ARTHUR EDWIN SHELTON

Town of Calgary Councillor, 1886 November 4 - 1888 January 16

City of Calgary Archives # CalA PP-02976

Arthur Edwin Shelton [graphic records] . -- 1 photoprint: b&w; 8 x 10 (21 cm x 26 cm) . -- 1886-1888.

Biography of Arthur Edwin Shelton:

Arthur Edwin Shelton emigrated to Canada from his native northhamptonshire, England sometime about 1882, after graduation from Higham Grammar School and service from the local School Board. He had been sel-employed in a business venture which had taken him all over England, then in Canada joined the Winnipeg furniture firm of Bishop and Shelton in which another of the family, Henry Thomas Shelton, was already a partner. A skilled craftsman in carpentry and cabinet-making, it was not long before he set up his own furniture establishment at Calgary in February 1884 and quickly became much involved as well with community affairs, as a sportsman, captain of the cricket team, president of the baseball club, a volunteer fireman and finally Town Councillor, amongst many other capacities. During the Riel Rebellion of 1885 he strongly favoured the position that an infantry unit should be raised locally, as opposed to calvary.

In January 1888 he was elected to the Mayoralty in a three-way race uniquely consisting solely of Calgary's first three Mayors, and served one-year term, his two defeated opponents being his only two predecessors in that Office, Mayors Murdoch and King, both of whom had simply stood on their previous records. Councillor Shelton, by all accounts a "stern, unbending Tory", instead presented innovative, if controversial, new concepts, proposing, for example, the sale of licences for just about every purpose imaginable in order to generate revenue and reduce or defray taxation. He had been furthermore over the years a leading and especially vocal proponent of increased fire protection measures, a vitally important issue to frontier citizens of the time, and had brought forth numerous suggestions and policies toward that end, some of which he had actively instituted with his own personal resources.

As Mayor, and simultaneously Chairman of the police and Relief Committee of Council, which oversaw Municipal policing operations, his most far-reaching act seems to have been his instruction to the Chief of Police, (at first John S. Ingram, who resigned 28 February 1888 partly in protest over such political interference, and then, after 14 March 1888, Matthew Sylvester Dillabaugh), to cease overt intervention in the budding gambling and prostitution trades, a move which resulted in nearly uncontrolled proliferation and problems which remained rampant and continued to dog authorities for many years afterward: which decision, one could easily be tempted to speculate or conjecture, may possibly have stemmed from his own status as a young, single man. In all fairness, however, it would also have been very much in keeping with his general philosophy to have viewed these activities as a source of much needed revenue being generated and pumped into the local economy.

Another hallmark of Mayor Shelton's administration was the decision to hold Council Sessions at the comparatively luxuriously-appointed new Fire Hall rather than the dingy, miserable old wooden Town Hall, much against the wishes of the Fire Brigade. This action resulted in a dispute which eventually culminated in the arbitrary firing of the entire Brigade by Council (not in the Brigade's mass resignation as falsely implied in subsequent histories) during Shelton's temporary absence, an event unlikely to have occurred had he, a fervent supporter of the Brigade, been present. The two groups had been separated by a number of minor issues and a compromise amicably accommodating both positions was quite near when the crisis was escalated out of all proportion primarily by the cantankerous attitude and abrasive personality of Councillor and Acting Mayor Wesley Fletcher Orr, who, in his alter ego as Editor of The Herald, then proceeded to report the whole matter in ongoing fashion according to his liking and to his personal way of thinking, The outcome was that the Council established a new Brigade under its direct control with the previous Deputy Chief as Chief, and with many members from the dissolved organization, and the ensuing debacle could not be fully resolved until midway through the term of the succeeding Council. A settlement was finally forced upon the new Mayor, Daniel Webster Marsh, and his colleagues by citizens increasingly concerned with steady and general denegration in the quality of fire protection, especially following the shoddy showing during the destruction of the former Boynton Hall and adjacent dwellings in February 1889.

After leaving office in January 1889 Arthur Shelton also dabbled for a time in investments, insurance and real estate as a partner with Frederick William Padmore in their own agency here, and sat as a Justice of the Peace and Coroner. During this period he additionally served as President of the Calgary Institute for the Arts, Science and Literature, (the "Calgary Literary Institute" for short), and was active in fraternal organizations such as the Sons of England. He toured Eastern Canada extensively in early 1889 and again visited Eastern North America, travelling as far south as Kansas, in the summer and autumn of 1893, whilst a return visit to his native England in 1895 was his first emigration.

Expansion of business interests led him within a few years to spend more and more time in Vancouver, and, a serious protracted illness having already forced him to abandon and dispose of his Calgary furniture and carpet outlet in 1890, he finally decided to relocate permanently and concentrate more exclusively upon his West coast mercantile affairs instead. Whilst there he occasionally officiated in minor functions of public trust including that of Returning Officer for the Vancouver City constituency.

