thought it would have no use for was to put on the block.”¹³ Any item not sold was placed back into storage. The City of Long Beach City Manager, John Mansell, decided to hold public sales of the items so “everyone could have an opportunity to buy something, large or small, so citizens could have as much enjoyment of material taken from the ship as much as possible.”¹⁴ The Chronology on pages 13-17 provides an outline of later alterations and the various leases from the time the City of Long Beach acquired ownership of the ship in 1967.

B. OCEAN LINER ERA

The interwar period was the “golden era” of transatlantic travel. Ocean liners of the 1920s and 1930s were more than vehicles for transport, but symbolic of a nation’s power, wealth and artistic talents. The eminent goal of the ocean liner design competition was to capture the transatlantic market and the overall honor of being the greatest nation. As Brinnin & Gaulin wrote,

By the middle thirties, the ocean liner as a species had come into its majority and full estate. Nothing launched after those years would ever be bigger or faster (save for the United States which, in 1952, was capable of crossing New York to Southampton in seventy-two hours), and nothing would add to or subtract from the already full-blown legend of a business transformed into a romance...Then like leviathans wandering into the shallows of maritime history, along came the Normandie and the Queen Mary, soon joined by the Queen Elizabeth. This trio, in one audacious leap, carried the era of the sumptuous into the realm of the unsurpassable.¹⁵

As a result of technological and structural advancements of ocean liner engineering, the size and flexibility of interiors increased. The ocean liner interior, particularly the finishes and the fittings of the public and private rooms, were the areas of design creativity and imagination. The talents of artisans were exhibited in the ocean liner designs to create a sense of luxury never afforded to ships before. A greater variety of public rooms were also added, such as libraries, theaters, smoking rooms, a-la-carte restaurants, specialized dining rooms, pools and exercise facilities. Shipbuilding nations thought ocean liners were floating emblems of national prestige, so they exhibited their wealth and power in the design of ocean liners.

The turning point in ocean liner design and decoration that placed greater emphasis upon passenger luxury and speed was in 1907, when the German company Hamburg-America constructed the Amerika. The director of Hamburg-America, Albert Ballin, was inspired by the dining room of the refurbished Carlton Hotel in London, the Ritz Grill, and wanted to invoke the same sense of grandeur in the interior of his ocean liner.¹⁶ With the assistance of the French architect Charles Mewes, the interior design of the Amerika was akin to a luxurious floating hotel. The specifically designed public and private rooms were full of decorative and fine arts intended to enhance a passenger's overall transatlantic experience. Later, Charles Mewes was commissioned to design Hamburg-America's lavish "Imperator class" – the Imperator (1913), the Vaterland (1914), and the Bismarck (1914).¹⁷ The revolutionary ocean liner interior designs of Charles Mewes transformed the ocean liner from a vehicle of transport into a luxurious floating palace.

After World War I, French, Italian and British governments followed Hamburg-America's precedent of extravagant ocean liner design. In response to the greater demand and popularity of transatlantic travel, nations subsidized the construction of ocean liners to reap the benefits from the publicity.¹⁸ For example, Germany constructed the Breman (1929) and the Europa (1930); Italy constructed the Conte Grande (1927) and the Rex (1923); France constructed the Paris (1921), the France (1912), the Il de France (1927), and the Normandie (1935); and Britain constructed the Queen Mary (1936) and the Queen Elizabeth (1938).¹⁹ The interwar period ocean liners disposed of historicist styles that once influenced interiors for modern, clean lines and lifestyle advancements. The most modern ships were German, both the Breman and the Europa, which had functional interiors that espoused Bauhaus aesthetics.²⁰ The Italian ships and the French ships were expressions of their nationalistic design styles, the grand palazzi and palatial chateaus, while the British ships, maintained Britain's preferences toward traditional design.²¹

The ultimate ocean liner rivalry was between France and Britain who vied to design the fastest and most luxurious ocean liners. When France commissioned the Normandie in 1935, Britain was already constructing the Queen Mary. Their creators had three goals: to construct the largest liner over 1,000 feet and 75,000 tons, to construct the fastest ship on the Atlantic, and to design the most luxurious interiors to reflect national design, art and technology.²² The competition between France and Britain led to the construction of remarkable ocean liners emblematic of their design heritage. The Normandie was the longest liner, 1,028 feet in length, but the Queen Mary had greater tonnage, so the Queen Mary was given the title of the largest ship.²³ Both liners also competed for the prized Blue Riband, the title given for the fastest time to cross the Atlantic. The Queen Mary took the prize away from the Normandie in August of 1936, later the Normandie recaptured the award in March of 1937 and finally the Queen Mary won the award back in August of 1938 and retained the title until July of 1952.²⁴ The real differences between the Normandie and Queen Mary were in their interior designs. The interior design of the Normandie was largely influenced by the 1925 International Exhibition of Arts, as the interiors were lavishly modern and extravagant. Conversely, the more traditional Queen Mary captured the attention of transatlantic passengers, as a result of less pretentious and décor and tone.

C. THE CUNARD LINE

In 1839, shipping magnate Samuel Cunard, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada, along with engineer Robert Napier and businessmen James Donaldson, Sir George Burns, and David C. MacIver formed the British and North American Royal Mail Steam Packet Company (BNARMSPC).²⁵ The BNARMSPC, also known as the Cunard Line, was used to principally carry the British Royal Mail to Canada and the United States. The Cunard Line successfully bid for the rights to a transatlantic mail shipping contract between England and America - winning this entitled it to use the RMS (Royal Mail Ship) prefix on its vessels. The company later changed its name to Cunard Steamships, Ltd. By 1840, the company had four transatlantic paddle steamers: the Britannia, and three smaller sister ships, the Acadia, Caledonia and Columbia. Cunard faced intense competition from Britain, France, the United States and Germany, but due to their focus on safety and reliability, Cunard prospered. Eventually, Cunard merged with Canadian Northern Steamships and the White Star Line.

Cunard dominated the north Atlantic passenger trade. Some of their more important early twentieth century ocean liners were the Lusitania (1906), Mauretania (1906), the Aquitania (1913), the Laconia (1922), the Queen Mary (1936), the Queen Elizabeth (1938), the Mauretania

II (1939) and the Caronia (1949).²⁶ The majority the Cunard ocean liners were constructed at John Brown's Shipyard at Clydebank, Scotland. The Cunard ocean liners played important roles in the development of the world economy, and also participated in all of Britain's major wars.

By the 1950s, Cunard had twelve liners in service, carrying roughly one third of all passengers across the Atlantic.²⁷ However, in 1959 the first jet passed over the Atlantic, thereby initiating the switch from travel by sea to air. As air travel gained popularity in the early 1960s, ocean travel waned. Cunard tried break into air transportation by forming a partnership with the British Overseas Airways Corporation to operate scheduled air services to North America, the Caribbean and South America. But, by 1966, the partnership was dissolved. In 1971, the Cunard Line was acquired by British shipping and industrial conglomerate Trafalgar Houses, which held the line until its 1966 takeover by the Norwegian conglomerate Kvaerner/ASA. In 1983, Cunard bought the luxury cruise line Norwegian America Liner, and in 1994 another luxury cruise company, Royal Viking Line. In 1998, Cunard was bought by Carnival Corporation from Kvaerner. The last great ocean liners constructed by Cunard were the Queen Elizabeth 2 in 1967, Queen Mary 2 in 2004 and the Queen Victoria in 2007. The Queen Elizabeth 2 ended her service in October of 2008, but the Queen Mary 2 and the Queen Victoria are still in service today.

- November 6, 1935: Installation of engines and almost all of the heavy machinery is completed. Funnels and both masts are in position.
- March 5, 1936: King Edward VIII inspects the liner.
- March 24 - 26, 1936: Preliminary speed trials on the way to Southampton
- March 27 - April 8, 1936: Dry docked in King George V Graving Dock.
- April 15 - 19, 1936: Official speed trials are held up and down the Irish Sea off the Isle of Arran, Scotland reaching a high speed of 38.84 knots.²⁹
- May 25, 1936: King Edward VIII, Her Majesty Queen Mary, Princess Elizabeth (now the Queen), the Duke and Duchess of York (soon to be King George VI and Queen Elizabeth), the Duke and Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Gloucester toured the ship. Queen Mary presents her personal standard to the ship.
- May 27, 1936: The Queen Mary departs Southampton for her maiden voyage.
- June 1, 1936: The Queen Mary arrives at Pier 90 in New York. The total crossing times was 5 days, 5 hours and 13 minutes.
- August 19 - 31, 1936: On her sixth round-trip voyage, the Queen Mary wins the Blue Riband for the fastest North Atlantic crossings from the French Line's Normandie. The Normandie won the honor back in 1937.
- August 3 - 15, 1938: Won the Blue Riband back from the Normandie on her 48th round-trip voyage. Held it for 14 years, until July 1952, when the SS United States beat the record.
- August 30, 1939: Departed Southampton on final peacetime voyage, carrying her largest number of passengers: 2,552.

E. RMS QUEEN MARY DESIGN AND PLANNING

Cunard executives ultimately managed the interior decoration of the Queen Mary. The architects, decorators and designers carried out decorative schemes set forth by Cunard.³⁰ E. C. Leach, F.R.I.B.A., Chief of the Decorative Department, and Sir Percy Bates, Chairman, were the two Cunard executives who suggested artists and architects for the project and the decorative schemes. John Brown and Company, who constructed the ship, was responsible for coordinating the interior decoration of the passenger accommodations with interior decorators except for the special staterooms that the interior architects designed.³¹ The two chief interior architects who were in charge of the design of the public spaces and special staterooms were the British architect Arthur Joseph Davis (1878-1951) from the firm of Mewes and Davis, and American architect Benjamin Wistar Morris (1870-1944). In the autumn of 1934, Arthur Davis fell ill, so J.C. Whipp, another employee from the Mewes and Davis firm, replaced him.³²

The head British architect Arthur Davis summarized his ocean liner interior design philosophy in a speech given to his colleagues at the Royal Institute of Architects in 1922:

*The people who travel on these large ships are the people who live in hotels; they are not ships for sailors or yachtsmen or people who enjoy the sea. They are inhabited by all sorts of people, some of whom are very delicate and stay in their cabin throughout the voyage... I suggest to you that a transatlantic liner is not merely a ship, she is a floating town with 3,000 passengers of all kinds, with all sorts of tastes, and those who enjoy being there are strictly a minority. If we could get ships to look inside like ships, and get people to enjoy the sea, it would be a very good thing; but all we can do, as things are, is to give them giant floating hotels.*³³

Clearly, Davis's intent was to create the illusion of a traditional and lavish resort while at sea. The Queen Mary had spaces dedicated to different uses and functions to help distract passengers during their transatlantic voyages: ballrooms, dining rooms, music rooms, libraries, writing rooms, children's playrooms, smoking lounges, retail shops, à la carte restaurants, lecture rooms, barber and beauty shops, and bars. The design of these spaces depended upon their function; and particularly upon the class level, either first (cabin), second (tourist), or third, which determined their design schemes. Generally, the furnishings, fine and decorative arts and architectural ornamentation were traditional and complimentary with each other within each class level.

