INTRODUCTION

With the aim of making the democratic process as transparent as possible to the London electorate, this report includes a great deal of detail on every aspect of the 2014 London Borough council general elections. No other single volume presents the full results and election statistics from the 32 London boroughs enabling the reader to analyse and compare the results across London in one place.

The report presents data for every candidate in every ward (excluding the City of London which operates on a different electoral model). Summaries are provided in the form of maps and tables, and to make comparisons easier, they mostly match those included in the 2010 report with a few useful additions. Results of all council by-elections between the general elections in 2010 and 2014, as well as details of the elections in the four boroughs that directly elect a mayor, are also presented here.

The borough elections of the 22 May 2014 took place on the same day as the European parliament election for the UK, 50 years after the first borough elections took place in 1964. However, the borough elections four years ago were held on the same day as the general election, and turnout in 2010 was 62 per cent but in 2014 and this fell to 39 per cent, which meant around 2.3 million Londoners voted - over 1.2 million fewer than last time.

To continue the recent trend, at 6,951, more candidates stood for election in 2014 than in any previous borough election. This was 115 more than in 2010, which itself was the previous highest and 437 more than in 2006.

Further information about what is included and how to use the report can be found in the Technical Notes section on page xlviii.

This is the latest report in a long series of council election reports dating back to 1964, all of which are currently available on the London Datastore at: <http://data.london.gov.uk/elections>

Turnout

The turnout of voters across the 32 boroughs as a whole was 38.8 per cent, much lower than the previous London borough election, which took place on the same day as the parliamentary general elections, which has never previously happened since the formation of the boroughs in 1964. The highest and lowest figures are shown below.

Highest borough	Tower Hamlets	47.2%
Lowest borough	Kensington and Chelsea	30.3%

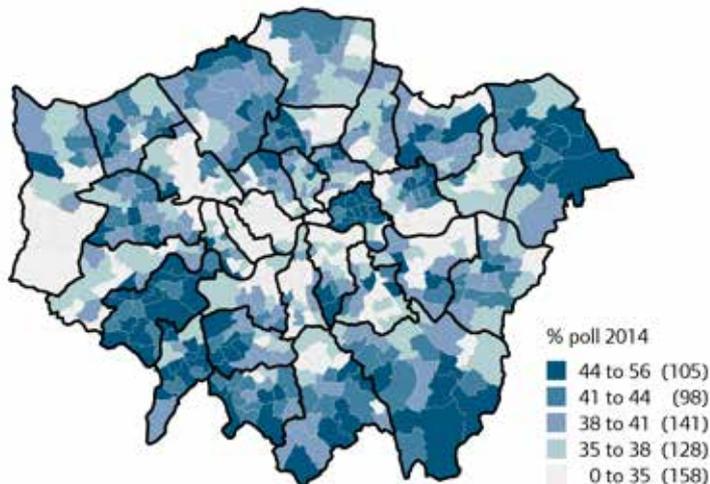

Turnout at ward level varied from 24.2 to 55.8 per cent.

The Conservative Party vote

The overall percentage vote for the Conservative Party was 26.2 per cent. This figure was lower than any previous borough elections with the previous lowest share being in 1994, when the party received 31.3 per cent. The party did not reach ten per cent of the vote in Barking and Dagenham, Islington, or Haringey.

The Liberal Democrat Party vote

The overall percentage vote for the Liberal Democrat Party was 10.2 per cent. This figure was the lowest the party achieved since 1978, when they received 6.4 per cent of the vote. While Sutton was the party's stand out performance at borough level, they did pick up over 25 per cent of the vote in other South West London boroughs of Kingston upon Thames, and Richmond upon Thames. In six boroughs, the Liberal Democrats had less than five per cent of the share.

COMMENTARY

Probably the most significant story in the 2014 London borough elections was that, Labour secured a high proportion of seats while the other two major parties, Conservatives and Liberal Democrats, both had relatively poor performances. Labour made a net gain of 185 seats which enabled them to take control in four boroughs (two from the Conservatives and two from no overall control), though they did also lose control in Tower Hamlets to Tower Hamlets First. Labour was the only major party to improve its position and their net gain of 185 seats followed a net gain of 191 in 2010 (a total of 376 over both elections), which replenished their combined loss of 366 seats in 2002 and 2006. Labour once again returned as the party with the most seats in London, a position it had held in nine of the previous thirteen general elections, including five consecutive elections between 1986 and 2002, and gave Labour well over half of all seats in London.

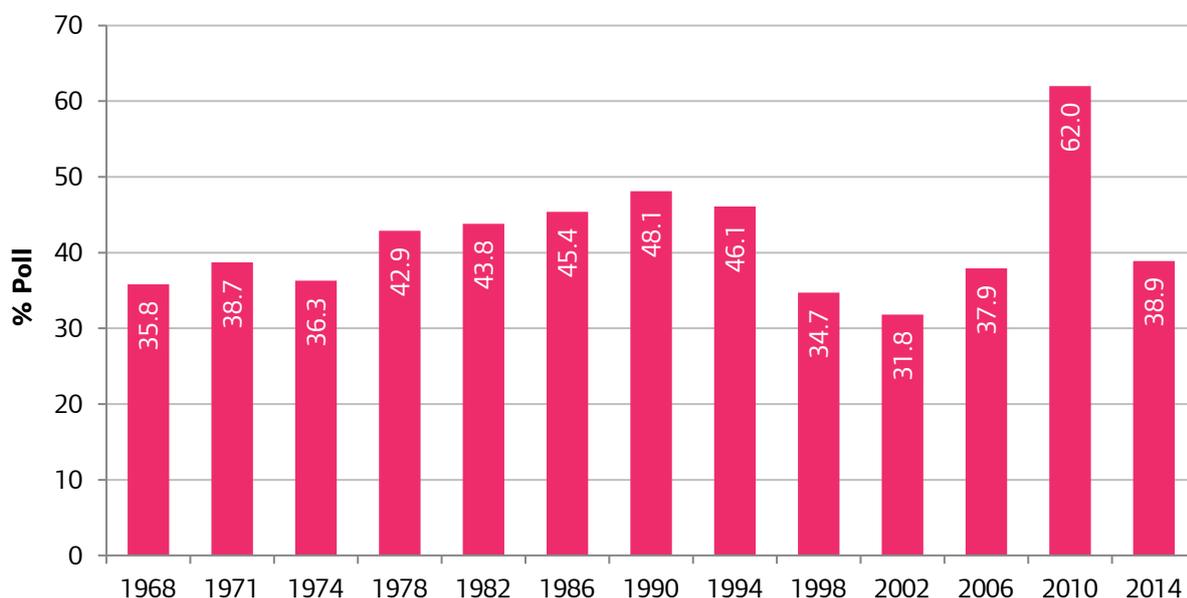

Furthermore, the three Labour mayors in Hackney, Lewisham and Newham were all re-elected with an overall majority in the first round, although Lutfur Rahman held his position as Mayor in Tower Hamlets having been suspended from the Labour Party shortly before he was elected as an independent in October 2010. He later created his own independent party, Tower Hamlets First, and was duly re-elected in 2014.

Labour increased their number of seats to 1,060 - 57 per cent of all seats available. In contrast, the Conservatives lost 105 seats leaving them with 612, or 33 per cent. The Conservatives retained 85 per cent of the seats they were defending.

