Notes on the Use of the Dictionary

The Kavalan Dictionary consists of a sketch of Kavalan grammar, the main body of the dictionary of about 3,000 entries, and an index cross-referencing English glosses with Kavalan words.

Arrangement of the Dictionary

All lexical entries, including roots, stems, and derived forms in the sub-entries are all given in boldface in the dictionary. The root is treated as the main entry (headword), while the stem forms and derived forms (derivatives) are treated as sub-entries under the same root, which is mostly bound. Most derived forms that indicate different focus and aspect forms of the same verb root are treated as the “same” verb stem and given under the Agent-focused (AF) form, such as smaqut ‘to move’. For example, the Patient-focused (PF) form saqutan, irrealis PF form saquta, non-Agent focused (NAF) imperative saquti ka! ‘Move it away!’ and future tense qasaqut and qasaqutan are all given and illustrated under the same sub-entry, smaqut, which is a neutral form and listed under the root saqut; see Sections 4.1-4.4 in the Introduction for a discussion of the focus and aspect systems of Kavalan. Since the PF and imperative forms can be regularly derived or predicted, they do not appear in the main or sub-entries. However, the Instrumental-focused form, such as ti-saqut ‘to carry with something’ is listed as a separate sub-entry under the same main entry, saqut. All the sub-entries are arranged in alphabetical order under the same root. All headwords and derivatives in Kavalan are arranged in alphabetical order. All free forms are given Chinese and English glosses, but bound forms are not. When there are homonyms, they are treated as separate entries, indicated by superscripts, such as ^{1, 2, 3}.

Definitions of entries and translations of example sentences are given in both Chinese and English, and in that order.

For the ease of retrieving Kavalan words, an English index is given at the end of the dictionary. Let it be noted that only the root is given in the Index, one should look up the complete affixed forms in the main body of the Dictionary.

Orthography (Spelling)

There are 14 consonants: /p, t, k, q, ' , s, b, z, R, m, n, ng, l, r/, two semivowels: /w, y/, and four vowels: /i, u, e, a/ in Kavalan. In additional to these, /c/ occurs in ciw or cuy 'shout to move an animal' and /h/ in a few loanwords. These are arranged in alphabetical order: /a, b, c, e, h, i, k, l, m, n, ng, p, q, ', r, R, s, t, u, v, w, y, z/. Among these, the glottal stop follows q. Since it is not phonemic, it is left out at the beginning before a vowel or ending after a vowel of a root or a lexical form, e.g., 'aipa' as aipa 'miserable'. The glottal stop is present phonetically, but there is usually no phonemic contrast in these positions. However, it is phonemically significant adjacent to a consonant, e.g. 'lak 'other person'.

Some Conventions and Special Symbols

- < derived from, e.g. <A derived by assimilation, <M derived by metathesis
- > derived as, e.g. PAn *C > t in Kavalan
- = clitic, e.g. =ti, =pa, =ka, =ay
- bound root or affix, e.g. a-, -an, -i, -ku. A hyphen between two forms indicates a compound form
- <> infix, e.g. <m>, <n>, <in>
- ~ or, e.g. tal- ~ tall- (different phonetic realization in different phonetic environments)
- + plus, e.g. kin- + Numeral, as in kin-turu 'three people'
- ! imperative, e.g. burai=ka! 'Give it to him!'
- / gloss followed by grammatical function, e.g. iku I/Nom
- * indicates hypothetical or ungrammatical, e.g. *maCa 'eye'

怎樣用這一本詞典

《噶瑪蘭語詞典》內容包括：前言、詞典（約 3000 個詞項）、英文索引。

前言 (Introduction)

序文及前言第一節說明噶瑪蘭語言資料的來源、語言使用的狀況以及前人的研究。第二、三、四節分別敘說噶瑪蘭語的音韻（共時、貫時、方言差異）、構詞（詞綴與重疊）、句法（焦點系統、格位標記、人稱代詞、時態動貌）。第五節簡短討論噶瑪蘭語的地位問題。

詞彙的安排 (Arrangement of the Dictionary)

