Downtown Planning Moves into Public Outreach Phase

The next phase in planning de- a public engagement plan that will possible to avoid having only the velopment on 8.2 acres in downtown Livermore will begin. Four concepts, featuring elements such as a hotel, open space, housing, and parking will be used to jump start public input.

The concepts were developed by the Downtown Steering Committee led by PlaceWorks.

At its August 7 meeting, the Livermore City Council approved use multiple resources to engage the public.

These include a project website, social media, display boards, posters, flyers and stories. There will be downtown tours offered either in person of via a mobile device, neighborhood districts meetings, pop-events, on-line engagement and community workshops. The purpose is to cast as wide a net as same people provide input.

Controversy arose over whether or not all of the committee's four plans should be sent out to the public.

Downtown, Inc. executive director, said,"I hope the council commits that only things that go out to the public are things that can happen."

Rachael Snedecor, Livermore

Dale Kaye, Executive Director of Innovation Tri-Valley, agreed. She declared that elements have to have financial feasibility.

Jean King from Friends of Livermore responded that there are things in a plan that may not work. However, by presenting all of the options, we can determine what will work. This includes looking at the cost to build and maintain an element and where money would

Alameda County Recognized for Program that Helps Women

An innovative Alameda County program that empowers women to rebuild their lives following crises such as domestic violence and sexual assault has been named one of the 100 Best Innovations in County Government for 2017.

The program known as STEP-UP (Survivor Training and Empowerment - Utilizing your Potential) was named one of the "100 Brilliant Ideas at Work" by the National Association of Counties (NACo) in a new awards program championed as examples to all 3,069 counties in the United States.

STEP-UP was also one of eight Alameda County initiatives recognized with Achievement Awards in NACo's annual program highlighting the best work by counties across the country. The awards were presented at NACo's annual meeting last month and celebrated at the August 1st meeting of the Alameda County Board of Super-empowerment program offered by the District Attorney's Office to women who are survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault, as well as women diverted from the criminal justice system after an allegation of public assistance fraud.

The program, offered in English and Spanish, helps women develop personal, professional and financial skills to assist them in breaking the cycle of violence and poverty. It also includes detailed job development sessions that serve as pathways to paid employment.

Along with STEP-UP, other Alameda County programs winning 2017 NACo Achievement Awards include efforts to fight human trafficking, protect natural resources, expand elections transparency, improve customer service and save taxpayer dollars.

In addition to STEP-UP, Achievement Award winners were:

• MAP1193 – Stop Human Trafficking, a mobile application developed by the Alameda STEP-UP features a training and County District Attorney's Office

Zone 7 Looks at Possible Changes on Erosion, Public Use of Patterson Ranch

By Ron McNicoll

Zone 7 Water Agency directors told staff that they want to explore a policy that will help the agency to better deal with erosion in the Valley's arroyos.

The policy would include approaching Valley cities concerning future construction planned near arroyos, and advising the cities of necessary setbacks to prevent future problems that eroded stream banks could cause buildings.

Meeting in a strategic planning session at a hotel conference room near their Livermore headquarters on Aug. 2, directors covered policy matters in several areas that involve the agency's goals. No action items were on the agenda.

Besides possible new approaches concerning erosion control, directors talked about what might be included in a future policy that would allow public use of the 5000-acre Patterson Ranch near Lake Del Valle. Zone 7 acquired the land for $18 million in 2013 in order to control an important source of run-off water near the

A Livermore hiking group has approached Zone 7 about access to the land. Directors discussed the request and how East Bay Regional Park District (EBRPD) might see the advantage of building and maintaining a trail on the land, provided there were no costs to Zone 7. Directors were clear that water is the number one responsibility. The agency should not spend a dime of its own money on recreation facilities and maintenance.

There was also a discussion of providing more effective administration and governance in a fiscally responsible manner.

Erosion of stream banks became a major issue this past winter. The agency faces more than 200 repair projects at an estimated $44 million cost, compared to $1 million spent the previous year, during the drought.

Only five or six repair projects with highest priority can be accomplished this year, partly because of the need to wait for the necessary environmental permits to work on arroyos. Time is so short, and the grant process so long, that Zone 7 will give up on gaining funding for the highest priority work. "We'll do what we can (to get grants), but we have to get those projects done to protect the public," said Zone 7 General Manager Jill Duerig.

On the remaining projects, Duerig said, "It will take several years to acquire the permits, spread the costs (over time), and have enough staff and consultants do the work."

Zone 7 has received a claim filed against it by a Foothill Road homeowner who lost 40 feet of back yard, leaving only a few feet of lawn between the arroyo cliff and the homeowner's swimming pool.

Zone 7 directors voted to allocate up to $920,000 in March to

Drought-Stressed Trees Add to Fire Conditions

With wildfire season in the dry summer months, it's important for rural landowners, and also people in cities, to pay attention to the health of trees. Fires starting in trees are harder to control and can spread wildfires much farther than grassfires.

Drought in California has killed an estimated 102 million trees between 2010 and 2016, according to the U.S. Forest Service. Dead trees set up tinderbox conditions that increase the summer fire risk.

A statewide group, the California Fire Safe Council, spreads the word to communities, and passes out grants to support local fire prevention efforts.

PG&E wrote in a news release that it is working with Fire Safe Councils in the state for the fourth consecutive year. This year, the firm will donate $2 million in project funding to reduce the threat of wildfires. Some $75,000 of it will go to the Diablo Fire Safe Council for Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

Many trees can take up to three years to show the effects of drought stress, according to Davey Tree, a tree service with a national presence. Some signs of stress are off-color and undersized leaves, early leaf drop, and premature coloring in the fall.

Tree experts can visit homeowners and open space landowners and determine the condition of trees, to see if they are a hazard, said Joe Berg, District Manager for Davey Tree in the Bay Area.

Although most of the Valley is pasture land or vineyards, there are rows of trees along rural roads and freeways that can catch fire, said Berg.

The same was true in a more urban setting in October, 1991, when the Tunnel Fire began in the Oakland Hills. It started in grass, burned nearby trees and embers flew into the air at rapid wind speeds. They set homes and apartments on fire for two days. Some 2800 homes and 400 apartments burned; 25 people were killed and 150 injured.