The fine and decorative arts complimented the interior design and contributed to the ship's interior schemes. Approximately thirty-seven artists were commissioned to design the decorative and fine arts aboard the RMS Queen Mary. The American architect Arthur Morris held the majority of the responsibility for the selection of the artists.³⁴ He sought art advice from Dudley W. Tooth of the London art gallery Arthur Toot & Sons.³⁵ The Cunard Line executives ultimately held the responsibility for the final selection of the artists and the subject matter, specifically E. C. Leach, F.R.I.B.A.³⁶

In general, the backgrounds of the artists were disparate; they did not graduate from same school or belong to similar guilds or artistic circles. However, there were some common threads that unify the artists as a collective whole. The artists all received traditional art training, at the Royal Academy Schools or other prominent British Art schools. Also, the artists were all beginning their artistic career and had not received notoriety for their work. An article in the New York Times on December 1, 1935, described the artists commissioned by the Cunard Line:

*Decoration of the new Cunard White Star liner Queen Mary is in the "hands of a group of British artists selected with a view to displaying the best of British artistry and craftsmanship of the present day." The result of this selection, the line announces, finds the younger school of British artist predominant and the passenger accommodations modern, "but modern with the restraint that arises from a wholesome respect for tradition and the successful accomplishments of the past." The group is comprehensive in scope and fairly representative of the British school.*³⁷

Most likely the younger artists would have been thrilled to receive a commission from Cunard during the depression, and would have been happy to comply with the standards they set forth.³⁸

One artist in particular who stands out from the others is Edward Wadsworth. He was given the commission for two large-scale, paired paintings facing each other above a travertine mantelpiece and a buffet in the First Class (Cabin Class) Smoking Room on the Promenade Deck. In one of Arthur Morris' reports about Edward Wadsworth, he described him as "Modern. Intellectual. A man of means."³⁹ Arthur Morris worked with Wadsworth to develop and guide his overall painting design; however, once the Cunard Management found out about his closely paired surrealist paintings depicting a single column surrounded maritime paraphernalia, they redirected his designs after determining his artistic conception was too modern for an wood paneled "English gentleman club" smoking room, and recommended at least one of the paintings should contain a ship.⁴⁰ After the controversy, Wadsworth kept the surrealist The Sea depicting a single pier surrounded by maritime implements, but began the larger more traditional Dressed Overall at the Quay depicting a docked ocean liner.⁴¹ During the interwar period, he was solely working in the tempera medium that he extolled for its precision and luminosity and also focused on the abstraction of the sea.⁴²

F. ARCHITECTS, ARTISTS AND DESIGNERS

Arthur Joseph Davis (1878-1951) and his partner Charles Frederic Mewes (1860-1914) had one of the most famous and sought-after early-twentieth century architecture practices in the country, particularly in regards to ocean liner interior design. Their design commissions included fashionable hotels such as the London Ritz and other important buildings such as the Royal Automobile Club. Arthur Joseph Davis was a British architect who studied at the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris.⁴³ Charles Mewes heard about Davis's school successes from a professor, and hired Davis before he even graduated. Eventually, Davis became a senior partner, and collaborated on the design of several bank buildings, private commissions, Luton Hoo and Coombe Court, and the interiors of ocean liners, the Queen Mary and the Aquitania.

Charles Frederic Mewes, who was deceased when Arthur Davis designed the Queen Mary interiors, undoubtedly influenced his partner's ocean liner designs. Mewes revolutionized the interior designs of luxury hotels and ocean liners from his design collaborations with Cesar Ritz and interior designs of early twentieth century ocean liners. Cesar Ritz (1850-1918), a famous Swiss hotelier, hired Mewes to renovate the Place Vendome for his Hotel Ritz with the objective of maintaining the historic eighteenth century façades while providing for every modern amenity on the interior.⁴⁴ In 1903, the Hamburg-America Line (HAPAG) hired Mewes to design the interiors of the public rooms for their new Ocean Liner named the Amerika. He later designed several hotels and clubs in London. Mewes would later work on HAPAG's three-ship Emperor class from 1913-14 that resulted in the ultimate refinement and grandeur of his interior designs. Cunard was so impressed with his designs for HAPAG, they wanted to hire Mewes to design the interiors of the Lusitania and Mauritania in 1907.⁴⁵ However, HAPAG had an exclusive contract with Mewes, so Cunard had to wait and hired Mewes' British partner, Arthur Davis, to design the interiors of the Aquitania in 1914 and later the Franconia in 1923.⁴⁶ The large dimensions of the ships and the large scale of the public rooms gave Mewes and Davis the opportunity to design spaces equivalent to his designs ashore.

The American architect Benjamin Wistar Morris, chief interior architect for the Queen Mary along with Mewes and Davis, was trained at Trinity College in Hartford, Columbia University and the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris.⁴⁷ As an apprentice for Carrere & Hastings, he helped prepare the winning drawings for the New York Public Library Competition (1897).⁴⁸ From 1910 to 1915, he was a partner of Grant La Farge in the firm of La Farge & Morris. Morris had a well respected architectural career as part of the firm Morris & O'Conner. He designed important projects on Wall Street and the Renaissance Revival Style Cunard Building located at 25 Broadway on New York City's Lower Broadway in 1921. He was prominent in many professional organizations, such as the Art Commission, the Beaux-Arts Society of Architects, the Beaux-Arts Institute of Design, the American Institute of Architects, the National Commission of Fine Arts, and the Architectural League of New York.⁴⁹

1. Design Approach

The design of the RMS Queen Mary was required to satisfy numerous and often conflicting, concerns. From a practical bottom-line perspective, Cunard's management may have preferred conservative interior design schemes comprised of durable, economical materials that would withstand numerous crossings. However, the ship was more than merely a mode of transportation; it was a high-profile international symbol of British achievement in the interwar period. The ship was expected to meet the highest standards of contemporary style, a precedent already embraced by competing shipping companies. However, from the traveler's perspective, an interior that incorporated the vanguard of contemporary design to the point that it appeared unfamiliar and/or uncomfortable was potentially alienating for passengers and, in turn, the Cunard Line.

As a result, the ship's interior design schemes appear to have taken a relatively conservative or moderate, versus avant-garde, approach in order to address the diverse constituencies regarding passenger comfort, high style, and reliable durability. The uncertain economic climate of the 1930s, which had already delayed the ship's construction by several years, was undoubtedly another concern that likely encouraged conservatism and moderation. A period account by Mr. John de la Valette, who presented on the subject of the ship's design to the Royal Society for the Arts in 1936, spoke to the effect of the economic concerns of the day and encouraged a pragmatic approach,

... We must not overlook that a ship is not built to be an objet d'art, but to earn dividends by attracting passengers, not only those of to-day, but of all the twenty-five years to come, which represent the life-time of a modern passenger ship. This means that one cannot generalize on ship decoration in the abstract, but must consider its application to each trade by itself, and then in the light of the period during which the ship will have to run. Proved suitability is therefore of importance and one can well understand ship-owners being conservative, and adhering as long as possible to what has proved satisfactory in the past...⁵⁰

Mr. de la Valette continued on to outline three "design principles" that addressed not only the desirability of unity and variety in the RMS Queen Mary's design, but also included the necessity of providing reliable transport and the importance of passenger comfort,

1. The ship's structure and means of propulsion should be such as to enable her to perform with unfailing reliability the service that was demanded of her. This service was to accomplish in all weathers, all the year round, a fortnightly service between Southampton and New York, instead of the three-weekly departures hitherto maintained by the fastest ships afloat.
2. Next, her passenger accommodation was to embody everything which the long and carefully recorded experience of the two greatest transatlantic shipping companies in the world could suggest as useful or attractive to passengers.
3. In the fitment and decorations absolute comfort should be aimed at in combination with distinction and grace, while a sense of unity should prevail throughout all the variety which would be achieved.⁵¹

In retrospect, Mr. de la Valette's observations were astute. The ship would become renowned for its unfailing reliability during its 30+ period of service as a transatlantic ocean liner, recognized for its attention to passenger comfort, and celebrated for its unified and innovative use of a traditional material as the "Ship of Beautiful Woods."

2. Design and Class Distinctions

The ship was designed for three classes in mind: first (cabin) class, second (tourist) class and third class.⁵² Space was allocated according to class; third class accommodation located in the fore, the first (cabin) class located in the middle and the second (tourist) class in the aft. A hierarchy of design and decor was applied to the assigned class spaces. The design of the first class spaces were defined as a "combination of the Grand Hotel and the English country house" meaning that the designs were modern, and luxurious yet traditional.⁵³ The majority of the fine and decorative arts, exotic veneers and other specialty design finishes were applied to the first class spaces. The second class spaces were more traditional with some modern elements. The third class spaces were simple and utilitarian, devoid of excess ornamentation and exotic materials. However, distinctions between class decorations were not overly disparate. Great effort was made to avoid overt class distinctions in order to provide the same experience to everyone.

Unfortunately, as a result of the Long Beach conversion, the majority of third class and some of the second class spaces are no longer extant. The Third class smoking room, lounge, and staterooms no longer exist. Predominantly all of the second class public spaces with the exception of the dining saloon (partial), the A deck lounge and the smoking room, are intact. The original configuration of the second class staterooms have been renovated, as a result of their small size as occupancy was intended for two, three and four passengers. None of the crew spaces are extant. In addition, the original furnishings, finishes, floor coverings, fabrics and tableware - all items that would have added to the character of a space - are no longer interior elements of the ship. The disassociation of those items from their associated hierarchical space also makes their interpretation more difficult. The bulk of the third class and second class staterooms were located on the D deck that is now completely renovated for exhibition space.

