manage to build up your own clientele to 100 ladies, we'll drop the damage charge." Thus, Haruhi, disguising as a boy, sets out as an intern host in the Host Club, entertaining and catering to the needs of the female students. While constantly thrown into turmoil by the good-looking but preposterous fellow club members as well as her insane "clients," Haruhi develops great friendships and even promotes a new awareness in her peers - a funny yet pleasantly provocative and moving story.

"Ouran High School Host Club" is an animation based on the popular girls' comic series by the same title. The story takes place in a prestigious private school, Ouran High School, where only children of the filthy rich could even hope to attend and unfolds around an unheard-of society in the school called the "Host Club," whose handsome, affluent, and bored male members enslave themselves to similarly beautiful, affluent, and bored lady students. The central character is Haruhi Fujioka, a gifted girl enrolled in the school on scholarship, who was raised single-handedly by her father due to her mother's early death. Because of her father's spendthrift habits, however, she cannot even afford to buy the required school uniform and is forced to dress rough like the boys - clad in a men's shirt, sweater, jeans, and sunglasses. One day, Haruhi accidentally wanders into the Host Club room and shatters a treasured pottery belonging to the club, worth 8 million yen (approx. $70,000). The club members demand that she pay for the damage, but of course, poor Haruhi has no such money. She ends up agreeing to serve as an "errand boy" in the club. It is at such a time that the leader of the club, Tamaki, suggests, "If you

AKAGI

26 eps. x 30 min., Japanese track

Original Comic by Nobuyuki Fukumoto serialized in "Bessatsu Kindai Mahjong" published by Takeshobo.

Tokyo, 1958. A man seriously gambles at a mahjong parlor. He's playing against members of the Ryuzaki yakuza clan. If he loses, he must pay his debt through his own life insurance – truly a game of life and death. With his own existence at stake, he can only play passively, and the game comes to a head. Suddenly, a mysterious boy appears. His name is Akagi, a thirteen-year-old kid. The man senses a strong aura around the youth and decides to have Akagi substitute for him in the next round. Although Akagi knows nothing about mahjong, his natural talent and daring approach finally win the game. This is only the beginning for Akagi, who continues to face various opponents and becomes a legendary mahjong substitute player in the gambling underworld. AKAGI is based on the comic series by Nobuyuki Fukumoto, still running in the magazine Bessatsu Kindai Mahjong. Similar to Fukumoto's other masterpiece, KAIJI, in which he depicted various characters on the edge playing outrageous games of life-and-death, Fukumoto once again attracts audiences with this fantastical and unpredictable story.

IN THE BEGINNING

STORIES FROM THE BIBLE

25 eps. x 25 min., Japanese, English & Mandarin tracks

© NTV & RAI 1992

This series is the last creation of the late Osamu Tezuka, Japan's most renowned animator. Best known outside of Japan for his series ASTROBOY and KIMBA THE WHITE LION, his command of animation was unequalled during his 43-year career. A co-production between NTV and RAI, Radiotelevisione Italiana, IN THE BEGINNING presents the parables from the Old Testament without dogmatic or moralistic intentions. Historical details are depicted in a way that can be enjoyed by viewers of any religious conviction. And while the series has educational value, it is kept from being dry or academic by a lovable little fox that appears in each story and provides an element of fun.

Lupin the 3rd is a personal wealth enhancement engineer extraordinaire - in other words, a thief. Claver and suave, with a flair for high drama, Lupin and his cast of cohorts sweep the globe in search of treasure, butting spies and sleuths along the way.

LUPIN THE 3RD #12: "MISSED BY A DOLLAR"
91-minute episode, Japanese track

When a small ring is put up for auction in New York, one very interested buyer enlists the help of Lupin to get it . . . at all costs. When the bidding starts and a disguised Lupin is about to win, he is outbid by only one dollar by a nefarious competitor. But why all the fuss over a small ring? The ring itself holds the secret to the location of a brooch, and for aspiring singer Sandy, Lupin's "employer" for this job, it's an important memento. However, there is more to the brooch than that. Once an ancient symbol worn by historic conquerors, a menacing other party seeks the ring for its own devious purposes. Determined to get the ring, Lupin resorts to his true form to retrieve it. With a little help from Goemon, Jigen and Fujiko, he is off on yet another adventure.

LUPIN THE 3RD FEATURE: "FAREWELL TO NOSTRADAMUS"
100-minute episode, Japanese track

Leizuli, a mysterious prophet and leader of a sect devoted to Nostradamus, is also trying snatch the very same book to use it to conquer the world. Can Lupin defeat the evil Leizuli, find the book of Nostradamus, and rescue the girl in time?

LUPIN THE 3RD FEATURE: "DEAD OR ALIVE"
96-minute episode, Japanese track

Lupin the 3rd and his cohorts are off to the island republic of Zufu - reported site of a hidden treasure. No human has ever gone there and returned safely. When Lupin arrives, he meets Oaly, the girlfriend of Panisch, son of the King of Zufu. Panisch is organizing a resistance group to overthrow the leader of the country, who is a vicious dictator. Lupin runs into Panisch, who is about to be executed for treason. But there is, of course, a catch: Only Panisch holds the secret to finding the treasure. In addition, a million-dollar reward is offered for Lupin, dead or alive. Naturally, assassins from all over the world have gathered on Zufu for this chance of a lifetime. This, plus a surprise-ending, make for constant action and adventure -- just what Lupin handles best.

MONSTER

74 eps x 24 min., Japanese & Mandarin tracks, available worldwide except North America and Latin America

What would you do if one of the young lives you saved turned out to be a monster...

Dr. Kenzo Tenma is acknowledged as a brilliant Japanese brain surgeon on the staff of Dusseldorf's Eisler Memorial Hospital and is engaged to the hospital director's daughter Eva. However, two surgeries performed on one fateful day change his life forever. First, a young child (a twin) near death from a severe head injury is rushed to the hospital. Soon after, the city mayor arrives, also gravely ill. When the hospital director orders him to ignore the child and treat the mayor, Tenma refuses, insisting on treating the patient who arrived first. The child survives; the mayor does not, and because he has ignored orders, Tenma finds himself snubbed by the hospital executives, including the hospital director. But then these same top-ranking executives are all found dead under mysterious circumstances. Detective Lunge of the BKA, Germany's Bundeskriminalamt (Federal Criminal Police Office) suspects that Tenma is behind the crimes, but has no evidence to support his theory.

Nine years after the fateful surgery, Tenma has become head of the hospital's surgery department. One day Tenma sees a new patient — Yunkles, one of several suspects purported to be behind a series of murders of middle - ages, childless couples.

"The monster...is...coming" he warns Tenma, but then disappears a few days later. Searching for him, Tenma finds Yunkles, and there is someone pointing a gun at him. Behind the barrel is none other than Johan, Tenma's patient of nine years ago. Before he shoots and kills Yunkles, Johan tells Tenma that he is behind the deaths of the hospital executives. Then Johan disappears, and now Tenma is the prime suspect behind all of the murders.

Had it been a mistake to save Johan? Tenma decides he must find Johan and learn the truth. But that is only the beginning of his voyage of terror...