Berg said that roadside trees can be ignited by something as simple as a spark by the side of the road,

Baker Billed Signed

Assemblywoman Catharine Baker (R-San Ramon) announced Governor Brown has signed her Assembly Bill 1021. This measure will modernize the In-Home Supportive Services (IHSS) application process to help the elderly and disabled apply for in-home services in the most modern, efficient methods, the way as those that apply for CalFresh benefits

The In-Home Supportive Services (IHSS) Program provides services for low-income individuals who are blind, disabled, or 65 years old or older. Approximately 464,000 Californians currently receive these services, which include personal care services (toileting, bathing, and grooming), domestic and related services (meal preparation, housecleaning), paramedical services, and protective supervision. IHSS is an alternative to much more expensive and disruptive out-of-home placement, such as assisted living or nursing facilities. The program is funded by state, county, and federal dollars.

Currently, most counties allow customers to apply only by phone for IHSS applications. AB 1021 would provide that an IHSS applicant can apply for IHSS benefits with the same process that he or she uses to apply for CalFresh benefits. County human services agencies shall accept applications for benefits by telephone, by fax, in person, or by email, or, if the county is capable of accepting online applications for benefits, by other electronic means.

AB 1021 received unanimous, bipartisan support in both the Senate and Assembly prior to receiving the Governor's signature.

Bacteria Found in Water

On August 2, Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) lab chemists became aware that two drinking water samples in Dublin, that had been drawn the previous day tested positive for bacteria (total coliform and E. coli). It takes 24 hours to grow the culture that tests for bacteria. Water operators flushed the system at the two locations (Scarlett Court and Asterwood Drive). Then they resampled the original sites and took five samples upstream and five samples downstream at both locations. Thursday afternoon, all subsequent samples were clean.

A sample in a third location (Central Parkway) tested positive for total coliform. Again, water operators resampled at the original site, taking five samples upstream and five samples downstream and flushed the system. Thursday evening, all subsequent samples were clean.

In all three locations, the chlorine residual was low, but after water operators flushed the areas, the chlorine residual returned to normal.

Normally, District water operators collect weekly water samples on Tuesdays (23 samples per week, totaling 92 samples per month). However, because there are five Tuesdays in August, they will collect 115 samples.

Total coliform includes bacteria found in soil, water influenced by surface water, and human or animal waste. Coliform bacteria are unlikely to cause illness. However, their presence in drinking water indicates that disease-causing organisms (pathogens) could be in the water system. Most pathogens that can contaminate water supplies come from the feces of humans or animals.

Chlorine residuals in the three sample sites were 0.06 milligrams per liter.

National Monuments

The East Bay Regional Park District (EBRPD) Board voted unanimously to adopt a resolution urging support for national monuments in Cali-

The EBRPD decision was in response to President Trump, who earlier this year, issued an Executive Order calling for a review of all national monuments over 100,000 acres that were designated as such since 1996.

The letter noted, "America's protected federal public lands and national monuments belong to all Americans."

Under the Antiquities Act of 1906, U.S. Presidents are authorized to designate as national monuments any historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures and other objects of historic or scientific interest that are located on land owned or controlled by the federal government. Twenty-two such monuments have been designated in California.

The monuments aren't just about history or habitat preservation. They are economic engines, providing thousands of jobs across California and the country. In California, contrary to the jobs Trump mentions, outdoor recreation generates $85 billion in consumer spending annually and supports over 730,000 jobs. These jobs should not be sacrificed for short term economic gain.

By retaining special places as National Monuments, the lands will be forever protected for future generations to enjoy.

Councilmember Steve Spedowfski said the goal is to evaluate all projects equally. He did not see any reason to remove any of the

The outreach process will include education, along with the review and evaluation of the four alternatives.

Snedecor asked if plans could be allowed to change before the first workshop. Can we control that from happening?

She suggested that all committee members commit to respect the information agreed upon for outreach to the public. She said that Livermore Downtown would respect the process. It will not use its website or emails for advocacy.

Bryan Petro suggested that everyone on the committee should refrain from any outreach or lobbying.

As for making changes, Jean King said that the staff report went out just last on Friday. We learned that some of the assumptions made by the Community Group were not correct. "This Monday, MacCracken Architect created a new plan to adjust to the analysis. We can give the changes to staff tonight. That's it. We will respect the process.'

Councilmember Bob Woerner requested that changes be made to the Eastside A plan, which includes Presidio's hotel plan. Underground parking should be added. Access needs to be created to allow for services and garbage collection for current businesses located near the proposed hotel.

The council allowed Woerner's changes and those from the Community Group.

Consultant David Early from PlaceWorks pointed out that none of the four concepts are final plans; they provide ideas where certain elements could be placed.

He noted that some members of the Steering Committee had objected to the addition of the Mac-Cracken plan to the mix. Others objected to using the hotel plan submitted by Presidio Companies, which has an Exclusive Negotiating Rights Agreement with the city through the end of November 2017. Early said it was important that work provided by developers and from MacCracken be included.

In addition, its representative swore during

Monday's meeting that they

It was noted that three of the plans called for a 1500 sq. ft. conference center; the MacCracken plan showed a 4000 sq. ft. center. Mayor John Marchand said that didn't follow the consultant's advice provided to the Committee, suggesting 1500 sq.

ft. as workable. Committee member Jeff Kaskey pointed out that Presidio had at first offered a 4000 sq. ft. facility. He said that the larger site would help to support the downtown by bringing in such activities as weddings and corporate events.

Woerner said that the reason for a conference center in conjunction with a hotel is to increase room occupancy. Beyond that it is a money loser. If people want to subsidize a larger space, it should be separate from the hotel.

Kaskey objected to some of the city's evaluations of the four plans, including the measurement of open space. He said that in Eastside B, the green space is mostly private, "I'm not sure if it should count as core green space." Also on his list was the cost of underground parking, which was lowered from $64,000 to $55,000 per space. This compares with $40,000 per space for regular garage parking "It is interesting that underground parking is now significantly cheaper. With that knowledge, I think each of the plans might have planned differently.' He also noted that there is no mention in the evaluation that the westside hotel has on site parking or that a larger conference center supports more retail. He wondered how the traffic delay numbers were justified. "I would like to see the model that was used to develop those

A workbook will be proved to the public to create individual concepts. A ranking worksheet will allow the public to list 10 elements in order of importance. For example, if open space were the most important, it would be listed number one.

During the public hearing, speakers mainly focused on the location of the proposed hotel.

Those who supported a hotel on the eastside of Livermore Avenue stated that Livermore Valley wine country is missing one key piece - a place for people to stay overnight. A hotel would increase the area as an attraction, bringing in more people and more money, helping to sustain wine country. David Kent, owner of Darcie Kent Winery, said that the hotel next to the Bankhead Theater would help to mask the massing.

