WISCONSIN WOMEN LEGISLATORS – A HISTORICAL LIST

In the years since the first three women were elected as “assemblymen” in 1925, a total of 94 women have held seats in the Wisconsin Legislature, including 35 who serve in the 2003 Legislature. The largest number of women to serve in a single session were the 36 members of the 1993 Legislature.

This brief summarizes the service of Wisconsin women legislators. Section I lists all the women members alphabetically by house and indicates their party, district, occupation, and terms of service. Section II lists the members serving in each session.

The Senate

Eight women serve in the 2003 Senate. One is new to the senate. All but one have previous legislative experience and have served in both houses.

In 1975, Kathryn Morrison became the first woman to serve in the Wisconsin Senate. Since her inauguration, there have been 18 women senators, 13 with previous experience in the assembly. The largest number of women to serve in the senate in a single session was 11 in the 1999 and 2001 sessions. Senator Carol Roessler, first elected to the senate in a 1987 special election, is currently senior in senate service. Senator Barbara Lorman, who served in eight sessions, beginning with the 1979 session, has the longest tenure for a woman senator to date.

The Assembly

Of the 27 women elected to the 2003 Assembly, seven are in their first term. This compares to a record nine who were newly elected to the 1993 session.

Representative Annette Polly Williams, who begins her 12th session in the 2003 Assembly, is currently the senior woman representative and has served longer than any other woman legislator in either house. Representative Susan Engeleiter appears to be the youngest woman ever elected to the Wisconsin Legislature. She was 22 years old when she took office in January 1975. The largest number of women to serve in the assembly in one session was 33 in the 1989 session.

Leadership

Senator Mary Panzer is the highest ranking woman legislator serving as Republican majority leader in the 2003 Senate. She is the first woman to serve as majority leader in either house. Over the years, women have held increasingly important positions of leadership. In 1976, Senator Kathryn Morrison was the first woman to serve on the powerful Joint Committee on Finance, and Representative Mary Lou Munts was the first woman to cochair that committee in the 1983 session. In the 1985 session, Senator Susan Engeleiter was the first woman to be chosen senate minority leader, and Representative Betty Jo Nelsen was elected the first woman minority leader of the assembly in 1987.