語根 (root)、語幹 (stem) 以及衍生詞 (derivatives) 都以粗體字按照字母次序排列。以語根作為主要詞項 (lexical entry)，而語幹和衍生詞都列在主要詞項之下作為次要詞項。語根常為非自由式，後附“-”號以表示非自由式，如 ani-。由同一個語根所衍生出來的大部份表示不同焦點和動貌的各種衍生詞，都視同為同一個動詞的語幹，都安排在主事者焦點形式之下，如 s<m>aqt “搬”。例如，受事焦點形式 saqt-an, saqt-a、命令式 saqt-i 等都安排在主事焦點形式 smaqt 之下，並且舉例說明。這些不同焦點的形式，-an、命令式 -i、完成式 -n 等都很規則，故不必分為不同的詞項來分別列舉。不規則的衍生詞和無法預測的詞形及其定義都得個別列舉出現在不同的詞項。例如，ti-saqt “用…搬”列在語根 saqt- 之下作為次要詞項。又如，完成式如 qRas- > q<n>Ras “已喊叫”，s<n>angi 或 ni-sangi “已製造”，因為形式並不規則，都在個別語根之下列為次要詞項。只有自由式才有中英文的定義，非自由式的語根或語幹就沒有下定義。不過，各種詞綴（前綴、中綴、後綴）就儘量把它們的功能寫出來。

所有的定義及例句的翻譯都有中英文，以方便國內、外人士的參考和使用。

為了方便檢索，詞典後面附一英文索引。請注意索引中只列出語根（常為非自由式），完整的詞彙形式要在詞典中去查詢。

書寫 (拼音) (Orthography (Spelling))

噶瑪蘭語有 14 個輔音、2 個半元音和 4 個元音。此外，c 出現在叫喊畜生聲，h 出現在一些借詞。本書大都使用國際音標 (IPA) 的語音符號，但為了印刷和編排的方便，改以 b 代替 β，以 ng 代替 ŋ，以 ' 代替 ʔ，以 R 代替 ʀ，以 r 代替 r，以 e 代替央元音 ə。按照字母次序排列，這些語音符號是：a, b, c, e, h, i, k, l, m, n, ng, p, q, ', r, R, s, t, u, v, w, y, z。其中喉塞音 ' 排在 q 的後面。因為沒有對比的作用，出現在字首及字尾的喉塞音都略去不記。

特殊符號 (Some Conventions and Special Symbols)

- < 衍生自…，例如 qiqutay ‘摘蕨貓’ < qutay ‘蕨貓’；< A 表示經由同化作用 (assimilation) 而衍生，< M 表示經由換位 (metathesis) 而衍生。
- > 衍生為…，例如古語 j* > n (古南島語的 j* 演變為噶瑪蘭語的 n)
- = 依附詞，例如 =ti, =ay, =pa
- 非自由式的語根或詞綴，例如 a-, -an, -i, -ku 等等。
- <> 中綴，例如，<m> ‘主事焦點’，<n> 或 <in> ‘完成式’。
- ~ 或，例如 tal- ~ tall- (在不同的語境而有不同的發音)
- + 加，例如 kin- + Numeral (前綴加表示數詞的語根)
- ! 命令式，例如 burai=ka! ‘給他!’
- / 字義後加語法功能，如 iku 我 / 主語。
- * 表示假設的形式或不合語法的句子。

INTRODUCTION*

1. General Introduction

Kavalan used to be spoken on the northeast coast of Taiwan, but the Kavalan people there have by now been completely sinicized, having lost their native linguistic and cultural identity, although there may still be a few old timers with a passive knowledge of Kavalan.

In 1840, Kavalan started migrating to the east coast of Taiwan (Chang 1951, Appendix 2), settling in several speech communities, including Kariawan (加禮宛), PatRungan (新社), Kulis (立德) and Kralut (樟原) (see map). They named some of their new settlements after old ones up north, with names like Kariawan, Sahut, and Tamayan. They all refer to themselves as "Kariawan", after the main seaport from which they headed south, where they are thoroughly mixed in with the Amis people. Many of them, middle-aged or older, are multilingual, speaking not only Kavalan, but also Amis, Taiwanese, Mandarin, and Japanese in their daily lives. Most of their children, however, have lost their ancestral language.