When it comes to making the Livermore Valley Wine Country a destination, Larry Dino from Cuda Ridge Winery stated that hotels are critically important.

Livermore Valley Winegrowers Association Executive Director Chris Chandler said she had been told that Livermore would not be eligible for designation as 'wine region of the year," because it does not have the proper amenities to be considered. She urged the council to stick to the timeline, and break ground on a hotel in 2018.

Dave Corkle, owner of Cinema West, told the council that when the theater was built, he was promised that a hotel would be built next to the Bankhead Theater. He said that it should be built there where it will help the businesses it was intended to help.

Others felt a westside hotel would be the better option. A statement by Nancy Rodrigue, owner of Rodrique Molyneaux Winery, was read. She wrote, "Where the hotel goes, with its goodsized conference center, and where housing is developed, should be decided by residents, not defined by business organizations whose principals may not reside in the Livermore area, It will be nice to have a hotel downtown, but in a location that will that will have its own parking and wonderful views. A westside hotel looking out on a vibrant stretch of open space would inspire residents and visitors alike. Expediency should not be the issue.'

A statement was also read from Jim and Ginger McGrail, owners of Mc-Grail Winery. It declared, "If the hotel were on the westside patrons would not have to stare out a window at the wall of the Bankhead Theater. On the westside, there would be views of the park, our unique downtown and the hills. We want the hotel soon, but not one that is jammed in a corner. Why are we spending all this time and effort and money debating what should be common sense? Put the hotel on the westside."

Tom Jefferson said that the westside hotel was a superior location because it did not require valet parking, which would impact traffic.

David Rounds said, "My opinion is that a westside hotel has a lot of advantages; better parking options, more space, less impact on existing businesses. However, none of these are as important as the fact that the location of the hotel will guide the course of the rest of the development.'

Comments were made on other topics. Tammy Reuss called the process very po-

Elizabeth Judge said of the input process that there should be a way to indentify those working on-line, so that they could not submit more than one reply. She was concerned about Livermore Downtown and its campaign for an eastside hotel.

Audra Triska wanted more housing on the site. Amanda Kent saw an opportunity with a new park to host festivals and art shows.

Darcie Kent, owner of Darcie Kent Winery, suggested a need for art gallery space. Expanding Blacksmith Square around a village green could attract artisan businesses.

Donna Cabanne said the top use should be open space.

After the public hearing, councilmembers made several decisions. One was to endorse the outreach plan and to use regulatory tools to limit housing to the agreed upon number, once the outreach process was completed.

Spedowfski said that the character of the current downtown should be kept in mind. "Be careful that it doesn't change. He expressed concern regarding Blacksmith Square, as well as height and massing. Setbacks should be addressed. He suggested adding a statement that massing should be minimized to avoid overshadowing surrounding businesses, such as those on First Street and at Blacksmith Square. Hotel Lobbyists Go Overboard Elizabeth Judge Livermore

The east side hotel lobbyists pulled out all the stops this past Monday night during the last meeting of the Downtown Steering Committee held jointly with the City Council. They even went beyond the shameful behavior exhibited at some regular meetings.

The day before the meeting one committee member spent much effort on a cowardly unsigned blog picked up by an online neighborhood news site. It was a venomous, personal attack on three other committee members who had brought forth an alternative to the east side hotel, the MacCracken hotel. The blog misrepresented their conduct in the process and was the best example of fake news outside of D.C. To his young friends, who had not attended any committee meetings and hence had no first hand knowledge of the issue, this news was unknowingly embarrassed themselves by touting the blog's claims as the perpetrator sat there smiling like

Inc., also represented on the committee, had irritated the public early on with its excessive lobbying for the east side particularly evidenced during the May 25 meeting where it stacked the audience waving hands in agreement. Last year the public expressed its displeasure with the east side hotel idea. Yet Downtown Inc. took the "my way or the highway" approach relentlessly despite the fact that taxpayers help fund the organization!

public had already been put in place eons ago including a recent tour of the downtown property. As mentioned in earlier letters by many, placing the hotel on the east side of Livermore generates a myriad of problems. Those fixated on having the hotel there stand on their heads to shore it up nonetheless. Efforts get more bizarre everyday. For example, underground parking has been taboo since the beginning of the project. Citizens have mentioned it many times only to be told that it is too expensive. Enter Councilmember Woerner, the east side hotel advocate, who at the eleventh hour last Monday night pulled a last minute change to the east side hotel plan: under the pool parking! What is that going to do to the loading docks for all the trucks making deliveries?

Reason really has nothing to do with having the hotel on the east side. The fever is all about control and power and personal animosity. The powers that be do not like it when a small group comes up with a new idea, worse yet a better one, and then there is the obvious personal animosity that one could feel in the room since the beginning of the steering committee's tenure. Thank goodness that part is over.

Dublin Signs Carol Keller Dublin

Bravo Dublin! I want to give a shout out to the entire Dublin City Council and to Chris Foss, the city manager. What an incredible team!! I wrote a simple email Monday morning and copied it to each Dublin city councilmember explaining that the Silvergate street sign on San Ramon Road was completely faded out and unreadable. I received a personal email back from each of them thanking me and got a phone call from one as well. They promised to replace it within the next four weeks and by the end of the day the City Manager sent an additional email to let me know that after further inspection, they decided to replace the Amador Valley Blvd. sign and the Vomac sign as well. I would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to each of them.

The book review mentioned in a previous letter on the behavior of Himalayan glaciers was written by an Indian author, Dr. V. K. Raina who is an ex-Deputy Director of the Geological Survey of India. He spent many years studying the