Arthur Edwin Shelton died 1 February 1937 in Vancouver, British Columbia.

After the creation of the two countries, he remained Consul for the Swedish nation. GEORGE ALBERT ALLEN

Biography of George Albert Allen:

George Albert Allen, a former Alderman of this city from 1898 through to 1899, came to Western Canada the year of the second Riel Rebellion, 1885.

He joined the Northwest Mounted Police and served under Colonel Berchner during the Riel Rebellion.

In 1891, he took his discharge from the force.

Shortly thereafter, he went into business in Calgary. After nine years as a self-enterprising citizen, he was elected Alderman. His energy during that time was mainly focused on ensuring that Calgary would become the main divisional point for the Canadian Pacific Railway in Alberta.

During World War 1914-1918, Mr. Allen enlisted with the 56th Battalion and was sent overseas in 1916. He did not, however, return to Calgary after his discharge in 1921. Instead, he took up permanent residence at 60 Lammas Park Road, Ealing, London, England.

In the summer of 1930, George Allen and his wife took an extended tour of Canada which included a visit to Calgary. It was on this occasion that Mr. Allen presented the Calgary division of the R.N.W.M.P. with a magnificent gift which took the form of the "Allen Foundation Trust". This sum of money was administered by the Royal Trust Company of this city and paid every year for ten years.

Although George A. Allen made his home in England, his memories of his adventures with the Mounted Police, interest in the welfare of ex-comrades and his honorary life membership of the association, no doubt, encouraged strong, longlasting ties to Calgary.

Health reasons, however, brought him to Calgary in 1892. His early years were spent surveying the district northwest of the city. Later, he found employment as an agent with the Imperial Life Insurance Company of Canada.

From 1902 through to 1904, Lieutenant Colonel Armstrong served as a City Councillor. Calgary's present street numbering and electric light systems, is a product of his two year term. Calgary is also indebted to him for the beginning of municipal ownership.

Mr. Armstrong's military career was equally impressive. He gained his first militia experience when he joined the Canadian Mounted Rifles in 1903. He was then transferred to the 15th Light Horse Regiment. In 1910, he organized the 103rd Calgary Rifles.

His military background and organizational skills served him well during World War 1914-1918. In 1914, he recruited five hundred men for the 10th Battalion and later raised the 56th Battalion which he led into action. The Battalion went overseas in March, 1915. In mid 1918, the Colonel was invalided home.

Lieutenant Colonel Armstrong's post-War endeavours included a directorship for several years at the Calgary Building Society; the ultimate result of which was the Armstrong Block which the Colonel had built himself. He also served as Vice-President with Alberta Financial Brokers Limited. In the 1940's, he was President at the Calgary branch of the Alberta Motor Association for seven terms and continued to be involved in it's organization up until the end of that decade. As a pioneer motorist, he did much to promote the improvement of Provincial roads.

Lieutenant Colonel William Charles Gordon Armstrong died on 1951 February 06.

Adoniram Judson Samis [graphic records] . -- 1 photoprint: b&w; 8 x 10 (21 cm x 26 cm) . -- 1907-1916.

Biography of Adoniram Judson Samis:

Adoniram Judson Samis, whose name was given to him in honour of the great missionary to Burma, was born in Sarnia, Ontario, on 1873 December 27.

He grew up on farms in Millbrook, Ohio and Platte River, sixty miles west of Omaha, Nebraska. In 1893 May, A.J. Samis left Platte River to join his father who had in 1892, found land fifty-seven miles north of Calgary at Olds. Because of the shortage of teachers in Western Canada, he was given a permit to teach and appointed to the Stoney Indian Reserve School at Morley, where Reverend John McDougall was missionary. At the same time, he worked as the Morley correspondent for the Calgary Herald.

Teaching did not, however, appeal to him as much as the newspaper business. After a brief apprenticeship as a printer, he purchased a printing press and type and founded a newspaper called the Olds Oracle.

In 1904, he leased his company and went to Calgary. He chose to stay in Calgary after his paper business burned down. Like many others, he found success in the lucrative business of real estate.

His lengthy civic career began on 1906 December 10, when he was elected to serve on City Council. His major interest during his second term, 1910 to 1912, was for the establishment of Calgary's publicly owned Paving Department.

In 1913 January, Mr. Samis became Commissioner and lost his post to James H. Garden in 1914. He returned to City Hall as a Councillor in 1915 December and was re-elected at the end of this post as Commissioner. In 1922, the Commissionership was reduced to a one-man post. He lost this bid which was to be the last one he made in Calgary civic politics.

On 1922 December 15, the Spokane Express left Calgary, bound for Los Angeles with a very sick Mr. Samis on it. He was joined by his wife Anna Jean and son Frank, early in 1923.