Previous studies of the Kavalan language include Abe (1930), unpublished field notes by Naoyoshi Ogawa and Erin Asai (1937), Li (1978, 1982, 1996:55-162, 1991:57-59), Moriguchi (1982, 1983), Tsuchida (1993a, b), Lin (1996), Hsin (1996), Lee (1997), Chang (1997, 2000, 2005), Tsai (1997), Li and Wu (2000), Chang et al (2001, 2002), Liao (2002, 2004), and Blust (1994, 2003). Most of these linguistic studies of Kavalan are syntactic, to be discussed in Section 4. Among these, Li (1996) and Chang (2000) give a general introduction to Kavalan grammar. Compared to all the other plains

Several research assistants or graduate assistants have helped us prepare and type this dictionary: Fun-an Lin (林芬安), Celine Shu-ling Hsu (許淑鈴), Dorinda Tsai-hsiu Liu (劉彩秀), Hsiao-ping Wu (巫筱萍), and Shu-mei Li (李淑梅). We are most grateful to our language informants, including the late Ulaw Li (李龜劉), Api Chu (朱阿比), the late Aun Li (李金梅), Abas Tien-li Pan (潘天利), Ukit Chin-ying Pan (潘金英), Wen-sheng Li (李文盛), and many others, to Warren A. The introduction was written by Paul Li, incorporating suggestions from Shigeru Tsuchida, Elizabeth Zeitoun and Yungli Chang.

languages in Taiwan, which have mostly become extinct (Li 2000), Kavalan is undoubtedly the best studied plains language .

This dictionary contains about 3,000 entries plus numerous derivatives. It is the culmination of over ten years of editorial work. It incorporates several source materials: (1) a Kavalan Dictionary by Paul Li; (2) a Kavalan Dictionary by Shigeru Tsuchida; (3) Kavalan wordlists by Naoyoshi Ogawa and Kavalan texts and wordlists by Erin Asai, their field notes taken during the late Japanese period (1920-1937); (4) Shimizu's (1998) Kavalan Myths and Traditions; (5) published and unpublished papers by our former students; (6) Kavalan language course textbooks; and (7) miscellaneous materials. Ogawa's field notes provide plenty of new lexical items not collected in our original data. Kavalan is still an actively spoken language. As a result, it seems there is no end to what we can add to the Dictionary. We can always find a few new lexical items, forms, and examples on each field trip.

2. Phonology

Previous studies of Kavalan phonology include Li's (1982) synchronic and diachronic descriptions of Kavalan and Moriguchi's (1983) discussion of vowel length and accent in Kavalan. But neither dealt with the problem of geminate consonants in Kavalan. We shall address this problem in §2.1.3. The noun-verb contrast distinguished by an a-vowel—as in krizeng 'wheel' vis-à-vis karizeng 'to turn a wheel'—is also discussed for the first time.

2.1 Synchronic Phonology

2.1.1 Phonetic Description

There are five voiceless unaspirated stops /p, t, k, q, '/, unreleased in word-final position. The phonetic glottal stop, which occurs prevocally in word-initial position and postvocally in word-final position, is left out in our transcription. There is a contrast between /k/ and /q/, e.g. takan 'table', taqan 'pillar'; kmiskis 'to shave, have a haircut', qmisqis 'to scrape hair off a pig'; kazaw 'a pole to carry things', qazaw 'to carry things with a pole'.

In addition to /h/, which appears only in a few loan words, there is only one voiceless fricative, /s/. There are three voiced fricatives: bilabial [β], retroflex [ẓ] and uvular [ʁ], substituted with /b, z, R/ for typing convenience. The uvular fricative /R/ is voiceless [χ] when adjacent to a voiceless consonant or in syllable-final position, e.g. suRna [soχná?] 'snow'. The dental fricatives, /s/ and /z/, are palatalized as [ʃ] and [ʒ] respectively before /i/, e.g. /'si/[ʔiʃ:iʔ] 'meat', /zin/[ʒin] 'sea water'.

The lateral fricative /l/ has the voiced dental stop quality of [d] or fricative [ð] in prevocalic position, but [ɬ] in word-final position. The liquid /r/ is a flap [ɾ], but in absolute final position it is very often realized as a voiced retroflexed [ɻ].

There are three voiced nasals: bilabial /m/, dental /n/, and velar /ŋg/.