The reviewer was Prof. Cliff Ollier, School of Earth and Environment at the University of Western Australia. He stated that glaciers are both advancing and retreating, sometimes at the same time in different areas of the same glacier. He also stated that the IPCC's 2007 Working Group II report asserted that Himalayan glaciers "are receding faster than in any other part of the world and, if the present rate continues, the likelihood of them disappearing by the year 2035 and perhaps sooner is very high if the Earth keeps warming at the current rate." He stated that such claims are unsupported, unscientific and wrong. Ollier also mentioned that the Hubbard Glacier in Alaska has advanced so much it is threatening to close a fiord and the livelihood of the local residents. The calving that occurs has been a great tourist attraction. Raina wrote "But to postulate that a glacier can warn of the climate changes likely to take place in future is a big question mark." Ollier concluded that Raina was correct. He added "I would suggest it is totally illogical." The most important point is that the behavior of glaciers is complex and cannot be used as evidence in support of Anthropogenic Global Warming (AGW). If the behavior of the glaciers was determined by global warming, then all of the glaciers in the world would be in retreat, rather than just calls my factual errors were just an attempt at brevity that was taken too literally. He says that it is a myth that the Summary for Policy Makers is affected by "a core of activists at the top who doctor the results of research." In reply, I offer the following from the preface of the 2009 NIPCC report "Climate Change Reconsidered." It states that the vast majority of the thousands of scientists on whose work the IPCC assessment reports are based had no direct influence on the conclusions of the IPCC. The policy summaries were produced by an inner core. A small group of activists wrote the all-important Summary for Policy Makers (SPM) for each of the four reports. Changes were made in the second assessment report (SAR) after it was approved by the scientists involved in writing the report. A key graphic was even doctored. The evidence to support the SPM conclusion turned out to be completely spurious. Heated discussions about this between supporters of the IPCC and those aware of the alterations occurred, including an exchange of letters in the Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society (1997). The SAR also provoked the 1996 Leipzig Declaration which was signed by some 100 climate scientists and a booklet titled "The Scientific Case Against the Global Climate Treaty" followed in September 1997 and was translated into several languages. All of these were available online at www.sepp.org. The third assessment of the IPCC was noteworthy for its use of spurious scientific papers to back up the claim of "New and Stronger Evidence of Anthropogenic Global Warming." The fourth assessment of the IPCC published in 2007 was released, after it was altered to conform to the summary. Controversy again followed when the IPCC refused to publicly share comments by peer-reviewers. They sent the hard copy to a library that was closed for renovation, and finally, after great pressure, they posted them online. Inspection showed that the comments of half of the reviewers were rejected.

I looked up the Leipzig Declaration with Google. Wikipedia gave it an extensive treatment. Wikipedia can always be counted on to be politically correct however, so I wasn't surprised to see an attack on the credentials of the signers of the declaration. It was claimed that meteorologists who work for a TV station as a meteorology. That is pure net. speculation. I could reply in kind by pointing out that one of the prolific heroes of the believers in AGW has no more than a bachelors degree in mechanical engineering. No one yet has given a believable motive for the deniers to fabricate all of this stuff. The favorite choice is to claim they are bought out by corporations, but a large number of them are retired scientists who have no need for corporate cash. People will just have to decide for themselves where the truth lies.

Livermore Trash Ken Bradley Livermore

Did you ever wonder why your trash bills increased 8% recently when inflation was only 2% for the last year? The Livermore city council has a neat arrangement with Livermore Sanitation. This agreement is that each year the trash company will get increases for inflation, unless the trash company can spend more and increase its costs". Then the council will increase the trash rates to match these "costs". The more the trash company can spend the more money they can make. Of course, when rates increase the amount the city gets also increases as the trash company has to collect from you so they can pay 11% of gross to the city. This 11 % was never voted on by the public as required by law for tax increases. The city just calls it a fee instead of a tax and then has the trash company be the tax collector. If the trash company is unable to collect the trash bills the city will act as the debt collector and use its powers to force payment.

start work on the property and neighboring lands. Zone 7 has an easement in the area, but the arrovo flows through private property.

Directors said at the strategy session that new construction upstream in the Valley's three cities brings additional runoff, which accelerates the force of flow. One way of dealing with that might be to encourage more diversion of the water upstream. This is already being done with projects on the Medeiros Parkway, and several swales in Livermore, including at the San Francisco Outlets in Livermore. The swales act as a holding pond until the arroyo can drain more water.

Some large water agencies have a certain amount of land use planning powers. Zone 7 does not, said Zone 7 Manager of Integrated Water Resources Carol Mahoney. If it did, the agency could see to it that there are proper setbacks from the flood control channels in areas where erosion might occur. Lacking that power, directors told staff that they want to head in the direction of advising the three cities about such considerations in their land use planning.

PATTERSON RANCH HIKING TRAIL

Pursuing a board-toboard dialogue with East Bay Regional Park District (EBRPD) to install and operate trails on the Patterson Ranch represents another

Spokespersons for a Livermore-based hiking group attended a Zone 7 meeting earlier this year, advocating for permission to hike on the land.

Director Dick Quigley, a longtime trails advocate in his tenure on the board, said he thought that EBRPD board members would be receptive to exploring the idea of the park district creating a trail there and maintaining it.

There have been stafflevel meetings about the idea. Quigley said it may be time for the board to get involved on a board-to-board basis. He said that there is plenty of money for recreation in the $5 billion state water bond.

Director Sarah Palmer said that EBRPD may want to cooperate, but they have other capital improvement priorities right now. "I would say cooperate with the appropriate agencies to provide the services," she said.

Duerig stated that LAR-PD staff also was interested in a trail, which would be a connection to Sycamore Grove Park.

Director Sandy Figuers said that he doesn't oppose a trail on the ranch, provided there is no cost to Zone 7.

Board President John Greci said that safety is a key factor. When directors first looked at the ranch, he found the remains of a campfire there. "Someone snuck in at night. God forbid we get a fire on that ranch," said Greci.

Jim McGrail expressed skepticism. He was concerned about potential liability. He added that he doesn't think Zone 7 has enough insurance on the property. Further, water is the district's job, not recreation, said McGrail.

"If EBRPD wants to name us as additional insured, and wants to bring in their rangers and docents, and take care of the land, then it's something to look at," said McGrail.

Directors also reviewed proposed references to policies that would help to maintain the effectiveness, administration and governance of Zone 7. Operating the agency in a "fiscally responsible manner" was one of the proposals recommended for adoption.

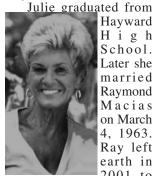

The board looked favorably on setting a policy of reviewing its policies at least once every five years. To deal with the policy proposals, Greci appointed an ad hoc committee to review and develop recommendations. Members will be Palmer, Figuers, and Angela Ramirez-Holmes, who was unable to attend the meeting. She has been the advocate of revisiting policies more frequently, and installing language concerning governance and fiscal responsibility.

OBITUARIES

Julie Macias

My Mother, my friend, my coach...

Julie Macias entered into heaven on July 26, 2017 at the young age of 74. She was born on February 9, 1943 to Dorothy Ferreira and James MacGowan in Hayward, CA.

Hayward High School. Later she married Raymond Macias on March 4, 1963. Ray left earth in 2001 to get things ready in heaven for Julie's eventual arrival.

They moved to Livermore in 1972 where Julie raised her family and invested herself into the community by way of youth sports Julie became a legendary coach, mentor, friend and mother during her time in Livermore.