Even though some of the second class and third class spaces are no longer extant, there are intact lounges representative of all three classes, the Promenade Deck First (Cabin) Class Main Lounge, the Main Deck Second (Tourist) Class Lounge and the Main Deck Third Class Garden Lounge. The interior design distinctions are still evident in these spaces.

The double height, first class main lounge (96 feet by 70 feet) is highly designed, featuring three levels of windows, torchere lamps, three onyx fireplaces, and multiple examples of fine art: Alfred J. Oakley and Gilbert Bayes' Unicorns in Battle, a carved gesso panel; Maurice Lambert's Symphony, bronze relief group; and Nicholas Babbs and Gilbert Bayes' bronze statuettes. Every detail of the First (Cabin) Class Main Lounge is designed and covered with luxurious materials and artworks.

In comparison to the First (Cabin) Class Main Lounge, the Second (Tourist) Class Lounge and Third Class Garden Lounge were considerably smaller. The design of the Second (Tourist) Class Lounge (80 feet by 70 feet) is simplified, the walls are covered with leather and Margot Gilbert's nine sketches, Dancing Through the Ages, and an etched glass convex panel adorn the room.

The design of the Third Class Garden Lounge (80 feet by 35 feet) is further simplified, the space is small and ceiling height low, with plain walls, a display case, and three jardinières, two with mirrors above and the other with a marquetry panel, embellish the room. Lesser quality ornamentation, space and finishes were assigned to the lower classes.⁵⁴

The distinction between classes is also evident in the circulation and public spaces. The public spaces and stateroom for the three classes were stacked vertically, thus the stairways were important circulation spaces for the classes to access their respective spaces. The first (cabin) class central stairway, second (tourist) class stairway aft, and the third class stairway fore, are all differentiated by the designer's use of ornamentation and materials. The first (cabin) class

central stairway has a generous stairhall with intermediate landings, decorative corner light fixtures, ceiling lights, jardinières, and veneered ash burr and elm walls.⁵⁵ The second (tourist) class stairway is decorated by a series of Georgian wire glass sandblasted panels, Sigmund Pollitzer's History of Transportation, silver bronze handrails, Pacific maple and Nigerian mahogany veneers and corner mirrors and glazed lighting.⁵⁶ The third class stairway risers and treads are narrow and the balustrade is constructed from oak.⁵⁷

3. New Materials and Technologies

The designers worked with a variety of new materials within the interior spaces. The new materials were often used to imitate exotic, rare and expensive materials, in addition to their durability and fireproof qualities. A variety of new materials were used for the flooring, such as Kokoleum, linotile, Korkoid, Rubilno and teakoid, and were mixed with applications of traditional materials including parquet wood floors and carpets.⁵⁸ Plastic laminates, such as Formica, were used for the decorative paneling, tabletops, and furnishings. Pioneering metal alloys including staybrite steel and nickel silver (silver bronze) were used extensively for hardware, lighting fixtures, handrails, balustrades, doors and panels.⁵⁹ The innovative use of new materials attributed to the modern interior aesthetics.

The modern spirit was also carried forward in the designers' embrace of new materials in staterooms. Linoleum and Formica were used extensively in staterooms to reflect the designers' mindfulness of the latest technological advances. Stateroom hardware, including hooks, door knobs and escutcheons, were composed of a newly developed synthetic material called Roanoid, manufactured by Rowan and Boden, Ltd., which “harmonizes with the color scheme, is warm to the touch, and remains clean indefinitely.”⁶⁰ Roanoid was also touted for its light weight, relative strength, fire-resistance and durability. Approximately 100,000 Roanoid fittings were used on the ship, on varied items from door knobs, hooks, handles, thermos-jug containers and towel bars.⁶¹ The color of the Roanoid was even chosen to harmonize with its setting. Even the way the fittings were secured to the woodwork was innovative; the Avri Patent eliminated screw heads allowing easy removal of fittings.

In addition to new materials, the ship also utilized the latest mechanical technologies. Bathrooms featured hot and cold, fresh and salt water choices for the passenger. Each private bathroom had an enclosed bath, wash basin and a toilet, with fixtures specifically designed for the RMS Queen Mary. The ship’s heating and ventilation systems were similarly innovative. The staterooms had heaters, called Thermovents, which were attractively housed in a custom surround and allowed for individual control by passengers. For first (cabin) class passengers, rooms were outfitted with circulation vents that enabled passengers to control their room’s distribution of warm and cold air.⁶² The electric clocks, about 370 were in staterooms and 600 overall, were controlled by two master clocks in the chartroom.⁶³

- Traditional Materials Used in a New Way: Wood and Glass

As is true throughout the ship, wood was used extensively in the staterooms and was the primary materials for architectural elements and objects of decorative art. The amount of wood in the staterooms varied by class, with first (cabin) class rooms sporting the greatest use of wood, often with architectural details such as veneered walls and moldings as well as finely crafted furniture. However, regardless of class, the staterooms shared similar examples of wood crafted objects. Examples include dressers, desks, tables, cabinets, dressing tables, closets, headboards, and wardrobes, most of which were constructed during 1934 to 1936 as built-in furniture in order to prevent movement during ocean crossings.

The Queen Mary was given the nickname “Ship of Beautiful Woods” owing to the fact that fifty-six of the world’s rarest woods were used as interior veneer. While wood is used abundantly in the ship’s public spaces, wood functions primarily as an architectural element

(e.g., comprising walls, ceilings, etc.) rather than as a decorative art material. There are some outstanding examples of the decorative use of wood, such as the large and finely rendered map by Macdonald Gill located in the first (cabin) class Grand Salon, which also functioned to orient passengers to the ship's route and location. Other examples are Shipbuilding Through the Ages, ten wooden relief panels executed by Bainbridge Copnall in the first (cabin) class Grand Salon on the R deck, the two extant limewood carvings Summer and Autumn executed by Norman J. Forest in the second (tourist) class vestibule on the promenade deck, and the three limewood carved screens executed by James Woodford in the First (Cabin) Class Smoking Room on the Promenade Deck. The utilization of exotic woods is highlighted in marquetry panels- one is located in the third class garden dining room and others were originally located in some of the first (cabin) class staterooms.

Decorative glass is a primary material, manipulated by a wide variety of techniques, and is used extensively in the ship's public spaces as a supporting design element. The Shipbuilder said, "The treatment of the various public rooms relies largely for effect on the decorative value of glass, which, with the modern technique of tinting, etching and sand-blasting, makes the material particularly well suited to schemes in the modern style."⁶⁴ In some cases, glass elements emphasize various on-board activities, such as Charles Cameron Bailie's Fish in Aquarium, whose marine life-themed panels once decorated the second (tourist) class Swimming Bath, or the first (cabin) class Verandah Grill's balustrade with glass panels that reference the dramatic arts celebrated throughout the room. Other examples of decorative glass function as narratives and address primarily historical themes, such as Jacob Drew's Jason and the Golden Fleece located in the first (cabin) class Grand Salon, or the History of Transportation series by Sigmund Pollitzer along the second (tourist) class aft stairway. Numerous designers had a hand in creating the ship's decorative glass. The primary manufacturer of the glass used in lighting fittings, screens, balustrades and public spaces was the London Sand Blast Decorative Glass Works, Ltd.⁶⁵

- Built-In Ensembles and Visual Themes

From a design perspective, the use of built-in furniture served to create a unified visual statement in which a total design concept was realized. As a result, the 1934 to 1936 design framework of the staterooms is often still extant, even despite missing original elements, such as textiles, freestanding furniture, and other details. Few examples of freestanding furniture from the 1934 to 1936 period remain in the staterooms; however, reproduction chairs from the period of City of Long Beach ownership are extant.

⁶⁴ Shipbuilder, p. 146.

⁶⁵ Shipbuilder, p. 261.

The RMS Queen Mary's decorative arts were vital in order to express visual continuity. While numerous designers had a role in the design of the ship's many large-scale public spaces, the public rooms and passages were intended to function together as a whole and unified composition, despite their varied uses. To accomplish this effect, the ship's public spaces, while unique, generally exhibit a carefully executed attention to detail. Despite the ship's usage of a wide range of textures and materials, all individual objects and public spaces exhibit an exceedingly high level of craftsmanship and, in turn continuity, in their overall quality.

Most of the ship's original decorative furnishings, such as freestanding chairs and tables as well as floor coverings and other textiles, are no longer extant. However, many of the public spaces still strongly convey their original design intent due to the visual interest and strength of their architectural elements. These elements include columns, custom doors, ornamental grilles, display cases and jardinières, which, along with the detail expressed in purely architectural elements, such as wall coverings and the spaces themselves, function as a framework that defines many of the ship's public spaces even despite the missing original objects. Repetition - of materials and design elements - is commonly used in the ship's decorative design and strengthens the ship's visual impact. Repetition creates motifs and unifies visual themes, as is illustrated by the use of consistent railings throughout many of the ship's stairwells and passageways, either in nickel silver or staybrite silver.

- Lighting

Light fixtures are a key aspect of the ship's public spaces and a primary example of decorative art. The vast majority of extant 1934 to 1936 era stateroom lighting is in former first (cabin) class rooms. The specific fixtures, repeated throughout numerous rooms, are a Streamline Moderne style pair of metal and glass lights that are mounted to the corners of recessed king-size headboards. Other 1934 to 1936 era decorative elements that appear in numerous staterooms are several decorative clocks, most commonly, in a minimally ornamented wall-mounted design.

Light fixtures, of which many types are extant on the RMS Queen Mary, were often rendered in curving Streamline style forms and were constructed of bronze and glass. General Electric Company, Ltd., in collaboration with Paul Guieu, architects Arthur Davis, Benjamin Morris, and supervisor J. C. Whipp, designed fixtures for the majority of the ship's first (cabin) class public spaces.⁶⁶ Fixtures in second (tourist) class and third class were also designed by General Electric Company in partnership with the Cunard White Star Line.

⁶⁶ Shipbuilder, p. 222.

Of the extant lighting in public spaces, ceiling fixtures predominate. Some outstanding examples of 1934-1936 period fixtures have also survived, such as the pylon/torcheres located in the Queen's Salon (Cabin Class Lounge). As stated in The Shipbuilder, lighting design was intended to embody luxury and utility,

*Much has been heard of late of the relationship of art to industry. It would be difficult to find a more perfect illustration of this theme than that presented by the lighting of this magnificent vessel, where utility and artistic fitness have been so happily combined.*⁶⁷

Lighting on the RMS Queen Mary functioned not only to provide atmospheric effects, but to express the sleek geometric forms typical of Art Deco and Streamline Moderne styles.