The Liberal Democrats lost even more seats, with a drop of 130 leaving them with 116, or 6 per cent of seats. This was less than half the number of seats they were defending (246). The Liberal Democrats had their worst result since 1978 in terms of number of seats won, winning only 9 per cent of the seats they contested, and losing their highest number of seats in any borough election. This is a combined loss of 201 seats in 2010 and 2014.

In 2014, the borough elections were held on the same day as the European elections but the turnout was far lower than four years previous when for the first time, they were held on the same day as a parliamentary general election. However, other than 2010 when turnout was 62.0 per cent, the turnout of 38.9 per cent was still the highest since 1994 (Figure 1). The percentage of voters giving their vote by post increased by seven points compared with 2010, to 23 per cent. The figure had been higher in 2006 (18 per cent) compared with 2010, indicating that due to the higher turnout in conjunction with the general election, people were more likely to vote at polling stations.

The lower turnout meant all the major parties lost votes compared with 2010. The Labour party lost 22 per cent of votes, whereas the Conservatives lost 45 per cent and Liberal Democrats 70 per cent. In terms of share of the votes, the Labour party increased their share by five percentage points to 37.5 per cent, the Conservatives share fell by six percentage points to 26.2 per cent, and Liberal Democrats lost 12 percentage points, leaving them with just 10.2 per cent of the share - that is less than half their share of four years ago.

2014 was one of Labour's best results in terms of seats won. The feeling was that Labour had done well because it had taken significant share from the Liberal Democrats, and that UKIP's first major involvement in the borough elections had taken votes from Labour's main rival, the Conservatives.

The Conservatives made a net loss of 105 seats and lost control in three boroughs (two to Labour and one to no overall control) but the Conservatives made progress in south west London from the Liberal Democrats and took control of one borough from the Liberal Democrats, leaving them with nine boroughs. Besides that loss to the Conservatives, the Liberal Democrats retained control in one borough. While it was one of the lowest ever shares of the vote for the Liberal Democrats, it was the worst performance in any London borough election by far for the Conservatives with just 26.2 per cent of the vote, which is lower than their previous lowest in 1994 (31.3 per cent). It was also the widest gap between the two principal parties since 1982 (11.3 percentage points).

Labour made the most of the votes they received, with 77 per cent of their votes for candidates who were subsequently elected, higher than the Conservatives (56 per cent) and significantly higher than Liberal Democrats (24 per cent) - though among the minor parties the Residents Association received 81 per cent of their votes for subsequently elected candidates. Another way to look at this is to analyse the number of votes per seat won. Labour only needed 2,477 votes for each seat they won, compared with Conservatives who had 2,985. The Green party were the least efficient seat-winning party with 105,995 votes per seat won.

The minor parties won a total share of 26.1 per cent of the votes - by far the highest ever, with the second highest being in 2006 (17.0 per cent).

As evidenced by the significant fall in support for Liberal Democrats, they are perhaps not seen as a safe middle ground by as many voters as before and voters have looked elsewhere to find which party represents their views.

There were some significant changes on the spread of successful candidates across the major and minor parties between 2010 and 2014. The minor parties won 63 seats this time compared with only 23 elected in 2010, but was not far off the number won in 2006 (75). The cause of the drop in 2010 may have been because the parliamentary elections were held on the same day which meant that the electorate was likely to be more focussed on electing a government.

There were some notable changes among the minor parties. UKIP increased their share from 1.1 to 9.8 per cent, giving them 12 seats. The fact that the borough election was held on the same day at the European election may have led to an increase in vote for UKIP. UKIP made progress against all three major parties in east London. The UKIP was only slightly less than the Greens (9.9 per cent) and Liberal Democrat share (10.2 per cent). However, many boroughs in London have high BAME and immigrant populations, and this will probably restrict the number of wards UKIP can be successful in.

But even in wards where UKIP performed fairly well they tended not to be able to convert the votes into seats because they were only able to do where it faced divided opposition. In this election, they needed a ward to have a three or four parties splitting the vote to be in a position to win seats. UKIP's presence had the effect of hurting other parties more than helping itself and it tended to get UKIP a position of replacing the main opposition to the winners in each ward as opposed to actually winning. In fact it was Labour that benefitted hugely from this divided opposition, winning most seats where UKIP had a fairly decent share of the vote. It will probably be in the next elections in 2018 where it will become clear whether 2014 was a stepping stone for UKIP to become a genuine threat to the major parties for winning seats, and perhaps replace the Liberal democrats as the third largest party in a number of boroughs, or remain as one of the minor parties.

Tower Hamlets First appeared for the first time and won 18 seats. The Resident's Associations performance improved again because even though their share of the vote remained at just over one per cent, the number of seats they were elected in increased from 19 to 27. This meant that 60 per cent of all residents' candidates won a seat – higher than any other party.

The Green Party increased their share of the vote from 6.5 to 9.9 per cent and increased their number of seats from two to four. Despite a significant boost in the vote share for the Greens, only half a per cent of Green candidates were elected because their supporters tend to be more spread out across London as opposed focussed in certain areas.

Demographic changes are likely to continue playing their part in elections in London. With the capital having an increasingly diverse population, the Conservatives may face a difficult task to return to their strong position of 2006 again, especially when the unpredictable effect of future UKIP votes is factored in.

The borough elections

Tables 1 and 2 may be used to compare the results of the last six London borough general elections. Seats won are shown as rates per 2,000 to enable a valid evaluation given the changes in the number of seats available for election, most recently made in 2002. The actual numbers of seats won may be found in the summary of election facts and figures on page xv.

From these tables it is clear that the three major parties experienced very different results in May 2014. The party making the most gains was Labour. This enhanced share was reflected in the seats gained and in this respect Labour regained all the lost ground from 2002 and 2006, easily remaining the party with the largest number of actual seats won (page xv). The Conservative Party and Liberal Democrats both suffered losses, in terms of councillors elected, for the second election running. However, the Liberal Democrats had actually increased their share of the vote between 2006 and 2010.

The minor parties made a comeback after a disappointing result in 2010 with the Residents' Associations and Tower Hamlets First taking the majority (71 per cent) of the 63 seats won.