Julie's passion for sports and children showed up in many ways through her life. She played adult soccer on the Livermore Knights in the mid 70's, slow pitch softball on the Strawberry Shortcakes, and volleyball with friends from her street of Polaris Way. Julie also shared her unique love and passion for sports through coaching. Ray and Julie began coaching their sons Ray and Scott in the Hayward Little League and her daughter Stacey in youth soccer and again at the high school level in Livermore. Julie was instrumental in the development of girls' sports in the Tri-Valley and coached for the Livermore Youth Soccer League for close to 40 years. Julie also coached her granddaughters in the same league along with many other mothers, daughters and granddaughters over the 4 decades. Julie's passion for sports for girls led her to start the girls' soccer program at Granada High School in the early 80's while she also coached softball there.

For Julie, coaching was not just about sports. Most players over the four decades will say that Julie was larger than life and that she was an amazing mother and life coach to them. While she loved the challenge and competitiveness of coaching, she equally loved molding players to be successful on and off the field. She was someone you never forgot for all of the right reasons. She simply made you or whatever you were dealing with better in every way.

The fact is, Coach Julie had a powerful voice that was always encouraging, constructive and could be heard anywhere on the field. Her soccer knowledge, energy, enthusiasm and love for the game brought out the best in her players. More times than not, her teams were victorious.

She leaves a legacy of unselfishly giving her time and devoting herself to her family and so many people. She was always there for anyone who needed her and her home was always open to all. Julie was known to many as a great friend as well as a legendary coach and icon in the Livermore soccer community.

Julie will be missed by thousands of people on earth and welcomed by thousands in heaven.

A celebration of life for Julie will be held at Granada High School's stadium, 400 Wall Street in Livermore, California on August 26th at 5 PM.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that you make donations to the newly formed Coach Julie Macias "Strength Through Sports" Endowment to assist a player in their dream to play competitive soccer at any level. To make a donation in honor of Julie, go to www. youcaring.com/CoachJulieMacias

Marcia Finders

A Message from her Children

We are grateful to have known and been loved by Marcia Finders, a woman whose positive energy and compassion for others shall remain a constant inspiration in our lives. We believe those blessed to have known Marcia will always remember her as an immensely strong and gracious woman, h o greeted each day with a desire to make a contribution. It did not need to be large or noticed by others, but her contributions needed to add value or comfort to another person's life. This selfless spirit of generosity shined in all that Marcia did. A member of the First Presbyterian Church, the Livermore- Amador Symphony Guild, the local chapter of PEO and the League of Women Voters, our mother Marcia was continuously learning, and eager to lend her time and talent to nurture her family and community. For decades, she volunteered at the Hacienda and Silver Oaks rest homes, where she would perform musical presentations created to bring song and happiness to the lives of the residents. Marcia was a very talented pianist, composer and arranger.

Marcia and our father Ken moved to Livermore in 1959, when he accepted work at Sandia Laboratories and where he worked until retirement. Through his job, our parents met wonderful people, many of whom became life-long friends.

We watched our mother live every minute of every day with a positive spirit and a genuine interest in others. Our mother is survived by Ken, our father and her loving husband of 68 years, four grandchildren who will always remember grandma for her baked treats, and as the best-ever party planner, her great granddaughter Isla, and her sister Mary. Born in 1929, our dear mother has been a source of joy and happiness in the lives of all who have been blessed to have known her.

We will miss her, and we thank the many members of this community who have shown us love and support during this time.

Traffic, Slaughterhouse Concerns Set Neighbors Against Rural Request

kennel, events center and slaughterhouse in conjunction with an existing farm at 9007 Lupin Way near southeast Livermore was continued after neighbors voiced their opposition to the East County Board of Zoning Adjustments.

The three-member board located on the site. met July 27 in Pleasanton.

Applicants Ray Ghorbani and Adeigheh Sarji operate a 49-acre farm, about 1 mile east of Greenville Road near Livermore. The site is just outside the South Livermore Plan, but within Measure D territory, according to County Assistant Planning Director Rodrigo Orduña.

The property is a working organic farm on which families come to feed chickens, select fresh eggs, and pick fruit and pay for it by weight. Under the zoning code, those activities are an outdoor recreational use.

Some bring in an animal, such as a sheep or goat, during a two-day period for a fall religious holiday that involves ritual animal sacrifice. This is done by appointment only. The slaughterhouse is not a commercial operation, in the usual sense of the word, said planning staff.

20 parking places to accommodate the visitors.

> The three residences and the non-residential structures on the property are within the limits for covered building size imposed by the East County Area Plan (ECAP).

> Neighbors focused their objections on what they consider dangerous traffic now, and an expected increase on Lupin Lane, a dead-end street.

Paula Peterson, who lives on Lupin Lane, said that she has complained about speeders, and told people to slow down. The lane is a quiet area. "We'd like to keep it that way. People have no respect for country roads.'

Gay Maestas said that the narrow Lupin Lane is not suitable for trucks and lots of cars.

Another resident, who has lived there seven years, said that many recreational walkers use the area. If the The annual sacrifice application were approved, draws up to 100 observant signals should be put at the people on each of two days. top of the hill, and signs County staff recommends added to warn of oncoming traffic, she said.

The husband of the previ-Also on the property is a ous speaker brought up the animal waste composting. He said, that if it is not legal, it should be stopped. If it's OK with the county board, then that's the way it's got to be, he concluded.

Peter Poulson, who lives next to the farm, said he is concerned about composting the animal remains from slaughter. He saw it as an environmental hazard. "It's hard to sell a house when people find out there is a slaughterhouse next door," said Poulson.

Jacky Poulson said that the biggest concern is noise and traffic and its impact on the quality of life on Lupin Lane. She also objected to having to hear dogs barking at the kennel.

County Animal Control Officer Barbara Bowman-Elliot said that the department has received several complaints about noise and possible poor treatment of animals, but she said she was not allowed on the property.

Ghorbani denied that Bowman-Elliot was ever turned away. "The Sheriff's Department never asked to come on the property. I never denied them," he said.

Ghorbani said that his neighbors tell him, if they don't hear it, or smell it, it's OK. They say that if you want to continue it, it is fine with them. "I've done nothing but improve the area."

The BZA spent little time discussing the item. Scott

Beyer said he was ready to say "no" to the application, although the staff had recommended approval, with a list of 21 conditions attached. Beyer said he would like to red-tag the operation, with concerns about the slaughterhouse, and what happens to the animal waste.