In 1922, she married Sir Edward Hilton Young (later Baron Kennet of the Dene), and by this time her work was well accepted by the art circles. She exhibited at the Royal Academy from 1913-47, and the International Society, Grosvenor Galleries, 1923, and elsewhere. Her first solo London show was in 1927. In 1934, King George V commissioned his bust from her. She was elected an Associate member of the Royal Society of British Sculptors in 1928, became a full member in 1937, and was the first woman to serve on the council. Her works consisted of busts, statues, memorials and statuettes. Died on July 24, 1947 in London. A memorial exhibition was held at the Mansard Gallery in 1947. Author of the Self-Portrait of an Artist, published after her passing in 1949.

Doris Clare Zinkeisen (1898-)¹⁰³

Mural, portrait and figure painter specializing in theatrical designs, who was born in Gareloch, Scotland. Elder sister of artist Anna Zinkeisen. At an exceptionally young age she won a scholarship to attend the Royal Academy Schools, where she went on to win many metals. She shared a studio with her sister until she married in 1927 to naval officer, Grahame Johnstone. She exhibited at the Royal Academy and other London Venues, and in 1929 and 1930 won medals at the Paris Salon. During the 1930s she participated in many exhibitions to design posters and station panels for London Transport. During World War II, she served as an auxiliary nurse in the casualty department at St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington, and later the War Artists' Advisory Commission commissioned her to produce paintings. However, she was best known for her theatrical designs, the first which date from 1922. These included productions for Noel Coward, Ralph Richardson, and Laurence Olivier, in addition to ballet and films.

Anna Katrina Zinkeisen (1901-1976)¹⁰⁴

Mural, portrait and figure painter who was born in Kilcreggan, Scotland, on August 28, 1901. Younger sister of artist Doris Clare Zinkeisen. At the exceptionally young age of 15, she won a scholarship to attend the Royal Academy Schools, where she went on to win many metals. She began to exhibit at the Royal Academy in 1921, and won an award for Wedgewood plaques at the International Exhibition at Paris in 1925. During the 1930s, she participated in many exhibitions to design posters and station panels for London Transport. She became widely known as a painter for society portraits and her sitters included Prince Philip, Lord Beaverbrook and Alexander Fleming. In 1928, she was elected a member of the Royal Society of Painters in Oil, and later member of the Royal Society of Portrait Painters and Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts. She married Colonel G.R.N. Heseltine. During World War II, she served as an auxiliary nurse in the casualty department at St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington. When the surgeon became aware she was an artist and her own home was bombed, she was asked to make pathological and clinical paintings of wounds.

III. FINE AND DECORATIVE ARTS

A. FINE AND DECORATIVE ARTS DEFINED

Fine arts may be defined as designed objects with a primarily aesthetic, versus utilitarian, function. The term “fine arts” is also used to refer to a relatively small subset of artistic practices, specifically, painting, sculpture, drawing, printmaking, and photography. In contrast, other mediums, such as ceramics, woodworking, and needlework, for example, are often considered to be decorative arts rather than fine arts and are not included within the fine arts distinction. Examples of fine art – primarily sculptures, drawings and paintings - are located throughout the RMS Queen Mary’s large-scale public spaces and tend to be many of the ship’s most widely recognized artworks. In contrast, very few examples of fine arts are currently located in the staterooms. The fine arts inventoried for this project tend to match the traditional, commonly used definition of fine arts as objects with a primarily artistic function and belong to the generally recognized fine art genres.

The decorative arts may be defined as custom designed objects with both an aesthetic and utilitarian function versus designed objects that are valued primarily for their aesthetic qualities. Examples of decorative art are found throughout the ship in large-scale public spaces and, particularly, in staterooms. These decorative art objects include examples of interior design, such as furniture, lighting, and, in some cases, architectural elements; however, within the tight spatial context of an ocean liner, the division between decorative arts and architectural elements is often blurred. On the RMS Queen Mary, architectural elements – doors, walls, and structural elements – have a high level of design and thus deserve attention not only as “architecture” but as objects of decorative art. For the purposes of this report, the scope of decorative art has been expanded to consider a range of designed objects and includes some examples of architectural elements, including built-in furniture and character-defining architectural elements with aesthetic qualities. Designed utilitarian objects, such as heating and ventilation, hardware and bathroom fixtures are also considered under the general category of decorative arts because they contribute both functionally and aesthetically to the interior design scheme of the ship.

B. FINE AND DECORATIVE ARTS IN PUBLIC SPACES

Unlike the smaller scale decorative arts, of which numerous examples have been replaced or lost since the ship's construction circa 1934, many of the ship's fine arts are relatively intact. The historical continuity among the ship's fine arts is due in part to the fact that these artworks were often large and custom designed for a particular space. Most, if not all, are character-defining.

As is true throughout the entire ship, the artworks are beautifully rendered and clearly intended to communicate a message of luxury, ease and distinction to passengers. Many of the ship's artworks tend to punctuate a room, such as Alfred J. Oakley's and Gilbert Bayes' Unicorns in Battle. This monumental carved gesso panel, located in the Queen's Salon, formerly the First Class/Cabin Class Lounge, is the most prominent artwork of several located in the room, which defines the space's identity. In contrast, the ship's decorative arts often appear to function primarily as "background" in order to subtly express a unified design scheme that is notable for its high level of craft and rich materials.

Alfred J. Oakley's and Gilbert Bayes, Unicorns in Battle

The Cunard Line executives dissuaded artists from unsettling themes, specifically troublesome marine themes, as they didn't want to remind passengers they were on a ship.¹⁰⁵ As a result, marine and nautical themes do not constitute the bulk of the fine art subject matter. On the rare occasion when the subject matter is marine, the nautical portrayal is idealized and serene or part of a story. The first (cabin) class smoking room features James Woodford's three carved panels depicting swimmers, mermaids, marine life and ship activities, and Edward Wadsworth's two oil on canvas paintings, Dressed Overall at the Quay and The Sea, which depicts a docked ship and a symbolic pier. As mentioned earlier, Cunard managed the subject matter used in Edward Wadsworth paintings, and the end result are non-confrontational marine backdrops. Other prominent paintings are Charles Pears' The Mauretania Arriving at Rosyth, Bainbridge Copnall's Shipbuilding Through the Ages, and Kenneth Shoesmith's Richard Hakluyt Recording the Voyages of the Elizabethan Sailors and Samuel Pepys at the Royal Dockyard, Deptford.

Edward Wadsworth Dressed Overall at the Quay; Bainbridge Copnall's Shipbuilding Through the Age; Charles Pears, The Mauretania Arriving at Rosyth

The fine arts located in the ship's public spaces were often used to uniquely define the atmospheric quality and emphasize the social activities that occurred there. For example, Kenneth Shoesmith's painting, Flower Market, which is located in the former First Class Drawing Room and First Class Catholic Chapel, depicts the peaceful transactions of a flower market among a serene port backdrop. This painting is large and encompasses nearly the entire wall over an onyx fireplace of the oval-shaped room. Its size, prominence, and subdued subject matter enabled it to augment the room's social function for women and non-smokers and was also well-suited to the ship's Catholic observances that occurred in the room. Nearly every other example of fine art functions in a similarly complementary manner in order to augment on-board activities rather than obtusely challenge passengers or provide a stark visual contrast.

Kenneth Shoemith Flower Market

The subject matter for the artworks was chosen to please both British and American sensibilities. The motivation behind Cunard's commission of the American architect Benjamin Wistar Morris onto the British design team was to incorporate design motifs for the tastes of American passengers. The themes of the fine and decorative art romanticize the lifestyle, landscape and history of both America and Great Britain. For example, the American lifestyle is represented in the bronze sculptures by Gilbert Bayes, Alfred Oakley, and Nicholson Babbs, located in the first (cabin) class main lounge romanticize the American West; and the ballroom dancers in the Margot Gilbert's History of Dance, located in the second (tourist) class lounge also reflects American themes. Even the design of the first (cabin) class smoking room included an American bar in addition to strategically positioned call buttons for British passengers who preferred to be catered. The British landscape is portrayed in paintings such as Betram Nicholl's Sussex Landscape, Algernon Newton's Evening on the Avon, and Philip Connard's Merrie England, which idealize the bucolic English countryside and lifestyle. Overall the themes used in the fine and decorative arts were universal and easy to understand, so a general audience, both American and British, could appreciate and understand their significance.

Allan Howes Cowboy and Bronco; Algernon Newton's Evening on the Avon

Other unifying themes tying the fine art together are historical, such as Margot Gilbert's Dancing Through the Ages, Sigmund Pollitzer's History of Transportation, A. Duncan Carse's Birds of the New World and Birds of the Old World, Alfred R. Thomson's The Royal Jubilee Week, and Dane Laura Knight's The Mills Circus. Greek mythology, for example Jacob Drew's The Golden Fleece and the Austin Crompton Roberts' Observation Bar balustrade, and lounge Gilbert Bayes' Unicorns in Battle.

Margot Gilbert Dancing Through the Ages; Sigmund Pollitzer History of Transportation; Alfred R. Thomson The Royal Jubilee Week

Most of the fine arts on board the ship were constructed with only a few basic categories of materials. Many of the ship's fine arts involve wood, often in carved relief or as sculpture, reflecting a spectrum of rare and unusual species. Another frequent art form on the RMS Queen Mary is painting, which was most often on canvas, or in some cases, leather and wood. Bronze and plaster were used in a handful of examples, as well as mosaics and etched glass.

As noted above, many of the ship's most largest and most important artworks are relatively intact and still occupy their original locations. The majority of the large art pieces are located in the public spaces, areas accessible to passengers of a specific class to gather for entertainment, reflection, socializing, exercising or eating instead of their private staterooms. Smaller and more easily moved objects have been relocated to several exhibit spaces located on the ship. Photographs from the 1934 to 1936 period, and afterwards, reveal that the ship was once laden with a variety of small scale paintings and other artworks that adorned not only public spaces but the staterooms. Unfortunately those smaller fine arts were moveable and not affixed to a surface; as a result they were either sold or moved off the ship.

C. INVENTORY DATABASE CLASSIFICATIONS

Each data field used in the custom inventory database is described in detail below. A summary table of surveyed items is provided in Attachment C, Summary of Surveyed Items and a copy of the database is reproduced in Attachment E, Inventory Database.