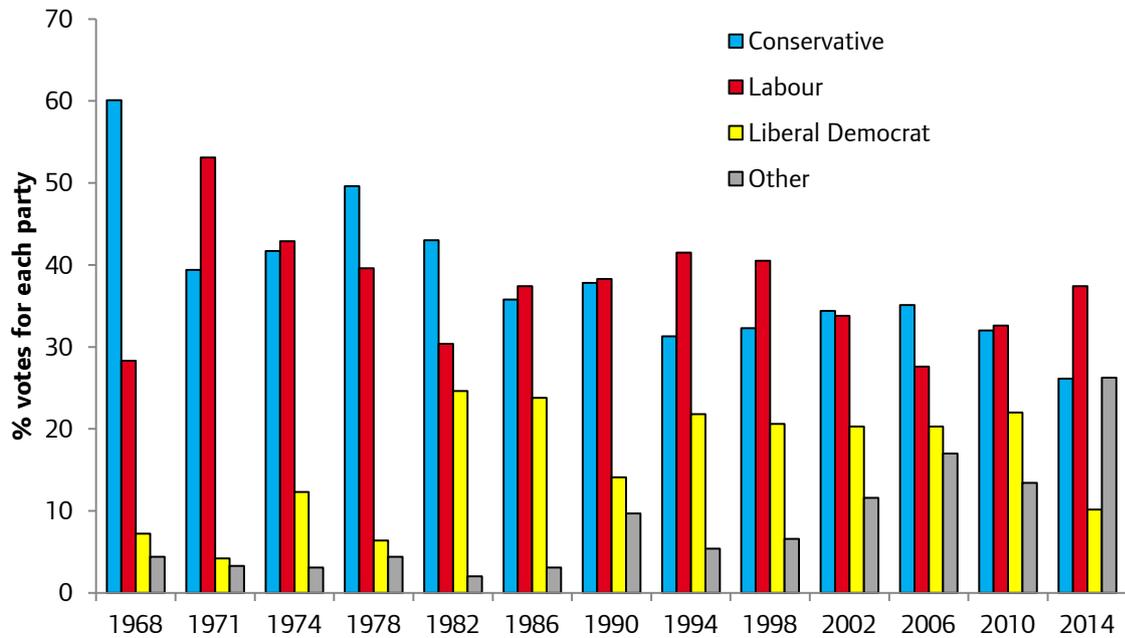

Figure 2 illustrates the share of votes enjoyed by the major parties since the second London borough council general election in 1968 – the year of the Conservative landslide. The growth of the Liberal Democrat (and the party's predecessors') vote during the first twenty years can be seen clearly but the party's support had settled at just over 20 per cent in each of the last five elections, and so the collapse to around ten per cent is a significant divergence from the trend. As noted earlier, the growth in backing for the minor parties, evident over the last twenty years fell away to some extent in 2010 but recovered in 2014.

Change in political control of the boroughs is shown in Figure 3. Labour's position as the majority party in the largest number of London boroughs remained and they now control 20 boroughs, the third time they have controlled that many boroughs in the 14 general elections since the inception of this pattern of London government. The Conservatives have held an absolute majority three times and have not achieved this position since 1982 following the Liberal Democrats' increasing success and the greater incidence of hung councils, though they did control 28 boroughs back in 1968 – a total Labour have not yet got close to matching. Altogether 25 boroughs remained under the same control in 2014 as four years earlier (five more than in 2010).

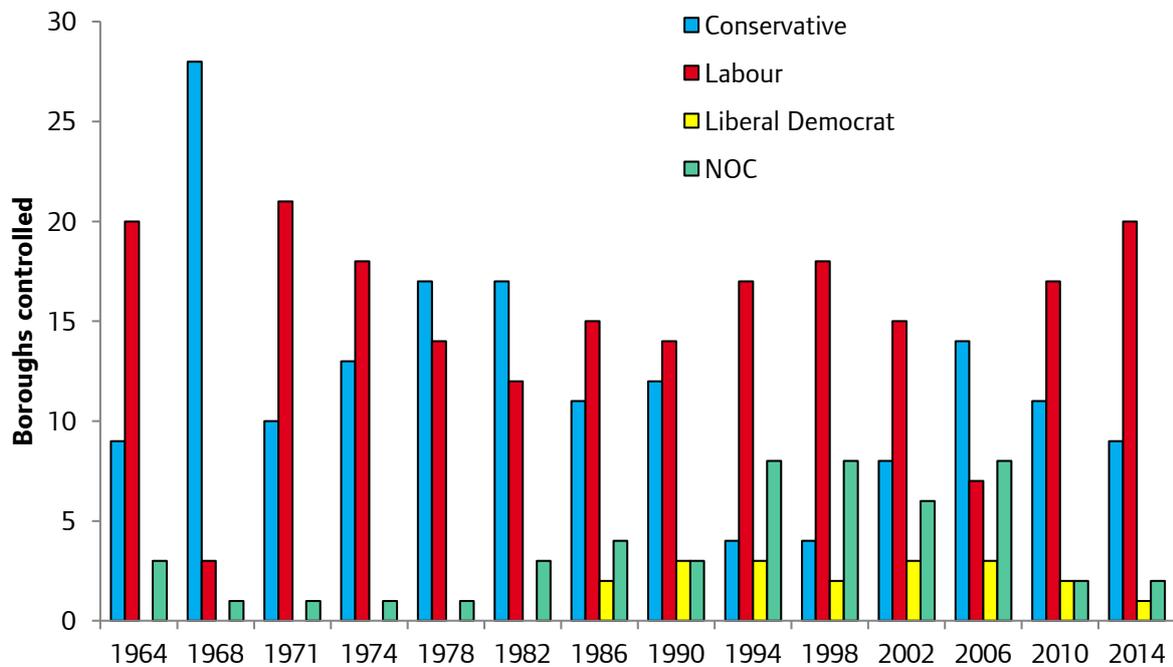

Control in both Croydon, and Hammersmith and Fulham have followed similar paths over the past 20 years. In both boroughs Labour had control between 1994 and 2002, and then Conservatives won both boroughs in 2006 and 2010 and in 2014 Labour resumed control again. Merton and Redbridge moved from 'no overall control' to Labour. However, Labour lost Tower Hamlets to 'no overall control', having had control there since 1994. Havering moved back to 'no overall control', having been under Conservative rule since 2006. Although, prior to this, the borough had been under 'no overall control' since 1986. Kingston was taken by the Conservatives, a borough they haven't had control of since 1982, with the Liberal Democrats ruling in the borough since 2002 (Table 3).

The rate of rejection of ballot papers in 2014 slightly reduced compared with 2010 – 0.58 per cent against 0.63 per cent, which coincidentally returns the rejection rate to the exact same figure as in 2006. The incidence of rejection through lack of official mark increased to 201 with the majority (147) occurring in one borough – Croydon. The presentation of unmarked or void ballots remains by far the largest reason for rejection (73 per cent of rejections).

Borough by borough summary

The Labour Party took every seat in Barking and Dagenham for the second election in succession. However, UKIP gained the second highest share of the vote, a position they had taken from virtually nowhere in 2010. UKIP took roughly the same proportion of the vote as the BNP had done in 2010, and even though the BNP did have four candidates standing in the borough, their support was significantly less than the UKIP candidates standing in those wards. Labour's share of the vote was their highest in the borough since 2002. The Conservatives continued to lose share here, while the Liberal Democrats lost most of the share they had regained in 2010 having had hardly any support in 2006.

In Barnet, the Labour Party made significant progress, taking nine seats from Conservative but still fell just short of taking control of the borough as the Conservatives took two seats from Liberal Democrats in Childs Hill. The 30 seats Labour now hold in the borough is the highest total the party has ever reached there – though they did have a slightly higher share of the vote in 1994 and 1998. The Greens had been relatively successful in 2006, had done not so well in 2010, but improved again in 2014 to take 11 per cent of the vote, which was ahead of the Liberal Democrats.

Bexley was a borough that Labour controlled back in 2002 but a poor performance in 2006 saw them lose 23 seats to the Conservatives. Since then they have slowly begun to claw back a few seats in the north of the borough, though the Conservatives still have three times as many seats as Labour. The Conservatives share of the vote fell slightly, while Labour increased theirs, mostly at the expense of the Liberal Democrats whose share dropped to around three per cent – their lowest ever, though they did only field 15 candidates. They have not won a seat in Bexley in the last three elections. UKIP won the remaining three seats in the borough taking a single seat from the Conservatives in three wards, and they averaged a 23 per cent share of the vote. This was the only borough where BNP nominated a significant number of candidates with 20 standing in total. However, they managed less than eight per cent share, and their best performances came in Crayford and North End wards.

