Brill's Encyclopedia of Hinduism Online

Edited by Knut A. Jacobsen (Editor-in-Chief), University of Bergen, and Helene Basu, University of Münster, Angelika Malinar, University of Zürich, Vasudha Narayanan, University of Florida (Associate Editors)

The first three volumes of the Encyclopedia of Hinduism are now available online!

Planned updates: In December 2013 Volume IV will be added, in 2014 Volume V.

Brill's Encyclopedia of Hinduism presents the latest research on all the main aspects of the Hindu traditions. Its essays are original work written by the world's foremost scholars on Hinduism. The encyclopedia aims at a balanced and even-handed view of Hinduism, recognizing the divergent perspectives and methods in the academic study of a religion that is both an ancient historical tradition and a flourishing tradition today. The encyclopedia embraces the greatest possible diversity, plurality, and heterogeneity, thus emphasizing that Hinduism encompasses a variety of regional traditions as well as a global world religion.

Presenting the same heralded original essays and research from thematic print edition, Brill's Encyclopedia of Hinduism Online is now available in a fully searchable, dynamic digital format. The online reference currently includes volumes I-III of ultimately five volumes presenting articles under the following headings:

Volume I	Volume II	Volume III	Volume IV	Volume V
Regions and the Regional Traditions	Sacred Texts and Languages	Society	Historical Perspectives	Religious Symbols
Sacred Space and Time	Ritual Traditions	Religious Specialists	Poets, Teachers, and Saints	Hinduism and Migration:
Gods, Goddesses, and Divine Powers	Arts	Religious Traditions	Relation to Other Religions and Traditions	Contemporary Communities
	Concepts	Philosophy	Hinduism and Contemporary Issues	outside South Asia
				Some Modern Religious Groups and Teachers

Le Grand Ricci Online

Le Grand Dictionnaire Ricci de la langue chinoise, or rather, as it has become widely known since its publication in 2001, Le Grand Ricci is the most comprehensive up-to-date dictionary of Chinese into a modern Western language. Though it covers the whole history of Chinese language development, most of the dictionary deals with early and imperial period Chinese language usage. Explanations and translations are in French. *

Our user-friendly online interface allows the user to efficiently perform even complex queries through all 13,392 main entries (single characters) or 280,000 expressions (or chinese words composed of a set of characters).

Entries can be looked up:

- by chinese character
- by romanization (pinyin) (with or without tones)
- by radical (Kangxi or simplified) and the number of additional strokes
- by total number of strokes (of the simplified or traditional forms)

The words (expressions) can be looked up:

- by their chinese characters
- by the romanization (with or without tones) of their component characters
- in both cases one can use one, several or all of the components, either as a precise sequence or anywhere (and in any order) in the chinese word

* Le Grand Ricci was developed by the Ricci institutes of Paris and Taipei through the Ricci Association (www.grandricci.org). First published with Desclée De Brouwer (DDB), the Dictionary is now with les Éditions du Cerf, where the printed volumes can be acquired at www.editionsducerf.fr

Chinese Research Perspectives Online

Economy, Education, Environment, Law, Population and Labour, and Society

The former Chinese Academy of Social Sciences Yearbooks are now part of the Chinese Research Perspectives series. As before the focus is on the six research areas: Economy, Education, Environment, Law, Population and Labor, and Society. The selection of contributions covers developments in China of particular interest to a Western (non-Chinese speaking) audience and occasionally differs from the Chinese-language yearbooks. The selected materials continue to provide Western readers with firsthand insights into the discussions of China's top scholars on contemporary issues in their country.

Chinese Film- and Newsreel Scripts from the Cultural Revolution Online

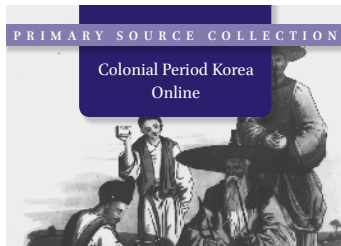

Produced mostly by the Central Newsreel and Documentary Film Studio of China, documentary films and newsreels were two of the major mass media and communication channels in China from the 1950's through the 1970's. They covered all aspects of social activities, though the emphasis was on developments and achievements in the building of a socialist country. In order to reach even broader public audiences, government agents produced and printed the transcripts and shot lists for the films and sent them to cities and rural areas. The bulk of the items in the collection are transcripts for the documentary films and newsreels from the Cultural Revolution, 1966-1976. Few of these printed materials have survived due to the poor quality of the paper upon which they were printed.