Board member Heather McGrail-Lorier said that if a red-tag process were used, notice would have to be given to Ghorbani about alleged violations. Meanwhile, the approval issue before the BZA is a separate process.

Orduña told the board members they could deny the application, in which case it could be appealed to the Board of Supervisors. Otherwise, they could continue the item, if they think more research is in order, and perhaps more conditions should be set. The board took that course, on a motion by McGrail-Lorier.

TOWN HALL

did not need access to classified information. He said a known fact relates to special counsel Robert S. Mueller III having convened a criminal grand jury to investigate the presidential election, including Donald Trump Jr.'s meeting with a Russian lawyer who promised damaging information about Hillary Clinton.

Swalwell, a Democrat, serves on the House Intelligence Committee. He has called for creation of an independent commission to look into interference in the election, not just by Russia, but other countries. He pointed out that intelligence reports had shown President Vladimir Putin used hacked emails and the spread of fake news through social media trolls to undermine Hillary Swalwell commented, "The Russian effort didn't change votes, but changed minds. I will leave the investigation to Robert Mueller. It is important to learn how and why we were so vulnerable."

Asked what he saw as the end game of the investigation, he replied that not only Russia, but other countries see a divided country and figure they can get their preferred candidate elected by using similar tactics.

"If we do anything, we should make sure that the 2018 election is more secure than the 2016 election," Swalwell said, drawing a round of applause from the audience.

Constituents were invited to ask questions about such topics as jobs and healthcare. In discussing the most recent jobs report, he noted that jobs are being added, the stock market is going up and the GDP is rising slowly. "However, those figures don't mean anything to most of the people I talk to. Faced with $500 in unexpected expense, three out of four Americans are wiped out."

As a Congressman, Swalwell said his goals are for people to be more, make more and dream more.

One pathway is through education. "Schools are so different on their ability to prepare kids. A school in Hayward looks a lot different than one in Danville." He will advocate for modern schools that value teachers, provide the resources for teaching, and where parents can learn.

He viewed it as important to have open community colleges, where people can learn relevant skills in this digital age and economy.

On healthcare, Swalwell commented. "Boy were your voices heard when it came to taking health care away from 20 million people," referring to the defeat of an effort to change the Affordable Care Act.

Swalwell supports expanding medicare to include everyone. Constituents quizzed him on who would pay for such a plan. Swalwell pointed out that those with insurance are already paying for health care for others when people without health care who are sick have to go to an emergency room. Funds are collected through FICA. Healthcare is an earned benefit. "Pooling together, we can bump down overall costs."

He talked about local traffic resulting in long commutes. He said that extending rail 11 miles up the Altamont would take 30,000 people off the road each day. He mentioned the Alameda-San Joaquin Rail Working Group, which is the process of moving forward in a bipartisan, bi-county way, to build the project.

Taxes are an ongoing issue. "Tax reform is needed for the 99%. Corporate taxes could be lowered if there were profit sharing plans for all in a company, not just CEOs and upper management."

"There could be tax breaks for businesses who locate in distressed areas with high unemployment rates, such as deferring the payment of payroll taxes for three years.

When it comes to climate change, he supported rejoining the Paris Accord. Working towards clean water, clean air, green energy - all create jobs.

One comment by an audience member concerned the president's statement calling the White House "a dump." She said, "It is the people's house. If he is so unhappy, we should evict the man."

Swalwell said, Congress is not helpless in its ability to rein in the president. We are a co-equal branch of government. If we have to be a babysitter, that's what we have to do," referring to recent bi-partisan legislation, such as increasing sanctions on Russia.

Sunflower Hill Inaugural Rainmaker Awards Given Out

Alameda County Supervisor Scott Haggerty, Pleasanton City Councilmember Kathy Narum and the City of Livermore were all recently named the inaugural winners of the Rainmaker Awards by Sunflower Hill.

The local nonprofit is working to create residential living and vocational training options for individuals with special needs. Two communities in Livermore and Pleasanton are now in development and individuals with developmental delays regularly volunteer at Sunflower Hill Gardens at Hagemann Ranch in Livermore. Sunflower Hill's new awards acknowledge the partnership and support the organization has received from key community leaders to realize their vision.

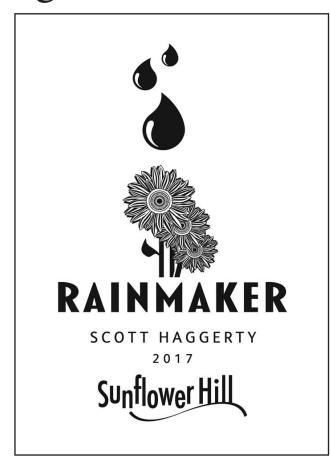

"We are very fortunate to have accomplished as much as we have over the past five years," said Susan Houghton,

President of the Board of Directors. "We know that without the support of these important

Each, in their own way, allowed the 'rain' to fall for Sunflower Hill.

Rainmakers, we would not be where we are today. Each, in their own way, allowed the 'rain' to fall for Sunflower Hill. Our organization grew. Our sunflowers blossomed. These Rainmakers believed in our vision and because of that, our entire community now benefits."

Alameda County Supervisor Scott Haggerty

received the Rainmaker Award for being the first elected official to actively assist in the search for land for a residential community. His transformational grant of $500,000 to the organization in 2016 allowed Sunflower Hill to hire its first employees – including a lead farmer at Sunflower Hill Gardens.

Pleasanton City Councilmember Kathy Narum placed Sunflower Hill on the Council's priority list in 2015. Her early recognition of the need for additional special needs housing in Pleasanton helped the organization form a partnership with Irby Ranch and their planned residential subdivision. Sunflower Hill's campus within Irby Ranch is now in development and will afford 30 individuals with special needs access to affordable housing.

In 2015, the City of Livermore accepted Sunflower Hill's proposal to operate a one-acre sustainable garden at Hagemann Ranch, providing staff and operational support to ensure success. In 2016, more than 100 local residents with special needs worked at the garden on a regular basis. Approximately 9600 pounds of food was harvested— with 70 percent donated to local food kitchens to assist the community. The City's desire to partner with Sunflower Hill and support horticulture and training programs for residents with special needs, is now rapidly becoming a best-practice example in the state and nation.

Role Players to Stage Playboy of the Western World

The Playboy of the Western World by John Millington Synge will be staged by the Role Players Ensemble. September 1 - 17, 2017 at the Village Theatre, 233 Front Street, Danville.