In Brent the Conservatives experienced their joint worst ever result in terms of seats (with 2010), and their lowest share of the vote ever. Having done well in 2010, the Liberal Democrats lost 16 of their 17 seats in the borough, handing them all to Labour, even though their share of the vote did remain respectable at 16 per cent. Labour increased their share of the vote to 48 per cent, their highest since 1971. Having had quite a lot of mixed wards in 2010 where there were seats held by different parties within a ward, this time only Mapesbury had a mix of Labour and a Liberal Democrat. The Conservatives six seats were in two wards of Kenton, and Brondesbury Park – the latter three all gained from the Liberal Democrats. Labour made gains from the Conservatives in Northwick Park, and Preston wards.

In Bromley, the Conservative Party dominated once again, though their share of the vote fell to 40 per cent, and they had a net loss of two seats - losing one to Labour and two to UKIP, but gaining one from the Liberal Democrats. The Liberal Democrats now have no seats in Bromley for the first time since 1978, and their share of the vote in the borough is the lowest ever. Labour's share was their highest since 1998, and their seven seats match the total they had in 1994 and 1998. Labour made their gains in Clock House and Crystal Palace wards in the north west of the borough. UKIP had the second largest share of the vote in the borough (20 per cent), roughly gaining what the Liberal Democrats had lost, but UKIP's two seats came from the Conservatives in Cray Valley West, and they were 16 votes short of winning a seat in Cray Valley East. Had UKIP put up a full slate in the borough the total number of votes may have been greater than Labour's.

Labour consolidated their control in Camden taking an additional ten seats compared with 2010, all from Liberal Democrats, and increasing their share of the vote significantly from 33 to 44 per cent. The Conservatives lost share slightly but gained two seats, one in Belsize and the other in Hampstead Town ward, leaving them with 12 seats. The Liberal Democrats lost around half of their share of the vote, but managed to retain a single seat in Fortune Green ward where they had a greater share of the vote than Labour or Conservatives. The Greens retained their single seat in Highgate, and in that ward won over a third of the vote share. Furthermore, the Greens were Labour's main opposition in four other wards.

In Croydon, as has been common in this borough since the early 1980s, all the seats were won by either Labour or Conservatives, with Labour taking a majority for the first time since 2002. Despite losing seven seats to Labour, the Conservative share only fell slightly. Labour increased their share by four points, with the Liberal Democrats losing over 13 points. Labour's seats are in the north half of the borough, plus Fieldway and New Addington. The line dividing Labour from Conservative wards is slowly moving south. The Green Party and UKIP both received just under 25,000 votes - twice as many as the Liberal Democrats, but UKIP did so with only 42 candidates compared with a full slate of 70 for the Greens.

In Ealing, Labour had their best performance, in terms of seats won, since 1998 and, in terms of share won, their best since 1998. Conversely the Conservatives had their worst ever performance of both seats and share. They lost 12 seats, all to Labour. Labour's other seat came from the Liberal Democrats, though the latter did manage to hold on to four seats in the borough despite losing half their share of the vote leaving them with less than nine per cent, but managing to hold onto the entire ward of Southfield in the process. UKIP achieved a good share of the vote in wards to the north of the borough but did not threaten Labour for a seat. In Southall Broadway, three Independent candidates were Labour's main challengers and they managed a 25 per cent share of the vote in that ward. In Southall Green, Labour managed an impressive 86 per cent share of the vote, which was the highest share of any party in any ward in London.

Since 2002, the Conservative share of the vote in Enfield has steadily fallen from 50 per cent to 26 per cent in 2014. Labour increased their majority from 2010 and now hold 41 of the 63 seats, with the other 22 being held by Conservatives – though this is the lowest total (and share of the vote) ever held by them in the borough. Labour gained a seat from the Conservatives in each of Bush Hill Park, Chase, and Winchmore Hill, and gained two seats from them in Southgate Green. After a decent performance by the Liberal Democrats in 2010, they lost most of their share of the vote in 2014 and polled only around 2,600 votes. The Greens, UKIP, Independent candidates, and Trade Unionist and Socialist Coalition all received more votes than the Liberal Democrats.

In Greenwich, Labour consolidated their position as majority party (the party only failed to achieve this in 1968). Labour gained three more seats from the Conservatives in 2014 – one in Blackheath Westcombe and the other two in Eltham North ward. UKIP were the next best performing party with around 15 per cent of the vote. However, UKIP only had 13 candidates out of 51 possible, indicating they could be a more serious competitor in this borough in the future. There was a similar story for the Green party who achieved slightly more votes than UKIP from 19 candidates. The Liberal Democrats were not close to winning a seat in a borough where they regularly used to have a handful of seats.

Hackney's ward boundaries were redrawn for 2014 because of a rapidly growing population but there was no difference in the result to 2010 – the three main parties ended up with the exact same number of seats as four years ago. 50 out of the 57 seats went to Labour where the party has failed to obtain a majority only twice in the 13 London borough general elections. However, Labour's share of the vote was significantly improved on 2010, up from 47 to 57 per cent. Not since the 1970s have they enjoyed a greater share. The Conservative Party had their lowest vote share in any Hackney general election with just 12 per cent but still retained four seats – all three seats in Springfield ward, and one of the two seats in the new ward of Stamford Hill West. Having had one of their highest ever shares of the vote in 2010, the Liberal Democrats had their lowest share since 1978 but they still managed to hold onto their three seats in Cazenove ward where they managed over 41 per cent of the vote. In no other ward in the borough did they achieve as much as nine per cent. As in 2010 the Greens fought every ward in the borough but this time entering a full slate in every ward. They recorded a 20 per cent share of the vote, comfortably in second place, but not enough to trouble Labour in any individual ward. Hackney is one of the three boroughs to directly elect their mayor, and the Labour mayor was duly elected for a fourth term (see below).

After having a comfortable majority in 2006 and 2010 the Conservatives lost control of Hammersmith and Fulham in 2014, losing 11 seats to Labour. It was the first time since 1998 that Labour had a greater share of the vote in the borough increasing it significantly from 34 to 42 per cent. The Conservative seats are mostly in the south of the borough, though they share power with Labour in Addison, and Avonmore and Brook Green wards in the middle of the borough. The Liberal Democrat lost the majority of their share of the vote having had a good share four years ago. While Labour and Conservatives were the only parties that won or came close to winning a seat, the Liberal Democrats managed a good share of the vote in Town ward (19 per cent), but nowhere else did a party manage as much as a ten per cent share. This was a factor in the combined vote share of Labour and Conservative being so high at 80 per cent.

The geographical divide in Haringey became less clear in 2014 but there still some division with the Liberal Democrats holding onto just nine of their 23 seats in the west of the borough. However, they now only control a single ward – Highgate. They lost seats to Labour in seven wards and are now sharing power in Alexandra, Crouch end, Fortis Green, and Muswell Hill, though still had the highest share of the vote in the latter pair of wards. Labour managed 48 per cent of the share in the borough for the first time since 1998. The party with the third highest share of the vote was the Greens with 15 per cent, and they have become Labour's closest opposition in seven wards but did not get close to winning a seat in any of them. The Conservatives have not won a seat in the borough in the last four elections, and their share of the vote fell below ten per cent, which is their lowest ever share in Haringey.

