Volume 22

"BROTHERS" OR OTHERS?Muslim Arab Sudanese in Egypt

NEW

Anita Fábos, University of East London

Sudanese Arabs in Cairo have formed a fundamental part of Egyptian history and society during many centuries of close relations between Egypt and Sudan. In spite of being described by the government and official press as "brothers" in a united Nile Valley, recent political unrest negatively affected the Sudanese in Cairo and showed up the precariousness of their legal status. Neither citizens nor foreigners, their uncertain place in Egypt has given rise to an ethnic discourse that does not follow the common pattern of drawing upon obvious characteristics to mark difference. This rich ethnographic study shows that ethnicity does not only flow from sharply drawn distinctions, but can also be created from social values held in common. The resulting ethnic identity is ambiguous and flexible, allowing minorities to voice their frustrations and make claims for their own uniqueness while simultaneously acknowledging the identity that they share with the dominant Egyptian community.

NEW REGIONALISM AND ASYLUM SEEKERSChallenges Ahead

NEW

Edited by Susan Kneebone and Felicity Rawlings-Sanei, both at Monash University

Taking the context of forced migration, this book addresses the role that regional, in contrast to national or global, institutions and relationships play in shaping asylum policies and procedures. It examines the causes of forced migration movements; the direction of forced migration flows and its effect upon the immediate region; policy responses towards forced migration (in particular ASEAN and the European Community); cooperative arrangements and agreements between regional states; and the protection of human rights. The book also considers the role that regional responses are likely to play in determining the direction of asylum policy in receiving states and procedures in the future.

(RE)CONSTRUCTING ARMENIA IN LEBANON AND SYRIA

NEW

Ethno-Cultural Diversity and the State in the Aftermath of a Refugee Crisis

Nicolaò Migliorino, Al Akhawayn University in Ifrane, Morocco

For more than eight decades, since their mass resettlement to the Levant in the wake of the First World War, the Armenian communities of Lebanon and Syria appear to have successfully maintained a distinct identity as an ethno-culturally diverse group, in spite of representing a small non-Arab and Christian minority within a very different, mostly Arab and Muslim environment. The author shows that, while in Lebanon the state has facilitated the development of an extensive and effective system of Armenian ethno-cultural preservation, in Syria the emergence of centralizing, authoritarian regimes in the 1950s and 1960s has severely damaged the autonomy and cultural diversity of the Armenian community. However, since President Hafiz Al-Asad seized power in 1970, Armenian ethno-cultural diversity was able to make a partial recovery, as the community seemed to have come to a tacit arrangement with the regime. In Lebanon, on the other hand, the Armenian community suffered the consequences of the recurrent breakdown of the consociational arrangement that regulates public life.

TRANSNATIONAL NOMADSHow Somalis Cope with Refugee Life in the Dadaab Camps of KenyaCindy Horst, UNHCR

The daily pictures of refugee camps, mostly in Africa, makes one wonder how the refugees manage to survive under these abject conditions. This path-breaking study of Somalis in a camp in Kenya offers some explanations: the author argues that it is wrong to look at the camps in isolation but that one has to consider historical, social and transnational dimensions if one wants to understand the coping mechanisms that enable people to survive. Her book shows how Somalis were able to adapt their "nomadic" heritage to life in the camp, including a high degree of mobility and strong social networks that also reach beyond the confines of the camp as far as the US and Europe.

DEVELOPMENT-INDUCED DISPLACEMENTProblems, Policies and People

Edited by Chris de Wet, Rhodes University, Grahamstown, South Africa

Some ten million people worldwide are displaced or resettled every year, due to development projects, such as the construction of dams, irrigation schemes, urban development, transport, conservation or mining projects. The results have usually been very negative for most of those people who have to move, as well as for other people in the area, such as host populations. The contributors to this volume argue that there is a complexity, and a tension, inherent in trying to reconcile enforced displacement of people with the subsequent creation of a socio-economically viable and sustainable environment. Only when these are squarely confronted, will it be possible to adequately deal with the problems and to improve resettlement policies.

CHILDREN OF PALESTINEExperiencing Forced Migration in the Middle East

Dawn Chatty, Deputy Director of the Refugee Studies Centre, University of Oxford, and Gillian Lewando Hundt, Director of the Health Institute, University of Warwick

"An indispensable contribution to the historical record of Palestinian refugees...[This volume is] a highly convincing and often heart-breaking chronology of suffering. Specific but highly representative, selective but fundamentally factual, each chapter of the book unfolds the endless saga of Paletinian plight."

– JRAI

"This is a useful resource for anyone working in Palestinian refugee camps...I feel privileged to have had the chance to review this book."

CHILDREN AND YOUTH ON THE FRONT LINEEthnography, Armed Conflict and Displacement

Edited by Jo Boyden, Social Anthropologist and Senior Research Officer, Refugee Studies Centre, University of Oxford, and Joanna de Berry, the Children in Crisis Advisor in Afghanistan for Save the Children USA

"This deeply disturbing but brilliant collection will be a challenge to a burgeoning literature on children in war situations...[especially] to those who wish to make a black and white distinction between children and adults."

—Children, Youth and Environments

Based on detailed ethnographic description and young people's own accounts, this volume provides insights into children's experiences as both survivors and perpetrators of violence. It bears testimony to the grim effects of warfare and displacement on the young, yet maintains that children are not the passive victims of conflict but engage actively with the conditions of war.