- ID: Computer-generated, in order to ensure a unique number for each record.
- Space: The name of the space, which is generally denoted by a room number for staterooms (e.g., M114) or a room name for public rooms (e.g., Royal Salon). The historic name(s) are located in parentheses following the contemporary name, for example Grand Salon (Cabin Class Restaurant and Private Dining Rooms). In order to facilitate sorting by space name, retail shops are coded under "Retail" and exhibit spaces are coded under “Exhibit,” for example Retail: Tee Shirt Territory (Lecture Room). The space field is coded to a deck map for reference. The deck maps are included in Attachment B, Deck Plans Showing Spaces Surveyed.

- Room: If the space contains more than one room, an additional room name or letter (e.g., A, B, hall, bath, etc.) is referenced in this field in order to identify the room more specifically. The room field is coded to a deck map for reference. The deck maps are included in Attachment B, Deck Plans Showing Spaces Surveyed.
- Type: The items are categorized into one of nine types, which comprise a general organizational system, as listed below:

Architecture	Furniture, Freestanding
Bathroom Fixture	Hardware
Decorative Art	Heating and Ventilation
Fine Art	Lighting
Furniture, Built-In

- A tenth type, “Room Photo” refers to images taken to document the overall context of the space and do not refer to any particular item. In most cases, there are numerous room photos for public spaces and two room photos for staterooms: one to document the primary space and another for the bathroom.
- Subtype: The type field is further divided by subtype. There are 70 subtype categories, as listed below. Subtypes with items that are generally considered “valuable assets” are marked with an asterisk.

- Deck: The deck where the item is located (e.g., Main Deck, A Deck).
- Class: The historically used class name of the space: 1st, 2nd or 3rd. The name is followed in parentheses by other historically used terms that refer to class, for example 1st Class (Cabin Class).
- Original Location: Items checked under this category are original to their location.
- Location in Room: The item's general location, either fore, aft, starboard, or port. Given that most items in the staterooms are built-in or attached, this field was used primarily for items in the ship's public spaces.
- Relocation Notes: If the item is known to have been relocated, this field provides the item's original location.
- Quantity: The number of items found in the space, which is often only one. Exceptions include instances where multiple examples of identical items are located in a space, such as a series of lighting fixtures.
- Contributing/Noncontributing: Contributing features generally refer to those elements that were constructed during a defined historic period (e.g., period of significance) and still retain and exhibit sufficient integrity to convey a sense of history. In contrast, noncontributing features may have been constructed or installed during a defined historic period but have been so altered that they no longer retain sufficient integrity to convey a sense of history. Most of the items inventoried as a part of this project are considered contributing to the RMS Queen Mary's original construction period (1934-1936); however, an item from this period in poor condition may have lost its historic integrity to the point that it is no longer considered contributing. A summary of contributing features are included in Attachment D, Summary of Valuable Assets.
- Valuable Asset: Items checked under this category are considered character-defining and therefore vital to track for future monitoring and inventory purposes. The valuable assets are the original fine and decorative arts, lighting, heating, architecture, and furniture (freestanding and built-in) imperative to the period of significance and the overall design of the ship. A summary of valuable assets are included in Attachment D, Summary of Valuable Assets.

Annual Inventory: Items checked under this category are valuable assets recommended to be inventoried on an annual basis. The annual inventory of valuable assets includes items located in the public spaces, circulation areas, exhibits, offices, stairways and several of the staterooms. These items are predominantly comprised of fine art, decorative art and custom designed free-standing furniture pieces. A summary of the annual inventory is included in Attachment E, Summary of Annual Inventory.

- Semi-Annual Inventory: Items checked under this category are valuable assets recommended to be inventoried on a semi-annual basis. These items are located within the staterooms, public spaces and exhibits. They include attached built-in furniture, mirrors and heating. A summary of the semi-annual inventory is included in Attachment F, Summary of Semi-Annual Inventory.
- Artist/Designer: The name of the item's artist or designer, if known.
- Origin Date: The date the item was created. If no specific date is located, the field is either left blank, assigned as the ship's period of construction (1934-1936), or assigned to a subsequent period of renovations, if known.
- Measurements: The measurements of the item in inches, unless otherwise noted. The order of the measurement field is the item's height by width by depth (e.g. 12" x 6" x 4"). Taking measurements was found to be a time consuming task during the first days of the survey. Therefore, it was decided to limit the measurement task to the most important items located in the public rooms.
- Materials: The construction materials of the item. Given that many items in the ship's staterooms have added non-historic materials (e.g., replacement granite tops), this field is completed primarily for the unique original items in the ship's public spaces.
- Condition: The condition assessment, determined by a qualified member of the PCR team, notes the general condition in which an item was found. There are four assessment levels: poor; fair; good; or excellent. Specific factors in the assessment may vary somewhat, depending on the specific item (e.g., utilitarian items in continual use may have a relatively low threshold, for example, while the ship's unique fine and decorative art items must meet a higher threshold). Items in excellent condition are pristine and consist entirely of original materials. Items in good condition may have some minor wear or surface damage yet still consist entirely of original materials or high quality replacement materials. Items in fair condition often exhibit minor to moderate damage or wear and may be missing some of their original materials, or the item's original materials have been replaced with materials of lesser quality. Items in poor condition have sustained substantial damage or may be missing a significant portion of their original materials. Additional comments regarding the item's condition, if any, are located in the Notes field.
- Description: A brief description of the item.

- Notes: Details regarding the item's condition (see Condition, above).
- Reference Sources: The page number of either one and/or two primary texts in which the item is directly mentioned, either The Shipbuilder and Marine Engine-Builder (The Shipbuilders Press, 1936) and/or Douglas Murrell Hinkey's The Art of the RMS Queen Mary (Gumbiner Foundation and Hippodrome Galleries of FHP Healthcare, 1994).
- Observation Date: The date the item was surveyed.
- Photo Range: This field lists unique numbers of photographs taken by the PCR teams of each item. These additional photographs are not included within the database, but are provided in a separate digital file for current and future reference purposes.
- Main Photo: This field links a single item photo to the inventory record. In some cases of exceptional fine and decorative art, two photos are provided.
- Second Photo: This field provides a link to a second photo of the item.
- Recorder: The name of the PCR team member who surveyed the item.

The following fields were incorporated into the electronic version of the database to accommodate the City's annual inventory review process:

- Date Verified: The date the item was reviewed.
- Reviewer: The name of the City or Queen Mary staff member who reviewed the item.
- Location Verified: The verification that the item is still located in the space as when originally inventoried. There are four options: yes, not surveyed, or missing.
- Condition Changed? The condition assessment notes the general condition in which an item is found as compared to the original survey. There are two choices: yes or no. If "yes" the condition has changed and if "no" the condition has not changed.
- Condition: If the "Condition Changed?" field was altered from the original inventory and checked "yes," this condition field assesses the general condition in which the item is found. There are four assessment levels: poor; fair; good; or restored. (see Condition, in the Database Description Fields section above).
- Notes: Details regarding a change in the item's condition or other notable changes from the original survey above.

D. DESCRIPTION OF FINE AND DECORATIVE ARTS IN PUBLIC SPACES

The following provides a description of the public spaces and the associated fine and decorative arts in those spaces:

- Verandah Grill, Sun Deck

The intimate Verandah Grill (29 feet by 68 feet), an exclusive first (cabin) class à la carte restaurant, cocktail lounge and nightclub, was entirely designed by the artist Doris Zinkeisen.¹⁰⁶ She was responsible for selecting the floor coverings, furniture, and lighting, in addition to painting the six oil-on-canvas murals themed around entertainment that surround the room and one oil-on-canvas self-portrait. A custom-designed ornamental moulded-glass balustrade surrounds the dance floor. Other furniture associated with the room are exhibited on the D Deck, and include a piano, two chairs, shelves, a grille and a curtain. The space has undergone extensive alterations, but was recently restored; the balustrade was re-assembled, the murals were re-hung and covered with protective plastic, and reproduction black carpet and drapes were installed. The original footprint of the space has been altered; the wall once enclosing the no longer extant kitchen and bar was removed to create additional square footage. The central mural was damaged during the war, so Doris Zinkeisen later restored the paintings.¹⁰⁷

¹⁰⁶ The Queen Mary (Shipbuilder), pp. 143-144.

¹⁰⁷ Hinkey, p. 62.

Overall the murals are in good condition, with the exception of discoloration and some staining. The protective covering is not taut in multiple areas causing the entrapment of dirt and insects.

- Royal Salon (Cabin Class Smoking Room), Promenade Deck

The Queen Mary (Shipbuilder) defined the character of the Royal Salon (42’ x 69’ x 22’), formerly the first (cabin) class smoking room, as follows “fewer concessions to the modern spirit have been made here than any other room, the character of the room being secured by the solid comfort a typically English club or country-house smoking room.”¹⁰⁸ The English brown oak and walnut burr (burled) veneered room was designed by Messrs. Trollope and Sons. Edward Wadsworth was commissioned to paint the two facing large oil-on-canvas paintings, The Sea above the travertine mantel and Dressed Overall at the Quay above the buffet. James Woodford designed three double-sided reliefs; two flank the fireplace and the other is located in the fore port corner. The six cast-bronze sconces were also designed by James Woodford. They once featured “play-card figures set against a background of tobacco leaves,” now gone.¹⁰⁹ An American cocktail bar is located on the starboard side of the room. - The Long Gallery, Promenade Deck

The Long Gallery (118 feet by 20 feet) originally functioned as an informal meeting room and an ante-room to the ballroom.¹¹⁰ The Long Gallery featured Betram Nicholl's Sussex Landscape at the fore and Algernon Newton's Evening on the Avon at the aft. Post World War II, the long gallery was reconfigured and divided into the Shake Shack, Board Room, Chelsea Corridor and Regent Room. The ballroom is no longer extant. A few of the original high back arm chairs and end tables are scattered around the ship.

• Observation Lounge and Cocktail Bar, Promenade Deck

The Observation Lounge and Cocktail Bar (70 feet by 24 feet) was a semicircular bar that used the handcrafted barrel as a motif for the design of the overall space, bar and furniture.¹¹¹ The space has undergone multiple alterations and was recently restored. The room features A.R. Thomson’s oil painting, The Royal Jubilee Week, 1935. The painting is in fair condition, but a brown residue from a liquid has dripped over the surface. Another feature is the balustrade designed by A. Crompton Roberts, punctuated with four metal and enameled pylons, which is in good condition. Originally there were twenty-one exterior windows, however post World War II the space was expanded onto the deck; only two original windows remain and twenty-one original awning windows with frosted textured glass and an etched wave pattern. The ceiling lights are not original; however, an original ceiling light is stored in an office located on A Deck.