Adoniram Judson Samis spent the rest of his life in Los Angeles.

George Henry Ross [graphic records] . -- 1 photoprint: b&w; 8 x 10 (21 cm x 26 cm) . -- 1910-1914.

Biography of George Henry Ross:

George Henry Ross, the third Senator in Calgary's history, hailed from Bedeque, Prince Edward Island. He was born in 1878 June.

At the turn of the century, he came west to Calgary, accompanied by a dream to become a lawyer. It took him six years at numerous jobs in mining and ranching to attend Law School at the University of Michigan. Mr. Ross realized his dream and graduated in 1907, choosing civil rather than criminal law.

He returned to Calgary and entered into the civic service as Alderman on 1909 December 13. He was re-elected again on 1912 December 9, and served yet another one year term on Council. He attributed the success of his candidacy to the belief that "if people liked a chap, he was elected". There were, as far as he was concerned, no party lines on Council then.

In 1913, Mr. Ross returned to his law practice after an unsuccessful candidacy for the Provincial Legislature. However, he never once removed himself from politics. For nearly a quarter century, he belonged to a group which frequented the Old White Avenue Cafe on 8th Avenue. This "Canadian equivalent of the great Johnstonian coffee-house tradition" met once a week and discussed the local, provincial and national issues of the day.

In 1940, East Calgary sent him to Ottawa as the first and last Liberal to be elected by that constituency. He was defeated in East Calgary by Colonel Doug Harkness, G.C., in 1945. Three years later, 1948, he was elected to the Canadian Senate where he became recognized as an advocate of free trade.

In the summer of 1958, Mr. Ross returned from Ottawa to Calgary with his wife May (nee McDougall) at age forty-seven, for the Stampede which was their custom. He fell ill while in Calgary and died at the Calgary General Hospital of a blood clot the end of 1958 September.

EDITH PATTERSON

City of Calgary Alderman, 1932 January 1 - 1932 November 7

Edith Patterson . -- 1927-1932.

Biography of Edith Patterson:

Edith Patterson, one of the first women to hold a seat on Calgary's City Council, spent a half a century of her life here in Calgary. She was raised though, from the time of her birth on 1876 March 07, in the village of Tatamagouche at Truro, Nova Scotia. Her father, W. A. Patterson, served in Nova Scotia or Federal Governments for more than forty years.

Edith Patterson moved to Calgary in 1912, where she attended normal school. Following this, she went on to become a "favourite" among her students, at such schools as Riverside, Sunalta and Stanley Jones. Because of her concern for the interests of youth, she insisted that the qualifications for teachers at the lower level be raised. Furthermore, Edith Patterson advocated the necessity of education so as to place the public school teacher on the same academic level as the high school teacher. She carried such convictions into her term as President of the Alberta Education Association in 1930 and ultimately, her longlasting role in the Alberta Teacher's Alliance, in 1934.

Miss Patterson was active in the political Labour Party from its onset and served as its first Secretary in 1919. In the "Dirty Thirties", she was President of its Women's Section. Her honest belief in the "Woodsworth brand of Socialism" inspired her to act as one of the founders of the C.C.F. in Calgary. From 1926 to 1932, she served on Calgary City Council as an Alderman. The only disappointing experience in her political career occurred in 1935, when she was defeated as Federal C.C.F. candidate in a Social Credit landslide.

Although Edith Patterson's years of service and commitment to Calgary ended when she returned to Nova Scotia to live in retirement, fellow Calgarian's fondly remembered her as a "public spirited citizen".

Miss Patterson died on 1967 March 06, in a nursing home at Truro, Nova Scotia, the day before her 91st birthday.

A career in banking and service in the army overseas preceeded his studies for a Bachelor of Arts degree which he completed at the University of Toronto, Ontario. In 1954, he graduated from Trinity College where he studied theology. Robert Greene went on to be ordained as a priest in the Anglican Church.

The Reverend Robert "Bob" Greene arrived in Calgary, Alberta in 1965, four years later he became the Rector at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Wildwood Community. It was during his service at the parsonage that Reverend Greene recognized the need to secure public housing for low-income Calgarians.

The Reverend was not without experience in this matter as he was Chairman of the Inter-Faith Community Action Committee's Sub-Committee on housing for low-income Calgarians.

During his term as Alderman, 1969-1971, he found an ally in Mayor Rod Sykes. It was also at this time that he witnessed the steady growth of federally-aided low-cost housing. As Chairman of Calgary Housing Authority, he saw to it that City-owned housing was among the several housing programs. As the Reverend pointed out, "housing was not a privilege, it was right". Even though Reverend Greene enjoyed "the rough and tumble" of Council in these two years, he declined to stand for re-election in 1971. His decision was partly based on the opposition, but was largely because of Robert Greene's confidence in what he had accomplished.