The result in Harrow was similar to 2010, with the only change in seats won being a net gain of one seat for an independent from the Conservative party in Headstone North where there are now two independents and one Conservative councillor. The Conservatives and Labour both took a seat from the other in two other wards, which effectively cancelled out any change overall. Harrow has been a closely fought borough in recent elections and this one was probably closer than it should have been because Labour's share of the vote was probably reduced by the Independent Labour group who stood across most wards in the borough giving them a vote share of around eight per cent. This group was formed when eight disaffected Labour councillors formed their own group in May 2013 following accusations that the official Labour Party was institutionally racist. The group recruited additional candidates for this election to make a total of 47 Independent Labour candidates in the borough. The Conservatives share fell slightly while Labour improved theirs slightly, but neither had any significant effect on seats won. Geographically speaking, the Conservative seats are in the northern half of the borough and on the outer edge of London, and the Labour seats in the southern half. In the last two elections the Liberal Democrats achieved around a fifth of the share, but this dropped down to seven per cent in 2014. Despite this, the Liberal Democrat candidate in Rayners Lane, did retain his seat that he has held since 2006.

Havering remains the principal stronghold of residents' association councillors in London. The residents increase their number of seats from 16 to 24, still not quite enough to give them control of the borough. The residents achieved a 26 per cent share of the vote, and there were no residents candidates in four wards. Their eight new seats were in the wards of Elm Park, Harold Wood, Hylands, South Hornchurch and St Andrews. All but one was at the expense of a Conservative councillor with the other being from a Labour councillor. The number of seats won by the various elements of the residents groups were Hornchurch Residents Association (10), Upminster and Cranham Residents Association (6), Harold Wood Hill Park Residents Association (3), Rainham & Wennington Independent Residents Group (3), and South Hornchurch Independent Residents Group (2). The other big winner in the borough was UKIP, who won their first seven seats in the borough, four from Conservatives and three from Labour. Consequently, the Conservatives lost 11 seats and Labour four overall leaving them with 22, and one seat respectively, and UKIP achieved a 28 per cent share of the vote, which was their highest in London. From Labour's point of view, this was a poor result especially when throughout the nineties they were the party with the most seats in the borough. And from a Conservative point of view they lost a 14 percentage point share of the vote, which was their lowest ever. All of the Conservatives 22 seats were in the north west part of the borough.

The Conservatives lost four seats to Labour in Hillingdon but they remained in control of the borough with 42 of the seats. The remaining 23 went to Labour. Labour gained a seat in each of Charville, Uxbridge South, and West Drayton wards, and two in Heathrow Villages but lost one to the Conservatives in Yiewsley, which was a closely contested ward both four years ago and in 2014. Indeed, a Labour candidate received only two votes less than a winning Conservative there. The Conservative share of the vote fell compared with 2010, and so did Labour's, but the latter only slightly. Labour seats all were won in the south of the borough. The Liberal Democrat share fell from 17 per cent to three per cent, but they had already lost all their seats in 2010. UKIP were the party in third place with 19 per cent of the vote, having put up at least one candidate in every ward in the borough, and were probably closest to winning a seat in Harefield ward, but the Conservatives held onto both seats.

Hounslow is traditionally a Labour borough winning 12 of the 14 London borough elections. They returned to power back in 2010, and followed it up in 2014 with an even stronger result. Labour gained 14 seats from the Conservatives, and like 2010, no other party won a seat. The Conservatives now hold 11 seats, mostly in the east of the borough, which is their worst result since 1998 and their share fell to 25 per cent. Labour's share increased by nine percentage points, and the Liberal Democrats lost eight percentage points. The Green party gained some share, from seven to nine per cent, and UKIP achieved 11 per cent share of the vote, which may have contributed to the Conservatives poor result.

As recently as 2006, the Liberal Democrats held more seats in Islington than any other party. They lost 11 seats to Labour in 2010 and another 12 to Labour, and one to the Greens in 2014. Their share of the vote more than halved from 31 to 14 per cent, while Labour's share surged to 55 per cent, which was their best since 1974. Labour now hold all but one seat in Islington. The Green seat was won in Highbury East where a Green candidate won in a very tightly contested ward where the three Liberal Democrats were only narrowly beaten, but the other two Green candidates in that ward were a long way behind, ranking in eighth and ninth places. In the borough, the Greens increased their share to 19 per cent, and are now the principle opposition party to Labour.

In 2014 there were major ward boundary changes in Kensington and Chelsea, which makes identifying changes on a ward basis more difficult, especially as there are now four fewer seats available there. But overall the mix of seats changed little in 2014 compared with four years previous, though Labour did make a little progress. At the borough level, Labour gained three seats, the Conservatives lost six seats, and the Liberal Democrats lost one of their two seats, which were the only two seats the Liberal Democrats had ever won in a borough that has long been completely dominated by the two main parties. Most of the changes were in wards with boundary changes but Labour gained two seats from Liberal Democrats in Colville ward, and the Liberal Democrats gained one of only four seats in London, in Earl's Court ward, winning it from the Conservatives. However, in reality this seat had already been won in a by-election in 2010, and the same candidate returned to hold onto her seat. But the Conservatives easily remained in control of the borough with 37 of the 50 seats, and reached at least a 70 per cent of the vote share in four wards. Labour's 12 seats were won in the north of the borough. The Conservatives maintained their share while Labour increased their share of the vote at the expense of the Liberal Democrats.

The Liberal Democrats had held the majority of seats in Kingston upon Thames for last three elections in succession, but following the common theme in these elections, the Liberal Democrat vote fell, meaning they lost 9 of their 27 seats, and handing the majority to the Conservatives for the first time since 1982. The Conservatives gained seven seats giving them a total of 28, while Labour gained their only two seats in the borough in Norbiton ward, which is right in the middle of the borough. Labour had previously lost these seats in 2010. Across the borough, Labour had increased their share by four percentage points, which was better than the slight fall that the Conservatives experienced, but the latter appears to have benefitted from a split vote, predominantly between Labour and Liberal Democrats but also from UKIP and the Greens in many wards.

Labour held onto control comfortably in Lambeth winning 59 of the 63 seats, making it their best ever result in the borough. The main story here was Labour winning all of the Liberal Democrats 15 seats, with Labour taking a large slice of the lost 16 percentage point share of the vote from the Liberal Democrats. Labour also took two seats from the Conservatives in Thurlow Park. The Conservatives did manage to win the third seat in Clapham Common from the Liberal Democrats though, leaving them with just those three seats in the borough. The Greens won a single seat in St Leonards ward from Liberal Democrats and the other two seats in that ward were won by Labour. The Greens ended up with a 15 per cent share in the borough, up from nine per cent in 2010.

In Lewisham, Labour won easily, after the Liberal Democrats lost all 12 of their seats, and the Conservatives lost both of theirs. The only seat not won by Labour was in Brockley ward where the Greens managed to hold onto their seat despite Darren Johnson standing down. The party also received a significant share of the vote in Crofton Park and Ladywell wards but were unable to win a seat there. In the borough as a whole, the Greens achieved a share of 14 per cent, up from 10 per cent in 2010, giving them the second largest share in Lewisham. The Conservatives have not won more than six seats in the borough since 1986 and their share of the vote has been steadily declining since 1978, but the Liberal Democrats had offered a decent opposition in 2006 and 2010 before they collapsed in 2014, only achieving a ten per cent share in four wards. Lewisham People Before Profit picked up some of the former Liberal Democrat vote, and managed a borough wide 14 per cent share, though in New Cross and Telegraph Hill wards they came in second place with over 20 per cent share of the vote. Trade Unionist and Socialist Coalition received eight per cent of the vote in Telegraph Hill, and even though UKIP generally did poorly across the borough, they did receive around 20 per cent shares in Downham, Grove Park, and Whitefoot wards. Lewisham is one of the three London boroughs to elect their mayor directly. The Labour mayor was re-elected for his third term (see below).