- Queen's Salon (Cabin Class Main Lounge), Promenade Deck

Located in the center of the Promenade Deck, the Queen's Salon (96 feet by 70 feet by 30 feet), formerly the first (cabin) class main lounge, was originally referred to as "the centre of social life of the vessel."¹¹² The main lounge was used for entertainment, such as movies, performances and informal social gatherings. The focal point is Alfred J. Oakley and Gilbert Bayes gesso, relief panel, Unicorns in Battle, above the golden onyx fireplace mantel. Originally Charles Cameron Baillie's mantel clock was on top of the mantel and is now displayed in the Art Gallery. Two smaller golden onyx fireplace mantels on the port and starboard walls have peach-colored mirrors centered above. The proscenium above the stage on the aft wall is highlighted by Maurice Lambert's Symphony, a bronze relief sculpture group. Coordinated bronze reliefs are also placed over the flanking side doors. Four niches originally displayed bronze statuettes of the American West; Allan Howes' Cowboy and Bronco and Alfred J. Oakley's Bison are still displayed on bow-front cabinets. Two other bronze statuettes, S. Nicholson Babb's Jupiter and Europa and Gilbert Bayes' Sea King's Daughter, are now exhibited in the ship's Art Gallery. Pylon torcheres, wall sconces, windows and other light fixtures accentuate the interior elegance and drama. Overall, the Queen's Salon has high integrity with the exception of damage to torcheres, built-in furniture and fireplace mantels.

- Retail: Piccadilly Circus Shops (Main Hall & Shopping Centre), Promenade Deck

The first class shopping area was originally on the Main Deck, later renamed the Piccadilly Circus Shops. At the head of the stairway, was Lady Hilton Young's marble medallion of Her Majesty Queen Mary, however the medallion has been replaced with a cast replica.¹¹³ Opposite of the medallion, is Maurice Lambert's Sport and Speed, a large plaster frieze decorating the cornice of the retail shop. Wide corridors lead to a series of shops fronted with specialty designed display cases and lighting. The spaces on the main hall originally included a drawing room, library, retail shops, lecture room, music room and children's playroom. All of these spaces have been converted into retail shops, with the exception of the children's playroom that presently functions as a coffee shop.

The first (cabin) class drawing room also served as a catholic chapel. The space has now been converted to use as a retail souvenir shop. Kenneth Shoemith’s the Flower Market occupies the aft wall above an onyx fireplace. The painting and mantelpiece are in good condition. The opposite fore wall had an altarpiece and Kenneth Shoemith’s Madonna of the Atlantic concealed behind a folding screen, Kenneth Shoemith’s Mediterranean Harbor Scene. The altar piece and Madonna of the Atlantic have been moved to the Art Gallery and the Mediterranean Harbor Scene is concealed behind a wall on the lower decks.

The Travel Bureau was the central ticket counter for first class passengers. After World War II the Travel Bureau was remodeled, the most significant changes were the insertion of etched glass panels on the entrance wall. The interior features built-in cabinets used to hold miscellaneous brochures and tickets and the original world map located on the fore wall. The room is in good condition; the world map needs conservation attention.

- Britannia Salon (Tourist Class Main Lounge), Main Deck

The second (tourist) class main lounge (80 feet by 70 feet by 16 feet), currently the Britannia Salon, was the social center for the second class.¹¹⁴ The space was used for dancing, entertainment and film screenings. Margot Gilbert’s nine oil sketches on leather panels tell the story of Dancing Though the Ages; the sketches adorn the otherwise austere space. The walls are covered with appliqué leather presently painted in green, ivory and silver. A decorative, etched art glass panel on the fore wall is flanked by two oil sketches. The room is in fair condition, but the oil sketches have conservation needs requiring the attention of a conservator.

The semi-circular third class garden lounge (80 feet by 35 feet) is the only extant third class public space.¹¹⁵ The garden-themed lounge features weathered sycamore panels and three jardinières located on the fore wall. Over the central jardinière is a marquetry panel entitled Garden Scene, the panel is faded but otherwise is in good condition. The aft wall has a display case between the two entry doors dating from a later renovation. The room is in good condition overall.

• 2nd Class (Tourist Class) Library and Writing Room, Main Deck

The general character of the L-shaped 2nd Class (Tourist Class) Library and Writing Room, a space for study and worship, was originally described as “subdued and refined, the mural treatment being in veneers of golden ash burr and bird’s eye maple, with contrasting pieces in a curiously marked olive ash.”¹¹⁶ One section of the space was lined with bookshelves and the other open with tables for study. The library featured two of Kenneth Shoemith’s octagonal paintings, Richard Hakluyt Recording the Voyages of the Elizabethan Sailors and Samuel Pepys at the Royal Dockyard, Deptford. Both paintings have been relocated to the Board Room (Long Gallery), Promenade Deck. Concealed behind sliding doors was an altar and Kenneth Shoemith’s Our Lady of the Seas (relocated to the Art Gallery, R Deck). The library and writing room has been divided into three storage rooms and a hallway. Even though the art was relocated and the space reconfigured, the general character-defining features of the library and writing room persist, the rectangular ceiling lights, concealed lights fixtures, bookshelves and veneer are extant.

The Hotel Queen Mary Registration Area originally functioned as the entrance and circulation area for first class passengers and has subsequently been significantly altered. The majority of the items located in this area have been relocated from other spaces with the exception of the lighting. The three fine art marquetry panels: Charles Cameron Baillie’s Hunting Scene (original to the Third Class Smoking Room), Birds in Flight (original to a first class stateroom), and Landscape Scene, are all in good condition with the exception of some fading.

- Grand Salon (Cabin Class Restaurant), R Deck

The most elaborate and largest space is the first class (cabin class) restaurant, renamed the Grand Salon, located in the center of the R Deck. The space is 143 feet long by 118 feet wide, and the ceiling height extends 27 feet, through two decks.¹¹⁷ Originally there was seating for 815 people, all of the first class passengers.¹¹⁸ Various decorative and fine arts adorn the space, including Duncan Carse’s two oil on canvas paintings, Birds of the New World and Birds of the Old World, Philip Connard’s Merrie England, MacDonald Gill’s decorative map of the North Atlantic, Walter and Donald Gilbert’s bronze grille doors and molded glass panels, Earth, Air, Fire and Water, Bainbridge Copnall’s Shipbuilding Through the Ages, and Jason Drew’s Jason and the Golden Fleece. There were also four attached private dining room: two dining rooms were entered through Walter and Donald Gilbert’s bronze grille doors. All contained works of fine art. The only extant artwork from the private dining rooms are Dame Laura Knight’s The Mills Circus, relocated to the Art Gallery, and Gilbert’s grille doors. Overall, the Grand Salon is in good condition. Some of the fine art including Merrie England and Birds of the Old and New World need the attention of a conservator.

E. FINE AND DECORATIVE ARTS IN STATEROOMS

At present, there are only a few examples of fine and decorative arts in the ship's staterooms. Several Main Deck suites do contain prints and photographs; however, many of these appear either new or of relatively low quality. Of the few older art objects located in staterooms, the majority are small-scale, newer, poorer quality, either freestanding or wall-mounted. It appears likely that many of these objects were added to the staterooms at some point since the RMS Queen Mary arrived in Long Beach in 1967. As documented in period photographs, the staterooms previously contained a wide variety of small-scale artworks that are no longer extant.

Only a small number of fine arts located in the staterooms remain extant. The headboard and dressing area in the M119 Churchill Suite are embellished with hand-painted autumn symbols. There is one extant marquetry panel in the M005 stateroom. Another large marquetry panel of birds in flight was once installed in the headboard of a first class stateroom, but has been relocated to the A Deck registration area.

Examples of decorative arts originally installed in the RMS Queen Mary's staterooms sought to provide comfortable and up-to-date conveniences for passengers as well as express a high standard of aestheticism and luxury. While publications of the period emphasize the ship's "modern" style, the term modern within this context appears to refer primarily to passenger conveniences rather than Modern style as espoused by Le Corbusier and other architects of the period.

While Modern style celebrated minimal ornament, machine-like forms and maximum efficiency, staterooms on the RMS Queen Mary were individually handcrafted in the finest materials available – hardly a nod to the ideas advocated by Modern style proponents. Sleek forms referencing contemporary design do appear on the ship in individual elements, but primarily in the context of decoration rather than by design. In general, the staterooms' decorative art is not closely aligned with emerging concepts in contemporary art and design of the period, as is stated in The Shipbuilder, there appears to have been a purposeful attempt to mitigate any overly “modern” influences in the ship’s design concept, but is more reflective of the turn-of-the-century Arts and Crafts and Aesthetic movements.

Brilliant in conception and elegant in execution, the passenger spaces reveal, down to their smallest detail, a fine appreciation of aesthetic fitness. Not a harsh note is struck anywhere. The modern influence undoubtedly exists, but rampant modernity has been studiously and successfully avoided. The result is everywhere delightful, the beautifully balanced decorations and appointments combining to produce an atmosphere of rich, although unobtrusive, luxury which pervades the whole vessel.¹¹⁹

While Modern style may not have been fully realized on the RMS Queen Mary, the ship’s designers clearly embraced the modern, or contemporary, spirit, in the sense of current or up-to-date, conveniences of the period. Numerous rooms featured individual bathrooms, electric plugs, ventilation systems, telephones, and Thermos jugs, which were used in First Class (Cabin Class) and Second Class (Tourist Class) rooms to provide iced water for passengers. In addition to the emphasis on convenience and individual climate control, special attention was also paid in regard to the ship’s overall cleanliness and hygiene - another nod to the current technological advances that enabled luxurious large-scale transatlantic travel. For example, skirtings were designed to tightly meet the floor in order to reduce dust.¹²⁰

FORMICA

INTERIOR OF CABIN-CLASS PRIVATE BATHROOM.

FORMICA has been used in the "Queen Mary" for Wall Coverings in the majority of Cabin-class Private Bathrooms. It was selected because it is beautiful and durable, light, fire-resisting, and proof against the action of heat and steam.

FORMICA has also been used for all Furniture Tops in Staterooms and Public rooms; it cannot be injured by lighted cigarettes, cosmetics or alcohol; only the minimum of labour is required to keep it in perfect condition.