Colonial-Period Korea Online

Advisor: Ria Koopmans-De Bruijn

Here is a unique collection of rare documents relating to the Japanese occupation of Korea, from the late nineteenth century up to 1945, representing a highly significant period in Korean history, and vital for a true understanding of many reflexes in the Koreas today. In 1876, Japan "opened" Korea to outside contact for the first time. What followed was a period of sparring with the Chinese over the right of influence in Korea, a rivalry which culminated in the Sino-Japanese war of 1894-95. Following victory, Japan steadily increased its presence and interference in Korean matters until the outright annexation of the country in 1910. Korea would remain a Japanese colony until the end of the Pacific War in 1945. Drawn from the holdings of the C.V. Starr East Asian Library at Columbia University, New York, the collection includes more than 62,000 pages in Japanese language, 18,000 pages of Western (in most cases English) early impressions of Korea, and Korean texts (16,000 pages). This true treasure-trove, preserved through our online service, now presents the texts conveniently on your desktop.

Japan Chronicle Online

The English-language Japan Chronicle Weekly (1902 – 1940) is the newspaper of record for Japan's engagement with modernity and its emergence, through war, political and social upheaval and seismic social change in East Asia, onto the world stage in the first half of the twentieth century.

Founded and based in Kobe, a port city that saw enormous expansion during the Chronicle's lifetime, and edited by representative figures in this treaty port, the Chronicle provides a unique perspective not only on the settler communities in Japan and East Asia but also to the historical development of East Asia as it happened.

Historians of East Asia have long seen the Japan Chronicle as a uniquely valuable resource. This well-informed, controversial but always readable source of news and opinion on Japan and East Asia offers an intriguing and lively Japanese complement to the North-China Herald, available in the East Asia Archive Online since 2011.

This supremely important and uniquely valuable resource, covering the years 1902-1940, is now exclusively available in Brill's East Asia Archive Online, with the weekly Commercial Supplement.

The North China Herald Online

Advisor: Robert Bickers

The North China Herald was the principal English-language newspaper published in China during the so-called 'treaty century' (1842-1943), the period when the Great Western Powers established a strong presence in China through their protected enclaves in the major cities, but principally in Shanghai.

Spanning the period 1850-1941 this is the prime printed source in any language for the history of the foreign presence in China, and with that the history of Shanghai, a city at the forefront of developments in Chinese politics, culture and the economy, and thus the hub of all Euro-American activity.

Apart from news and gossip reflecting the social, cultural and political life of the foreign settlements, the North China Herald also offered a wide spectrum of other information, including regional news, essays on Chinese culture and language, stock prices and law and company reports, as well as obituaries and tables of tea, silk and cotton exports. Now, at last online, the full-text searchable North China Herald will be widely welcomed as an essential newspaper resource for any research on this critical period which continues to shape much of China's world and worldview today.

Russian Military Intelligence on Asia Online

Archive series, 1651-1917

The 19th century was a time of rapid Russian expansion in Asia. While its western borders were largely fixed in the wake of the Napoleonic Wars, the Romanov autocracy still found many outlets for its imperial energies in the East.

The collection Archive series, 1651-1917 contains the following parts:

1. A threat from the Far East
(China, Japan, Korea)
2. The Eastern question
(Turkey, Palestine, Arabia & Syria)
3. The Great Game in Central Asia
(Persia (Iran), Afghanistan)

Secret prints, 1883-1914

The bulk of the Secret Prints consists of first-hand accounts composed by contemporary travelers to lesser-known reaches of Asia. Most were Russian army officers, many of whom had extensive training in geography and related disciplines. Among the more illustrious authors are Nikolai Przhevskii, Aleksei Kuropatkin, Nikolai Ermolov, Gustav Mannerheim, Lavr Kornilov, and Andrei Snesev. Other articles range from attaché and diplomatic dispatches to histories of tsarist plans for the invasion of India, the siege of Herat, and European campaigns against China. Together, they comprise a unique and largely untapped source for 19th-century Asia.

Western Books on China up to 1850 Online

This new online collection comprises a descriptive, annotated bibliography of 654 early Western books on Imperial China up to 1850, all to be found in the Library of the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), London. The collection is based on the book Western Books on China published up to 1850 by John Lust. The material is of unique historical interest, containing a scrutiny of China by Western societies. The books, in a variety of Western languages, testify to the formidable difficulties encountered by Westerners, who attempted to extend their own familiar historical, linguistic and religious perceptions to the Chinese context.