Labour took control in Merton after two elections in succession with a hung council. They won eight more seats, all from the Conservatives to bring their total up to 36. The Conservatives did manage to win a seat from the Liberal Democrats in West Barnes ward despite their overall share in the borough falling slightly. That left the Liberal Democrats with their only seat, not only in that ward but the whole borough. Residents held Merton Park ward they have represented since 1990, ignoring boundary changes, once again with an increased share of the vote, which has now reached 64 per cent. Labour now hold the bulk of the southern part of the borough, with the Conservatives being strong in most of the remaining seven wards to the north. One of Labour's best performances in any ward in London, came in Figge's Marsh ward, where they achieved 80 per cent of the vote.

For the fourth time in the borough elections and the second time in succession, Labour won every seat on Newham Council. Labour's share stayed around 60 per cent, and comfortably achieved at least half of the share in every ward. The Conservatives also increased their share of the vote by over six percentage points to give them one of their highest ever shares in the borough, although they have only won seats on two occasions, the most recent in 1990. The Labour and Conservative vote combined accounted for 83 per cent of the vote share – the highest combined total of any borough in these elections. Labour were clear winners in every ward, and other the Conservatives, there were few other examples of minor parties performing well. A UKIP candidate did outperform the Conservative candidate in three wards in the borough, which reduced the Conservatives chances in those areas but in reality Labour received more votes than both parties combined in each case. The Christian Peoples Alliance had their best results in Canning Town South, and Custom House wards (both nine per cent), and were their highest shares in London, mainly because Newham was the only borough where they had a major presence, putting up 55 out of a possible 60 candidates in the borough. Newham is one of the three boroughs to elect their mayor directly and the Labour mayor was returned for his third term (see below).

This was the first time Labour had won outright control of Redbridge, and it was their highest number of seats (35) and share (47 per cent) also. Labour gained nine seats, while the Conservatives lost five and the Liberal Democrats lost four. The Conservative share of the vote fell by five points, whereas the Liberal Democrat share more than halved to 11 per cent, to give them their lowest share since 1978. However, they managed to hold onto two seats in Roding ward and one in Church End ward, where they had previously held all six seats. It was the Conservatives, not Labour, who took these seats three seats from the Liberal Democrats. However, Labour took a total of eight seats from the Conservatives in Aldborough, Cranbrook, Hainault, and Wanstead wards, and they now have power in wards in the east of the borough.

Following 16 years of Liberal Democrat administration in Richmond upon Thames up to 2002, control of the borough then see-sawed between the Liberal Democrats and Conservatives with the Conservatives taking a majority in 2010 and retaining power in 2014. The Liberal Democrats lost nine seats to the Conservatives as their share of the vote fell to 28 per cent, which although the second highest in London after Sutton, was their lowest in Richmond since 1971. However, they still achieved the highest share in five wards, and won all three seats in both St. Margarets and North Twickenham, and Teddington wards, gaining a seat from the Conservatives in the former. Labour failed to win a seat for the fourth borough general election running.

In Southwark, support for the Liberal Democrats fell away in a borough where they had been strong for the past six borough elections. They won just 13 seats, which was their lowest since they won their first seats here in 1986. It was Labour who benefitted, consolidating their position of control in the borough, and winning 48 seats for the first time since 1982. Labour also won one seat from the Conservatives in College ward. The Conservative share fell slightly but they held onto their two seats in Village ward, with Labour taking the other seat in that ward from the Liberal Democrats. The Liberal Democrats now hold most of their seats in the riverside wards, with Labour dominating the rest of the borough.

Sutton was the Liberal Democrats one real success story of these elections as they continued to control the borough and actually improved their result from 2010 by taking two seats from the Conservatives, one in Nonsuch and one in Worcester Park to give them all three seats in both wards. The Liberal Democrats share of the vote fell (down ten percentage points), continuing the steady decline since 1994. The Conservatives share fell by more (down 11 points), while the Labour share increase by two points overall and improved in every ward, but they had too much to do in every ward to win a seat, something they haven't managed to do in Sutton since 2002. UKIP managed to achieve 20 per cent share of the vote, probably taking most of their votes from the Conservatives, with the consequence of giving the Liberal Democrats a safer margin.

Despite holding onto roughly the same share of the vote as in 2010, when they won by a landslide, the Labour party lost 19 seats in Tower Hamlets. This was mainly due to the collapse of the Conservative and Liberal Democrat vote that had moved over to the new Tower Hamlets First party. This is the party led by the directly elected Mayor, Lutfur Rahman, since shortly after the 2010 elections. He won the Mayoral vote again this time around, but it was the only one of the four Mayoral elections that was a relatively close result. John Biggs was the Labour candidate and he received enough votes to make it necessary to count the second preference votes. There were significant boundary changes in this borough in 2014, which means exact comparisons with 2010 are difficult, and the total number of seats available in the borough fell from 51 to 45. However, Tower Hamlets First won 18 seats with a 31 per cent share, still slightly fewer than the 22 that the Labour Party managed to hang onto. The Conservatives lost three of their seats leaving them with five, all by the river, which takes in the business districts around Canary Wharf. Despite the new housing for higher earning Docklands workers, the Conservatives share of the vote was only 11 per cent, the lowest since 1994.

The Labour Party consolidated their control in Waltham Forest by winning an additional eight seats, giving them 44 of the 60 seats available and achieving 44 per cent share of the vote. The Conservatives kept 16 of the 18 seats they had won in 2010. In Valley ward, and Hale End and Highams Park ward, where they held a full slate of three in 2010, they lost one of those seats to Labour. The Conservatives held all their seats in the north of the borough. Labour won all three seats from the Liberal Democrats in Leyton, and three further seats in three other wards – Cann Hall, Forest, and High Street. Between 1994 and 2010, the Liberal Democrats achieved around a 30 per cent share, and as recently as 2006 held 19 seats. However, their share fell to 12 per cent in 2014 and despite receiving around 30 per cent of the vote in a handful of wards, never got close to winning a seat in any of them because Labour were so dominant and the Conservative share was low. UKIP managed a 20 per cent share in five wards easily won by Conservative candidates, while the Greens had a 12 per cent share across the borough.

In Wandsworth, the Conservatives lost six seats to Labour but still managed to keep control of the borough with 41 of the 60 seats. The Conservative share fell from 2010, but Labour improved theirs by almost four percentage points –entirely at the expense of the Liberal Democrats. Labour held onto all their seats from 2010 and added two in Roehampton and Putney Heath, and Bedford wards, and one in each of Earsfield, and Queenstown wards. This gave Labour all the seats in Roehampton and Putney Heath, and a share of power in the other three. Labour finished with 19 seats, which was their highest since 1986. The minor parties historically do not win much in this borough. The seat won by the Liberal-SDP candidate in 1982 remains the only occurrence in the borough of a seat held by anyone other than the Conservatives and Labour. However, the Greens did achieve a 13 per cent borough-wide share, up from nine per cent in 2010.