A young man comes to town with a wild story about killing his father. Instead of condemning him, the people of the village are fascinated with the tale and elevate him to hero status, until his "story" follows him home. Synge's satire caused riots when it first opened and has been met with riotous laughter many times since. The most Irish of Irish plays, Playboy embodies the very spirit of telling tales.

The play is directed by: Edward Nattenberg and Eric Fraisher Hayes; Featuring: James Robbins, Bri Costello, Gretchen Lee Salter, Joe Fitzgerald, Keith Jefferds, Richard Friedlander, Edward Kimak, Marjory Elaine Harper, Courtney Shaffer, Jessica Riley

Sneak Peek will take August 14, 7pm, Danville Library (400 Front Street). Free admission to this entertaining look at the production process with the director, actors and designers.

Performances are Fri, Sat, 8pm (except: 9/16 at 2pm); Sun, 2pm. at the Village Theatre, 233 Front Street, Danville. Tickets: $20-28; online at www.Role-PlayersEnsemble.com; at Danville Community Center, 420 Front St, Danville; or call (925) 314-3400

South Asian Stand Up Comedy Comes to the Bankhead

Samson Koletkar

Bay Area-based Indian-born comedians, Samson Koletkar and Abhay Nadkarni, present The 4th Annual Desi Comedy Fest, an 11-day South Asian stand up comedy extravaganza touring comedy clubs and theaters in 9 cities throughout Northern California: San Francisco, Berkeley, Mill Valley, Santa Clara, Union City, Alameda, Livermore, Santa Cruz, and Mountain View. The festival, the largest of its kind in the US, runs August 10-20. It features 40 South Asian comedians from all over the US, India and South Africa with diverse ethnic (Indian, Pakistani, Bangladeshi, Afghani, Sri Lankan, Iranian, Filipino, and African American) and religious backgrounds (Muslim, Jewish, Sikh, and Catholic).

The festival will make a stop at the Bankhead Theater in Livermore on Aug. 19 at 8 p.m.

Desi (pronounced "THEY-see") is a term for the cultures and products of the Indian subcontinent or South Asia and their diaspora. Desi countries include India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Bhutan, and Maldives.]

Abhay Nadkarni, festival co-producer, observes, "2017 has been a great year for South Asian comics. Aziz Ansari hosted Saturday Night Live; Hasan Minhaj hosted The White House Correspondents Dinner; Kumail Nanjiani is back with a new season of Silicon Valley; and Aditi Mittal got her own Netflix special, just to name a few."

Festival co-producer Samson Koletkar notes, "In the current political climate, it's important to provide a platform for South Asian voices; breaking stereotypes with humor is an effective way to do so."

The idea for the festival was born on August 14 and 15, 2013, Pakistani and Indian Independence Days, respectively, when Koletkar produced a few comedy shows that featured Pakistani and Indian comedians.

Abhay Nadkarni

The positive response to the shows planted the seed for something larger: The Desi Comedy Fest. Koletkar and fellow Indian comedian, Abhay Nadkarni, talked about the cultural zeitgeist in the South Asian community: usually introverted South Asians are taking to the stage to openly talk about their cultural characteristics while also addressing immigration, race, and other personal experiences of the South Asian diaspora. That discussion spawned the idea for the festival, which they launched the following year in 2014. Koletkar adds, "Where else can you find Indians and Pakistanis sitting together and laughing?"

The festival features 40 comedians this year: half are returning comics, and half are new to the festival.

Front Porch Musical Festival Set at Wente

Review:

You'll Love "Yeomen"

By Susan Steinberg

"Yeomen of the Guard" – who or what are they? They are the retired pensioners of England's armed forces, awarded the honor of guarding the ancient Tower of London.

Wearing their signature red and gold uniforms from a bygone age, sporting white lace collars and hats crowned with red and white Tudor roses, they are a popular target for tourist photos, especially when posed with their long menacing pike-staffs. But despite their warlike appearance, they are not expected to perform real military duties. Like the Changing of the Guard at Buckingham Palace, they are part of the historic ritual surrounding British royal tradition.

Challenged by Queen Victoria herself to compose an operetta that was seriously "British," the very popular

William the Conqueror. Its somber history included the two tragically murdered little princes plus a long list of political prisoners such as Queen Anne Boleyn, King Henry VIII's second wife, condemned to be executed on Tower Green.

What a problem for a pair already famous for merry musical comedies like "H.M.S. Pinafore" and "Pirates of Penzance." Miraculously, they pulled off an improbable hit show, combining their trademark wit and humor with the serious pathos that has made this work so appealing. Lucky Livermore theater-goers will be able to enjoy their creation when San Francisco's famous Lamplighters Music Theatre bring the production to the Bankhead Theater.

Audiences will enjoy a sparkling performance by world-class singers, a full professional orchestra, and a troupe voted the BEST G & S COMPANY IN THE WORLD by the British themselves. This long-time fan is already familiar with their fabulous show and can guarantee a tuneful and thrilling experience for devotees and newcomers alike.

Company favorites and impressive new talents combine to bring a memorable story to life: a wrongly-imprisoned nobleman bravely facing an unjust execution, the heroic commoners who concoct a dangerous scheme to save him, the travelling jester whose poor bride-to-be agrees to marry the condemned man for a purse of gold, a not-too-bright jailer anxious to give up torturing and become a merry jester, and a frustrated spinster conniving to win a reluctant bachelor as her husband.

The plot is as twisted as Game of Thrones, alternating suspense and hilarity in unexpected turns. The outcome for each character is doubtful right up to the surprise ending. A magnificent musical score echoes both the impressive majesty of the Tower and the playful wit that has made G and S so deservedly popular.

Borrowing an idea from Shakespeare, "Yeoman" shows that the jester, a "fool," speaks the truths that others may not utter. In a favorite line, he observes, "When offered to the world in merry guise, unpleasant truths are swallowed with a will. So he who'd make his fellow creatures wise should always GILD the philosophic pill."

This sounds like fun until the jester sadly adds that a funny man must tread carefully with his humor because: "If the master is surly from getting up early and tempers are short in the morning, an inopportune joke is enough to provoke him to give you at once a month's warning."

Like most G and S musicals, this is a show for the whole family, so there will be a Sunday matinee (2 pm August 27) as well as a Saturday evening performance (8 pm August 26) at Livermore's Bankhead Theater, 2400 First Street. For reservations call 925-373-6800 or go to www.bankheadtheater.org. This faithful fan will be there to enjoy it again!

