

Jeremy Vine Celebrity Dinner

6th Sept 2006

Starts 6.30pm

Finishes 11.00pm

Opus, 54 Cornwall Street,
Birmingham B3 2DE

Top BBC presenter Jeremy Vine is to be guest of honour at a Birmingham Press Club celebrity dinner in September.

Jeremy, who began his career on the Coventry Evening Telegraph, presents a current affairs and music show on BBC Radio 2 each day.

He is also the BBC's election graphics expert, having replaced Peter 'Swingometer' Snow at the end of last year.

Jeremy, 41, has a wealth of experience and is particularly proud of a report he made seven years ago about police brutality in South Africa.

Included in the filmed report was footage of police in Johannesburg beating up two suspects, one of whom later died.

This resulted in 22 police officers being suspended, two of whom were later convicted of offences.

Jeremy Vine joined the BBC in 1987, following his apprenticeship with the Coventry Evening Telegraph.

After a two-year traineeship, he landed a job as a reporter on BBC Radio 4's flagship Today programme.

Between 1993 and 1997, he was a Westminster based lobby correspondent.

He then spent two years as the BBC's Africa correspondent, before returning to London, where he became a full time presenter on BBC Two's Newsnight programme, until he moved to Radio 2 in 2002.

One of his recent shows attracted controversy when he broadcast a spoof item about the 'death' of Soham murderer Ian Huntley, which he will no doubt refer to 6 September.

Jeremy Vine is an award winning journalist - apart from the South African police film, he won an Amnesty International Radio Award for a 'From Our Own Correspondent' report about a former child soldier from Sierra Leone.

He was also named 'Speech Broadcaster of the Year' at the 2005 Sony Radio Academy Awards.