The Conservatives and Labour's total share of the vote came to 74 per cent in the City of Westminster – few other boroughs are dominated by the top two parties quite as much. The Conservatives lost four seats to Labour but still comfortably held power in the borough with their 44 out of 60 seats. Labour took all three seats in Churchill ward and one of the three seats in Maida Vale from the Conservatives. Since 1990, the political balance in the borough has been stable with the Conservatives winning between 44 and 48 seats and Labour winning the rest. In Knightsbridge and Belgravia ward, the Conservatives achieved a 75 per cent vote share, which was one of their highest in London. In terms of share of the vote, it was Labour's best performance since 1994, though this was not at the expense of the Conservatives, who share held up well at 41 per cent. Instead, the Liberal Democrats fell away from 19 to six per cent. The Greens share remained healthy, increasing from 11 to 14 per cent.

Directly elected mayors

Voting in these elections is by the supplementary voting (SV) system. Under this system, voters may indicate both their first and second choice candidates, and, if no candidate receives an absolute majority of first-choice votes, all but the two leading candidates are eliminated and the votes of those eliminated redistributed according to their second-choice votes to determine the winner.

The elections in 2014 saw the fourth occasion on which voters in Hackney, Lewisham, and Newham were invited to elect their mayors directly, but only the second time that residents of Tower Hamlets had voted for a Mayor. The first occasion had been in a one off election that took place on 21 October 2010, when the turnout had only been 25.6 per cent. Lutfur Rahman then stood as an Independent candidate and won with almost 52 per cent of the vote. He officially took office on 25 October 2010.

The turnouts in each of the four Mayoral elections were broadly the same as in the local elections and Hackney, Lewisham and Newham were all fairly close to the London average of 38.9 per cent, but Tower Hamlets had the highest turnout in London with 47.6 per cent (Table 4). The proportion of ballot papers that were spoiled fell from 4.6 per cent in 2010 (including Tower Hamlets) to 2.3 per cent in 2014, across all four boroughs.

In 2006, all three mayoral elections required the use of the second preferences, but the procedure was needed only in Lewisham in 2010, and only in Tower Hamlets in 2014. Jules Pipe in Hackney, Steve Bullock in Lewisham, Sir Robin Wales in Newham, and Lutfur Rahman in Tower Hamlets have all won each of the mayoral elections held thus far. The first three represent the Labour Party, while Lutfur Rahman stood for his own party, Tower Hamlets First, in 2014. (Table 5).

Jules Pipe in Hackney, increased his share of the vote from 54 to 60 per cent, however his closest challenger, with 18 per cent, was the Green party candidate Mischa Borriss, who came fourth in 2010.

Steve Bullock just about managed half of the votes (51 per cent), which was about six percentage points more than he received in 2010 when it went to second preference votes. The Conservative, Liberal Democrat and Green candidates all achieved between 10 and 11 per cent of the vote.

In Newham, Sir Robin Wales received 61 per cent of the vote, but this was lower than in 2010 when he received 68 per cent. However, it was still comfortably the higher than the second placed candidate Stefan Mrozinski of the Conservative party who managed 18 per cent.

Lutfur Rahman won in Tower Hamlets, but compared with the other boroughs in 2014, the result was fairly close and it went to the second preference votes. In the first round he achieved 43 per cent of the vote, noticeably lower than the 52 per cent he won with in 2010. The Labour candidate, John Biggs, was in second place with 33 per cent of the vote. After the second round he achieved 52 per cent of the vote to Biggs's 48 per cent.

London Assembly constituency comparisons

This analysis simulates the results which would have been obtained in a first-past-the-post contest in the GLA Constituencies using results from each set of all-London elections during the last 19 years (Table 7).

Note: Eight parliamentary constituencies cross GLA constituency boundaries. In order to make comparisons between these elections, votes from these eight areas have been split depending on the proportion of population aged 18 and over living in each area, and these are displayed in Table 6.

Table 6 Proportions of adult population in parliamentary constituencies that are split between two GLA constituencies

The European Elections

Introduction

The European Parliamentary Election took place on the same day as the borough elections, and the results were announced on Sunday 25 May 2014 to coincide with the other results around Europe. Voting data for each of the London boroughs and the City are available, though like 2009, there is no ward data available because the majority of boroughs did not collect this data since there is no requirement for it. However, London is a single constituency in this election, and the votes from all 33 London authorities are combined in order to find the 8 European representatives for London.

In 2004, London’s representation reduced from ten to nine seats, and in 2009, it reduced further to eight seats. It has remained at this number in 2014. In England, Scotland and Wales the voting system for the European elections is proportional representation - regional closed list. This means that political parties put forward names of candidates in rank order, the number of candidates being no more than the number of seats allowed for each region. These elections are conducted on the basis of proportional representation within regions using a pure form of the d’Hondt formula (there was no lower limit on the percentage of the vote required to gain seats). In each region the allocated seats are awarded using a quota system. The quota is the total number of votes received by a party or independent candidate divided by the number of seats already gained in that region plus one. A list of all nominated candidates and parties are listed on page 231.

Prior to its uniform adoption of proportional representation in 1999, the United Kingdom used first-past-the-post for the European elections and between 1979 and 1994 London was made up of ten constituencies.

Turnout

Around 16.5 million UK residents voted in the election, while over 2.2 million Londoners voted, which was about 59 thousand fewer than in the borough elections. However, the number of Londoners entitled to vote in the European election was 389,000 fewer. Therefore the turnout in London was 40.5 per cent, compared with 38.9 per cent in the local elections. The turnout in London was up from 33.5 per cent five years ago when there were no other elections on the same day. Most of the rest of the UK did not have other elections in May 2014, and this led to a lower turnout, compared with London, of 34.3 per cent, almost exactly the same as in 2009 (34.2 per cent). The borough with the highest poll was Tower Hamlets (50.9 per cent), and the lowest was Kensington and Chelsea (33.6 per cent). Around 23 per cent of votes were made by post, and about 1.1 per cent of votes were rejected. A full breakdown of statistics by borough is available on page 228.

Result

In London, Labour won four seats, two more than in 2009. The Conservatives lost one seat leaving them with two. The Greens and UKIP both held onto their only seat, while the Liberal Democrats lost their only seat (Figure 4). The order in which these seats were distributed using, proportion representation is shown on page 230.

In total, 17 parties (including independents) stood for the European election in London in 2014, two fewer than in 2009, far more than in 2004 when just ten parties were involved, though only four more than in 1999. Only the six parties shown in Figure 5 have stood in all European elections since 1999. The number of votes for the parties outside of these six had steadily increased to 11 per cent in 2009 but fell to seven per cent in 2014.

The Labour party had comfortably the highest share of 37 per cent, far higher than in 2009 when their share was 21 per cent, and was similar to their London share in the borough elections.

The Conservatives share fell to 23 per cent from 27 per cent five years ago. This was three points lower than their share in the local elections. The Liberal Democrats’ share halved to leave them with 7 per cent – even less than their local election share of 10 per cent. The Green Party share fell by two points, to 9 per cent. UKIP increased their share by six points to 17 per cent, significantly higher than the 10 per cent share in the local elections, indicating that a decent proportion of voters vote differently in different elections. Comparing the share of UKIP to the Conservatives between 1999 and 2014 shows that they have been the inverse of each other, and this is shown by trend on Figure 5 where these two lines virtually 'mirror' each other. The total share of both Conservatives and UKIP vote combined has been between 38 and 39 per cent in all four elections since 1999, perhaps indicating that these two parties have taken varying shares from the same pool of voters. However, it is also worth noting that the BNP and UKIP vote combined, only increased from 16 to 18 per cent between 2004 and 2014, though BNP's share fell to less than one per cent in 2014.