REFUGEES AND THE TRANSFORMATION OF SOCIETIES
Agency, Policies, Ethics and Politics

Edited by Philomena Essed, Senior Researcher at the University of Amsterdam, Georg Freerks, Professor of Disaster Studies, Rural Development Sociology Group of Wageningen University, and Joke Schrijvers, Emeritus Professor of Development Studies, University of Amsterdam

The refusal or reception of refugees has had serious implications for the social policies and social realities of numerous countries in east and west. Exploring experiences, interpretations and practices of "refugees," "the internally displaced," and "returnees" in, or emerging from, societies in violent conflict, this volume challenges prevailing orthodoxies and encourages new developments in refugee studies.

CROSSING THE AEGEANAn Appraisal of the 1923 Compulsory Population Exchange between Greece and Turkey

Edited by Renée Hirschon, Research Associate of the Refugee Studies Centre, Queen Elizabeth House, and Lecturer, St Peter's College, University of Oxford

"This volume is a long overdue endeavour to tackle the thorny and delicate issue of the compulsory population exchange... The argumentative force of the volume lies in the careful analysis of the contradictory and ambiguous ramifications of the convention."

—The Greek Review of Social Research

Following the defeat of the Greek Army in 1922 by nationalist Turkish forces, the 1923 Lausanne Convention specified the first internationally ratified compulsory population exchange. It proved to be a watershed in the eastern Mediterranean, having far-reaching ramifications both for the new Turkish Republic, and for Greece which had to absorb over a million refugees. This volume addresses the challenge of writing history from both sides of the Aegean and provides, for the first time, a forum for multidisciplinary dialogue across national boundaries.

REFUGEE POLICY IN SUDAN

1967—1984

Ahmed Karadawi

Edited by Peter Woodward, University of Reading

"... an excellent addition to what is becoming an increasingly recognized topical series of monographs."

—Dr. J. K. Rogge, UN Development Programme

Based on the work of Ahmed Karadawi, this book discusses Sudanese government policy towards the refugee flows from Ethiopia into the Eastern Region of Sudan in the period 1967 to 1984, arguing that there were two underlying assumptions behind successive governments' policies: that refugees were considered a security threat and a socio-economic burden. In response, the policies incorporated the Organization of African Unity norms, which offered a platform to depoliticize the refugees, equally with the international conventions relating to refugees, which assured the externalization of responsibility and access to aid.

Edited by Doreen Indra, University of Lethbridge, Alberta

"Altogether, this volume has a great deal to offer any reader concerned with the global scenario of armed conflict, environmental stress, large-scale displacement, and the desperate search for security."

—Signs

"... a valuable contribution ... The mix of personal reflections, empirical material and academic debates results in a rich tapestry of perspectives and positions ... fascinating reading."

—Development and Change

"... provides important testimony that such research is increasingly necessary to address gender relations of power, privilege, and prestige informed by situated notions of maleness and femaleness in the case of forced migration ... a valuable contribution."

THE END OF THE REFUGEE CYCLE? Refugee Repatriation and Reconstruction

Edited by Richard Black and Khalid Koser, both at the School of African and Asian Studies, University of Sussex

The changing constructions and realities of refugee repatriation provide the backdrop for this book which presents new empirical research on examples of refugee repatriation and reconstruction. Apart from providing up-to-date material, it also fills a more fundamental gap in the literature which has tended to be based on pedagogical reasoning rather than actual field research. Adopting a global perspective, this volume draws together conclusions from highly varied experiences of refugee repatriation and defines repatriation and reconstruction as part of a wider and interrelated refugee cycle of displacement, exile and return.

UNDERSTANDING IMPOVERISHMENTThe Consequences of Development-Induced Displacement

Edited by Christopher McDowell, International Development Centre, University of Oxford

The contributions in this volume raise many questions about 'development' and 'progress' in the late twentieth century. What is revealed are the enormous problems and disastrous affects which continue to accompany displacement operations in many countries, which raise the ever more urgent question of whether the benefits of infrastructure development justify or outweigh the pain of the radical disruption of peoples lives.

Volume 1

MIGRATION PAST,
MIGRATION FUTURE*Germany and the United StatesEdited by Klaus J. Bade and Myron Weiner[†]"... useful and readable summaries of research completed in the last two decades."*—Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies

The United States is an immigrant country. Germany is not. This volume shatters this widely held myth and reveals the remarkable similarities (as well as the differences) between the two countries. Essays by leading German and American historians and demographers describe how these two countries have become to have the largest number of immigrants among advanced industrial countries, how their conceptions of citizenship and nationality differ, and how their ethnic compositions are likely to be transformed in the next century as a consequence of migration, fertility trends, citizenship and naturalization laws, and public attitudes.

IMMIGRATION ADMISSIONSThe Search for Workable Policies in Germany and the United StatesEdited by Kay Hailbronner, David A. Martin and Hiroshi Motomura

There is general agreement today that traditional approaches to immigration admissions in the major receiving countries of the West have serious shortcomings either in concept or implementation, or at times in both. These essays, all written by leading immigration experts, consider the philosophical and moral constraints on immigration law and policy, the basic elements of a comprehensive migration policy, and specific policy areas, including family reunification and asylum. Taken together, these perspectives represent a fresh, comparative look at some of the most urgent issues in this pivotal area of law and policy.

Focaal

European Journal of Anthropology

Editor: Don Kalb, Central European University and Utrecht University

Focaal-European Journal of Anthropology is a leading journal in the anthropology of Europe. Although it encourages contributions that cover all world regions, the journal is unique among anthropology journals for its affiliation with 'anthropology at home' and studies of 'the West', Europe, and post-socialism in the widest possible sense. In particular, Focaal provides an important platform for addressing issues of globalization, imperialism, and the associated social violence and disruption in these regions.