F. DETERMINATION OF VALUABLE ASSETS

As a result of this investigation, the category “valuable asset” was created in order to distinguish items that should be regularly monitored. The primary criterion for a valuable asset is that the item be a unique work of art or decorative art designed and installed specifically for use on the RMS Queen Mary. Examples of items that meet this criterion are the ship’s original artworks and original furniture (freestanding and built-in). Items produced in large quantities, mass-produced items, and/or reproductions of original items do not meet this criterion. Therefore, many of the ship’s bathroom fixtures and hardware are not considered valuable assets. A second criterion is condition. All valuable assets are in fair, good, or excellent condition; items in poor condition are not eligible of distinction as a valuable asset. Approximately 2,400 items are “valuable assets.” A summary table of valuable assets is provided in Attachment D, Summary of Valuable Assets.

It is recommended that the “valuable assets” be monitored on an annual or semi-annual basis. The annual inventory of valuable assets should include items located in the public spaces, circulation areas, exhibits, offices, stairways and several of the staterooms. These items are predominantly comprised of fine art, decorative art and custom designed free-standing furniture pieces. Approximately 500 of the “valuable assets” are recommended to be inventoried annually. A summary table of valuable assets to survey annually is provided in Attachment E, Summary of Annual Inventory.

The majority of items located in staterooms should be inventoried on a semi-annual basis. These items include built-in furniture, mirrors and heating; additionally there are semi-annual inventory items located in public spaces and exhibits. These items located in the staterooms were custom designed as ensembles and are considered decorative art. Approximately 1,900 of the “valuable assets” are recommended to be inventoried semi-annually. A summary table of valuable assets to survey semi-annually is provided in Attachment F, Summary of Semi-Annual Inventory.

A category related to “valuable assets” but which is considerably broader in scope is “contributing.” Contributing refers to those items that were constructed during a defined historic period, in this case, 1934 to 1936, and exhibit sufficient integrity to convey a sense of history. It is possible that an item is considered “contributing” yet is not a valuable asset. One example of this classification is the ship’s numerous Roanoid hooks. These hooks are historically important as examples of a new material that was widely used in the ship’s original design. While the hooks do reflect an aspect of the ship’s past, given the large number of hooks, the fact that they are factory made versus hand-crafted, and their relatively commonplace occurrence on the ship, they are not “valuable assets.” There are approximately 3,080 contributing features. A summary table of contributing items is provided in Attachment G, Summary of Contributing Features.

IV. CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Approximately 4,700 items aboard the RMS Queen Mary were surveyed and categorized. Of these, approximately 2,400 items were deemed to be a “valuable asset.” These valuable assets consist primarily of fine art, decorative art and other examples of lighting, heating, architecture and furniture (both built-in and freestanding) from the ship’s 1934 to 1936 period of significance. It is recommended that these items are regularly monitored in order to ensure they are retained, protected and preserved in situ for the enjoyment of future generations.

The management and the care of the Queen Mary’s valuable assets should be presaged upon a clear mission statement that addresses the goals and purpose of the collection and how it will be used in the future. A cornerstone for the future care and management of the collection will be the development of a collection management plan, in accordance with nationally and professionally established guidelines for conservation and collection management. The following are some recommendations for the further management and preservation of the Queen Mary collection of fine and decorative arts:

- Implement an annual and semi-annual inventory of the ship’s identified valuable assets. The annual inventory should include the valuable assets located in the public spaces, exhibits and several staterooms (see Attachment E, Summary of Annual Inventory). The semi-annual inventory includes valuable assets predominantly located in staterooms, in addition to public spaces and exhibits (see Attachment F, Summary of Semi-Annual Inventory).
- Hire a temporary curator to help establish a conservation and maintenance plan and implement conservation for important large scale artworks and decorative art items. Establish schedules for monitoring, cleaning, repair, and maintenance, as needed.
- Develop an asset protection program to ensure that the ship’s valuable assets are protected and secure. Such a plan would address the relocation of assets, theft protection, develop and implement archival storage methods, and develop strategies for constructing physical barriers needed to protect the ship’s delicate items as well as items in actively used areas of the ship.
- Provide regular training for staff, particularly for the ship’s maintenance and security personnel, on the conservation, maintenance, and protection of historic and fragile materials.

- Conduct Historic American Building Survey (HABS) photography to document existing conditions of all high-integrity public spaces and staterooms. Commission professional photographic recordation of principal artworks in the Queen Mary collection.
- Continue the tradition of the ship's historic design themes in future redesign plans. Utilize the "ensemble approach," or design by functional groupings, the use of built-in furniture, integrating traditional materials in an innovative way, embracing new materials and technologies, and integrating function, passenger comfort, and visual unity.
- Research original historic design themes, including furniture, soft goods, textile patterns, color palettes and finishes, in order to ensure design continuity and the compatibility of future design schemes.
- Explore opportunities for conservation funding at the state, national, and international level. Potential partners may include organizations such as the World Monuments Fund, United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) World Heritage program, and the National Trust of Historic Places.
- Consider heritage outreach programs with stakeholders at the local, regional, state, national and international level, which may include partnerships with other local maritime history organizations, as well as broader reaching national and international American and British heritage organizations.
- Consider establishing a non-profit foundation to assist in funding the management and conservation of the collection. Consider registering as a 501c3 non-profit to increase funding opportunities.

Expertise

Margarita J. Wuellner, Ph.D., has over 19 years of experience in the practice of architectural history, historic preservation, and cultural resources management in California, the United States and abroad. She has an extensive background in art and architecture from the eighteenth through twenty-first century. She is a specialist in the study of visual culture, Modernism, urbanism, and cultural landscape. Her qualifications and experience meet and exceed the Secretary of the Interior's Professional Qualification Standards in History and Architectural History.

Dr. Wuellner has received numerous awards and fellowships for her work including the Samuel H. Kress Foundation Fellowship, Art History; American Council of Learned Societies Fellowship; and Edward A. Dickson Graduate Fellowship, University of California.

Experience

Historic Preservation and Cultural Resources Management: Dr. Wuellner has extensive experience in the management, preservation and treatment of historic properties for compliance with Sections 106 and 110 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA), National Environmental Protection Act (NEPA), Section 4(f) of the Department of Transportation Act, California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), and local preservation ordinances. Dr. Wuellner is experienced in the assessment of projects for conformance with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards and has assisted clients with State Historic Preservation Office consultation, Programmatic Agreements, and Memorandum of Agreements.

Dr. Wuellner has over 15 years of experience as a principal investigator, project manager, and technical lead for international, national and regional firms, including EDAW, Inc. and Parsons, Inc. She gained her professional training and experience with John Milner Associates in Alexandria, Virginia, and Land and Community Associates in Charlottesville, Virginia. Since returning to Los Angeles in 1995, she has conducted a wide variety of regional and local projects for compliance with CEQA and local preservation ordinances. These projects have included the completion of city-wide and county-wide surveys, as well as evaluation of regional resources.

Surveys and Historic Contexts: Dr. Wuellner has surveyed thousands of properties and conducted extensive research to document and evaluate the significance of historic resources at the local, state, and national levels. She has designed and implemented a variety of large-scale state-wide, county-wide, and city-wide surveys throughout the United States, as well as transportation, military, industrial, urban, and rural surveys. Dr. Wuellner has conducted numerous projects in California and metropolitan Los Angeles for state and local agencies and private clients. She continues to work on a national basis and recently completed the innovative South Texas Ranching Study for the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDot). Dr. Wuellner is currently conducting two large-scale surveys under contract to the Los Angeles Community Redevelopment Agency. These surveys are evaluating historical resources in communities in East Los Angeles, the Wilshire District/Miracle Mile, and Koreatown.

Professional Publications: Dr. Wuellner has authored over 100 technical reports representative of a full spectrum of historical resources investigations. She has prepared technical reports and historical resources sections for incorporation into Environmental Assessments/EIRs/EISs and other NEPA documents in addition to other stand-alone documents such as National Register nominations and historic preservation plans.

Dr. Wuellner is experienced in the preparation and implementation of mitigation recommendations to reduce potential impacts to historic resources. She has demonstrated experience in the preparation of Historic Structure Reports (HSRs); Historic Buildings Maintenance and Treatment Plans; Historic Preservation Management Plans; Historic American Building Surveys (HABS); Historic American Landscape Surveys (HALS); and Cultural Landscape Reports (CLRs).

Expertise

Jon Lamar Wilson has over eight years of professional and academic experience in the practice of architecture, historic preservation, and architectural history. He has a wide-ranging knowledge of nineteenth and twentieth-century American Architecture, with a specific focus on California and the American South. In particular, Mr. Wilson is an expert in both urban and rural housing types and how they relate to their larger context. His qualifications and experience exceeds those of the Secretary of the Interior's Professional Qualification Standards in History, Architectural History, and Historic Architecture.

Experience

Mr. Wilson has a broad training and professional experience in the practice of Historic Preservation and Cultural Resource Management. He has extensive experience consulting clients on projects for compliance of Sections 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA), the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), and local preservation ordinances. Mr. Wilson is experienced in the assessment of projects for conformance with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Rehabilitation of Historic Buildings, and has assisted clients with Historic American Buildings Survey (HABS) documentation, Historic Structure Reports (HSR), National Register of Historic Places nominations, California Register of Historical Resources nominations, local historic designation nominations, Historic Preservation Federal Tax Credit applications, preservation design, and feasibility reports.

HABS: Mr. Wilson worked professionally as an employee and a private contractor for the HABS, a historic building documentation department within the National Park Service. His relationship with HABS began after he won the Sally Kress Tompkins Fellowship, an academic research grant jointly awarded by HABS and the Society of Architectural Historians. As an employee of HABS, Mr. Wilson initially worked documenting a colonial governor's rural retreat just outside Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and then over several years worked in Natchitoches, Louisiana, documenting rural housing patterns and types, and producing an urban history on the development of the town's commercial district.

Mr. Wilson worked at Historic Resources Group (HRG) in Los Angeles prior to joining PCR. At HRG, Mr. Wilson worked for the City of Riverside conducting HABS documentation for the Stalder Building and Brown's Garage, creating a CEQA technical report, a Federal Tax Credit for Historic Preservation application, and design monitoring for the Fox Riverside Theatre, an HSR for the National Landmark Harada House, and a historic interpretation plan for the grain silos at the Riverwalk at La Sierra University.