UKIP had a greater share in every borough in the European election compared with the local elections, but most notably they achieved a 44 per cent share in Havering, and a 38 per cent share in Bexley - 15 and 17 percentage points higher respectively. In Bexley's case, most of that difference was accounted for by a similar lower share that the Conservatives achieved there, whereas in Havering the difference was mostly down Residents' Association voters switching to UKIP for the European election. In Tower Hamlets, Tower Hamlets First voters switched over to Labour for the European election. In Sutton, the Liberal Democrats performed far worse in the European elections - a difference of 16 points, with about half of those voting for UKIP instead and the rest being spread across the other parties. In Kensington and Chelsea, around 15 per cent voted for UKIP, much higher than the one per cent that voted for them in the local elections, (which was likely the consequence of only two UKIP candidates standing in the borough). Most of the difference was accounted for by Conservative voters moving to UKIP. Figures for the City of London are available for this election. Residents of the City were more likely to vote for the Conservatives and for the Greens compared with the London average (Tables 9 and 11).

London compared with UK voting

The results in London were not fully reflected in the rest of the country. In the UK overall, UKIP achieved a 27 per cent share, giving them the largest share and 24 seats out of a total of 73 - 11 more than in 2009 (Table 8). Labour had a strong performance with a 24 per cent share, up nine points compared with five years ago and giving them seven more seats. The Conservatives lost four per cent share and six seats, while the Liberal Democrats poor showing in London was replicated across the country where they held onto only one of their 11 seats, which was in the South East (Figure 6).

The London Borough Councils

The London boroughs were constituted under the London Government Act, 1963 and the first elections to the new councils were held on 7 May 1964. Prior to 1976, councillors were elected at general elections held every three years but as a result of an order made under the Local Government Act, 1972, the term of office of members of London borough councils was increased to four years. Before 1978 each council included aldermen, to a maximum of one sixth of the councillors, elected by the councillors from among themselves or from persons qualified to be councillors. Under the Local Government Act, 1972, the office of alderman of a London borough council ceased to exist after the 1978 elections. The mayor of each borough is elected annually by each council from among the councillors, with the following exception: under the Local Government Act, 2000, a council proposing a directly elected mayor must carry out a referendum on its proposals, the result of which is binding on the local authority.

Following ward boundary changes which became effective on 22 May 2014, the total number of wards in London increased from 624 to 629 with changes in Hackney, Kensington and Chelsea, and Tower Hamlets. The number of wards per borough varies from 16 in Hammersmith and Fulham, Islington, and Kingston upon Thames to 24 in Croydon. The number of councillors per borough ranges from 45 in Tower Hamlets to 70 in Croydon. Most London wards now return 3 members, but 33 wards return fewer than 3 members and this effects seven boroughs. Bromley with four two-seat and one single-seat ward, Croydon with two two-seat wards, Hackney with six two-seat wards, Hammersmith and Fulham with two two-seat wards, Hillingdon with one two-seat ward, Kensington and Chelsea with four two-seat wards, and Tower Hamlets with 11 two-seat wards and two one-seat wards.

City of London

The Corporation of London is constituted differently to the London boroughs and is, therefore, not included in the current publication. It consists of common councilmen and aldermen in addition to the Lord Mayor. The aldermen are elected for life by the ward voters (who include business as well as resident voters).

Where comparisons have been made between the borough election data and other elections, the City of London has been excluded from the Cities of London and Westminster constituency and the North East GLA Assembly constituency. Current ward boundaries fit within the 2010 parliamentary constituency boundaries.

Tables and calculations

The main results and the share of the votes by party are combined to provide a single section for each London borough giving all the most important information. This appears between pages 1 and 192.

The general method for calculating share of the votes follows that used in 1994. In calculating vote share, residents' associations, independent residents, tenants and residents have been combined into a single grouping which is given the abbreviation REA in the borough statistics.

All percentage vote figures include a correction to reduce the errors due both to parties or groups failing to nominate candidates for all seats in a ward, and to the differing numbers of seats in wards within and between boroughs. The correction chosen is the use of average votes per candidate for any given party or group. Percentages are based on the sum of average votes for a ward or borough, which is thus used as an estimate of the total number of valid votes cast in a single seat election. Percentages do not necessarily add to 100 due to rounding.

Candidates' names

Where known candidates' principal names are shown as their name as per the electoral roll, and otherwise are shown as they appear on the nomination papers.

Acknowledgements

Once again we should like to thank the Returning Officers of the London boroughs who supplied the basic information presented in this volume. Our thanks are also due to the many other members and officers of the London boroughs who were instrumental in improving the quality of our information.

Maps

The maps relating to the 1994 and 1998 elections use the boundary as at 1 April 1996 and there are thus minor discrepancies in the 1994 map for boroughs which had been subject to changes in 1995 and 1996. From 2002 to 2010, the ward map shows wards that came into effect on 2 May 2002. From 2014, the ward map shows boundaries that came into effect on 22 May 2014, which affected Hackney, Kensington and Chelsea, and Tower Hamlets.

General statistics

The General statistics shown on the first page of each borough section are sourced as follows. The electorates are taken from the data provided for this series of publications by the Returning Officers. The mid year resident population is from the GLA population projection 2013 round SHLAA Based (February 2014), provided by GLA Intelligence Unit. The unemployment rates are from the ONS Model-based Estimates of Unemployment (April to March). The average council tax data are from the Communities and Local Government. Additional notes are also provided at the head of individual sections.

Using the results section

The share of the poll data shown in the results section are based on the average number of votes per party per ward. For example, if there are three candidates for one party, the total number of votes for that party would be divided by three, whereas wards with a single candidate would be divided by one. For the borough and constituency shares, the figures for wards (that is votes divided by candidates) within those areas are summed.

Gains are shown at the top of the results for each ward and show changes since the last election in 2010. Gains do not include any changes of allegiance or from by-elections.

Candidates marked with an asterisk (*) indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor in that ward ie the incumbent. This takes account of changes that occurred from a by-election. Other points of note: candidates marked in bold were elected, candidates with 'Ms.' after their name indicates a female candidate, and names are shown as surname, then first name, then initials of any middle names. The names displayed are as provided by the borough election officers and, in some cases, are nicknames.

Ward voting statistics

Notes

The number voting is the number of ballot papers from all sources, included in the count.

The polling station and postal ballot papers are those included in the count.

The categories of reason for rejecting ballot papers are:

- lacking the official mark,

- containing more votes than the number of seats being contested,

- the voter could be identified by writing or marks, and

- unmarked or 'wholly void for uncertainty'.

Parliamentary constituency comparisons

The following table compares the share of the vote of the major parties, between the last two borough elections based on the parliamentary constituencies that the wards are part of.

Both the current and previous ward boundaries fit within parliamentary constituency boundaries, though there have been changes to the number of wards in four constituencies. The number of wards in each constituency is shown in the table.

Figures for 'Cities of London and Westminster' excludes wards in the City of London.