I may be seeing a completely different show, as the performances are double cast out of the company's abundant roster. Some regulars will recognize Charles Martin (the fabulous Pirate King), Lawrence Ewing (the memorable Lord High Admiral of "Pinafore"), and the adorable "little maids" from "The Mikado", along with popular tenors Samuel Faustine and Patrick Hagen. Other familiar company standouts are Jonathan Spencer and Robbie Stafford as confirmed old bachelor Sergeant Meryll, with crafty comediennes Sonia Gariaeff and Deborah Rosengaus as the desperate spinsters pursuing him in marriage.

Witty company veteran Jane Hammett has directed the production with her usual deft touch, and beloved conductor Baker Peeples will lead the orchestra for a memorable performance. It's a sure cure for end-ofthe-summer blues!

Scientists Probe the Conditions of Stellar Interiors to Measure Nuclear Reactions

Most of the nuclear reactions that drive the nucleosynthesis of the elements in the universe occur in very extreme stellar plasma conditions. This intense environment found in the deep interiors of stars has made it nearly impossible for scientists to perform nuclear measurements in these conditions – until now.

In a unique cross-disciplinary collaboration between the fields of plasma physics, nuclear astrophysics and laser fusion, a team of researchers including scientists from Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (LLNL), Ohio University, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and Los Alamos

For the first time, scientists have conducted thermonuclear measurements of nuclear reaction cross-sections under extreme conditions like those of stellar interiors. (Download Image)

National Laboratory (LANL), describe experiments performed in conditions like those of stellar interiors. The team's findings were published by Nature Physics.

The experiments are the first thermonuclear measurements of nuclear reaction cross-sections – a quantity that describes the probability that reactants will undergo a fusion reaction – in high-energy-density plasma conditions that are equivalent to the burning cores of giant stars, i.e. 10-40 times more massive than the sun. These extreme plasma conditions boast hydrogen-isotope densities compressed by a factor of a thousand to near that of solid lead and temperatures heated to ~50 million Kelvin. These also are the conditions in stars that lead to supernovae, the most massive explosions in the universe.

"Ordinarily, these kinds of nuclear astrophysics experiments are performed on accelerator experiments in the laboratory, which become particularly challenging at the low energies often relevant for nucleosynthesis," said LLNL physicist Dan Casey, the lead author on the paper. "As the reaction cross-sections fall rapidly with decreasing reactant energy, bound electron screening corrections become significant, and terrestrial and cosmic background sources become a major experimental challenge."

The work was conducted at LLNL's National Ignition Facility (NIF), the only experimental tool in the world capable of creating temperatures and pressures like those found in the cores of stars and giant planets. Using the indirect drive approach, NIF was used to drive a gas-filled capsule implosion, heating capsules to extraordinary temperatures and compressing them to high densities where fusion reactions can occur.

"One of the most important findings is that we reproduced prior measurements made on accelerators in radically different conditions," Casey said. "This really establishes a new tool in the nuclear astrophysics field for studying various processes and reactions that may be difficult to access any other way."

"Perhaps most importantly, this work lays groundwork for potential experimental tests of phenomena that can only be found in the extreme plasma conditions of stellar interiors. One example is of plasma electron screening, a process that is important in nucleosynthesis but has not been observed experimentally," Casey added.

Now that the team has established a technique to perform these measurements, related teams like that led by Maria Gatu Johnson at MIT are looking to explore other nuclear reactions and ways to attempt to measure the impact of plasma electrons on the nuclear reactions.

Casey was joined by co-authors Daniel Sayre, Vladimir Smalyuk, Robert Tipton, Jesse Pino, Gary Grim, Bruce Remington, Dave Dearborn, Laura (Robin) Benedetti, Robert Hatarik, Nobuhiko Izumi, James McNaney, Tammy Ma, Steve MacLaren, Jay Salmonson, Shahab Khan, Arthur Pak, Laura Berzak Hopkins, Sebastien LePape, Brian Spears, Nathan Meezan, Laurent Divol, Charles Yeamans, Joseph Caggiano, Dennis McNabb, Dean Holunga, Marina Chiarappa-Zucca, Tom Kohut and Thomas Parham from LLNL, Carl Brune from Ohio University, Johan Frenje and Maria Gatu Johnson from MIT and George Kyrala from LANL.

Auditions Slated

Tiffany's Dance Academy and ConDanza are holdingauditions for their annual production of Tchaikovsky's, "The Nutcracker." Auditions will take place at Tiffany's Dance Academy of Livermore on August 19th and at Tiffany's Dance Academy of South San Francisco on August 18th. Placement auditions are open to all dancers ages 5 or older.

The annual production showcases over 400 dancers, from both Tiffany's Dance Academy and features performances by members of ConDanza. Professional sound, lighting, choreography, and extravagant costumes make this a favorite Nutcracker performance. Robbie Teruya, Director of the Performing Company at Tiffany's Dance Academy, says, "What makes our Nutcracker so fun is that everyone is in a holiday spirit and that enthusiasm translates to the stage."

ConDanza, a professional ballet company formed by master ballet teacher, César Degallado, is proud to cohost this production. "The Nutcracker has always been a favorite of mine, not only because of the beautiful dancing and music, but because of the story. This Ballet production was created during a century when art forms came together to create this holiday tradition. Since then, this production has been presented by many of the most prestigious ballet companies in the world, and it is fundamental to their repertory."

The Nutcracker will take place December 15th and 16th, 2017, at the Theater at Chabot College located at 25555 Hesperian Way in Hayward, CA.

To participate in The Nutcracker, contact Robbie Teruya at Tiffany's Dance Academy by email at robbie@tiffanydance.com or by phone at (925) 447-5299.

Taking inspiration from Lush's 10,000 square foot flagship shop on Oxford Street located in London, the retail design gives new meaning to vintage charm. The store is filled with one of-a-kind, salvaged and reclaimed furniture that has been sourced from all over

This design concept of working from reclaimed materials reduces waste, ultimately cutting back on Lush's environmental footprint, a value important to the brand. Plus, the neutral tones of the interior contrast perfectly with the rainbow bright colors of Lush's product range, including its signature bath bombs, a Northern Californian favorite.

The 5 consultation stations in the middle of the shop serve as the focal point, or "heart beat" of the retail space, allowing for enhanced one-to-one customer experiences. This area gives guests and Lush staff the chance to connect, discuss and interact with products and make personal recommendations based on in-depth conversations.

"We are very excited about our new large format location at Stoneridge Shopping Center," says Elisa Torres, Lush's Director of Retail. "Bigger shops, thoughtfully designed with the customer experience in mind, provide more space to demonstrate our ethics, playfully interact with our customers, and present our new and ever growing product range."