Surveys: Mr. Wilson has conducted historical and cultural resource surveys for specific plans in Placentia and Santa Ana in Orange County, California, and in Whittier, California. He helped produce the National Register Nomination and design consulting for Santa Anita Park, Conducted Section 106 Review for the City of Los Angeles, authored a California Culture and Historical Endowment (CCHE) grant for the City of El Monte's Southern California Heritage Walk. He conducted a survey of contributing "puestos" to the El Pueblo de Los Angeles Historic Monument. Mr. Wilson produced historic preservation design drawings and conducted design review for multiple historic properties including the Marion Davies Estate, the Lopez Adobe, Orchard Gables, and the Hughes Industrial Historic District. He also produced a Federal Tax Credit for Historic Preservation application for the Lompoc Theatre, and many other documents related to historic preservation and cultural resource management.

Expertise

Marlise Fratinardo has over eight years of professional and academic experience in the practice of historic preservation, urban planning and applied architectural history in the United States and abroad. Her areas of interest include cultural landscapes, preservation economics, urban development, parks, streetscapes and infrastructure.

Ms. Fratinardo has received several awards for her work including the Colorado Historical Society's Stephen H. Hart Award for Public History, Douglas Walter Architects' Historic Preservation Scholarship, and the American Society of Landscape Architects, Colorado Chapter Certificate of Honor. Her qualifications and experience meet and exceed the Secretary of the Interior's Professional Qualification Standards in History and Historic Preservation Planning.

Experience

Project Management: Ms. Fratinardo has advised local governments and volunteer-led community groups on the process of integrating historic preservation goals into planning efforts. During her tenure at the Colorado Center for Preservation Research at the University of Colorado, she managed the start-up phase of a large grant-funded project to develop historic architectural surveys for underserved towns in rural Colorado. Her duties included the development of long-range program goals and the production of outreach materials. She also served as Project Manager for a Colorado Department of Transportation funded study to explore heritage tourism opportunities along Colorado's Scenic Byways. Her duties have included envisioning long-range goals, managing program grants, producing outreach materials, and conducting presentations to community volunteers.

Historic Preservation Documentation and Research: Ms. Fratinardo has conducted original research for numerous historic documentation projects. She has documented the cultural landscape of the Hayden Ranch in Leadville, Colorado. Ms. Fratinardo has produced a history of a local park in Palisade, Colorado for use in community outreach and signage efforts. She has designed interpretive signage for the Ute Pass Historical Society in Woodland Park, Colorado. She has also written a local history and a successful grant application for a historic rehabilitation project on behalf of the Buford School in Rio Blanco County, Colorado.

Historic Preservation Planning: Ms. Fratinardo's professional background includes projects aimed at the protection and revitalization of historic areas. Prior to joining PCR, Ms. Fratinardo worked for Clarion Associates in Denver, Colorado as an urban planner. At Clarion Associates, she helped draft numerous historic preservation ordinances and design standards as well as unified development codes and growth management plans that addressed community character and local identity for municipalities throughout the United States. As a participant in the US/ICOMOS Exchange Program, she worked in partnership with Turath Heritage Management Consultants and local community members to develop a historic preservation plan for a project in Al-Houson, Jordan.

Professional Publications: Ms. Fratinardo has prepared two comprehensive statewide studies on the economic benefits of historic preservation on behalf of the Colorado Historical Society and the Michigan Historic Preservation Network. For these projects, she conducted an extensive and detailed examination of historic preservation planning incentive programs that included an analysis of the usage of state and federal rehabilitation tax credits and statewide grant programs as well as the effects of local historic district designation on property values. Ms. Fratinardo has demonstrated experience in National Register nominations, conservation easements, site plans, research documents and California Environmental Quality Act/National Environmental Policy Act (CEQA/NEPA) documentation.

Expertise

Amanda Kainer has over seven years of professional and academic experience in the practice of historic preservation and architectural history throughout the United States.

Ms. Kainer's qualifications and experience meet and exceed the Secretary of the Interior's Professional Qualification Standards in History and Historic Preservation Planning. She has a wide-ranging knowledge of nineteenth and twentieth-century American Architecture. Ms. Kainer has advanced skills in researching and documenting residential interior design, and analyzing preservation easements.

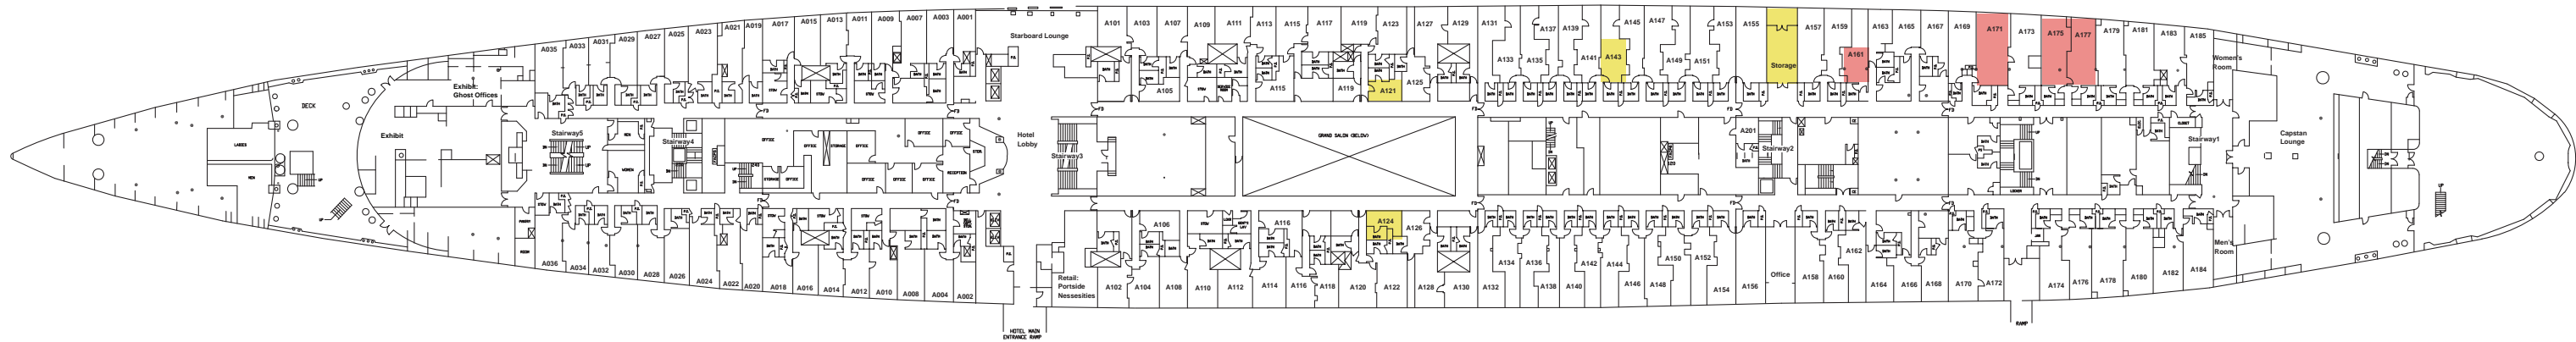

Experience

Historic Preservation Documentation and Research: Ms. Kainer has conducted extensive archival research, field observation and recordation for numerous historic documentation projects. She has completed character-defining features reports, and assistance with investment tax credit applications and Historic American Building Survey (HABS) documentation. Ms. Kainer has prepared Conditions Assessments and provided recommendations for two projects in New York including the East and West Parlors of the Van Cortlandt House Museum in the Bronx, and the Orange County and Government Center in Goshen. Ms. Kainer has also contributed to character-defining features reports for the All Saints Church and Polytechnic Elementary School in Pasadena, California.

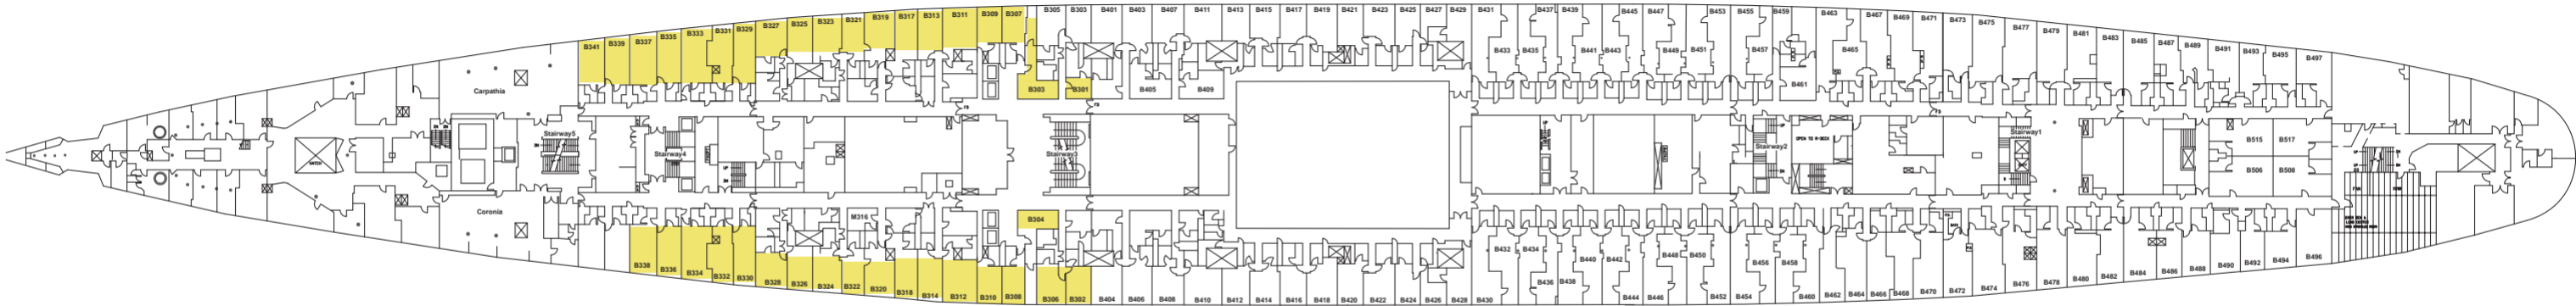

Ms. Kainer is currently assisting with the management of the survey database for the Adelante Eastside Redevelopment Project for the Community Redevelopment Agency of the City of Los Angeles. She is also contributing to the Historic Resource Assessments for two private residential properties in Laguna Beach and Redondo Beach, and a bowling alley in Chatsworth, California.