The consonants /c, g, h/ rarely occur and mostly just in loanwords or exclamations, e.g. ciw 'shout to drive away an animal', turiga 'fish sp.', hara (a fish species, borrowed from Amis), mihit (a plant species, a type of long betel leaf).

There are four vowels, /i, u, e, a/, of which /e/ stands for the high or mid central vowel [i] or [ə]. The vowel /u/ is lowered to [o] when adjacent to a uvular, /q/ or /R/, e.g. qulu [qo:dúʔ] 'to support', Rupet [ʔo:pát] 'sieve'. There is a transitional phonetic vowel [e] or [ə] between /i/ and the uvular, /q/ or /R/, e.g. mqira [məqʔi:ráʔ] 'to scold', Ribang [ʔʁi:βán] 'things'. Examples of the contrast between /qi/ and /qay/: qinas 'shellfish', qaynep 'to sleep', and /Ri/ and /Ray/, e.g. mRisem 'to fit', Raysam 'seaweed'.

Stress falls on the final syllable. The penultimate vowel is phonetically long, especially preceding a single consonant, e.g. /sunis/[su:nís] 'child'.

2.1.2 Distribution, Constraint, and Syllable Structure

All thirteen true consonants /p, t, k, q, s, z, b, R, m, n, ŋg, l, r/ occur word-initially (before all 4 vowels /i, u, e, a/), intervocalically, and word-finally. The glottal stop /' / occurs word-initially or medially before a consonant, e.g. 'lak 'other person', sa'si 'to bear many fruit', but rarely after a consonant, e.g. mar'api 'twins', or between vowels, e.g. na'ay 'not want' (a loan from Amis), si'uRu 'clever' vs. siuRu 'headhunt'. The semivowels /w, y/ may not occur before certain vowels, such as /e/, nor /w/ before /u/, /y/ before /i/.

The three vowels /i, u, a/ occur freely in almost any position, while the distribution of /e/ is defective. All four vowels may receive stress, specifically on the final syllable. Contrast of vowel length is rare, e.g. btuq [βit:óq] 'to explode', btuuq [bit:óq] 'pond'.

Each syllable may have either a single vowel or a diphthong. There are four diphthongs, /aw, ay, iw, uy/, e.g. qawpiR 'sweet potato', paqaw 'spider', maytumul 'Seediq', mpatay 'die', sisiw 'chick', baniw 'mushroom', muysis 'to hold in hand', babuy 'wild pig'.

Vowel sequences include the following types: /au, ua, iu, ui, ai, ia, ae/; but not */ea/. They occur in two separate syllables without any intervening consonant, e.g. yau 'to exist', paen 'bait', kuit 'ghost'. There is a contrast between a diphthong and vowel sequence, e.g. knaw 'onion' vs. knau 'earring'. A three vowel sequence is rare, e.g. qaniyauan [qanijau:án] 'they, Loc', snayauí [snajau:í] 'Do it like that!'

There is a weak gliding vowel [ɨ] between each consonant cluster in the word-initial position, e.g. 'si [ʔiʔiʔ] 'meat'.

There are many possible combinations of consonants, but there is a tendency to avoid homorganic or back consonants, e.g. *pb-, *bp-, *bm-, *kng-, *kq-, *qk-, *qng-, *'k-, *'q- although we do get mp-, qR-, 'R-, Rq-, and Rng-. The consonants /z, R, ng/ rarely occur as a first element. Only the two semivowels /w, y/ may not occur before another consonant in the word-initial position.

Notice that /'/ is the only consonant that may not occur as the second element in a consonant cluster, while /ng/ occurs as the first element only once in our data.

The syllable structure of Kavalan is (C)(C)V(C)(C). The number of consonants in a cluster is limited to two prevocally and one postvocally, except for geminates, e.g. summ [sum:] 'urinate' in absolute final position: [sum:] before a suffix beginning with a vowel, and [sum] preceding a consonant.

2.1.3 Geminate Consonants

Kavalan is one of two Formosan languages having geminate consonants, e.g. llan 'sky', babbar 'to hit', ussiq 'one', qann 'to eat'. A geminate consonant may be derived by assimilation of one consonant to another, e.g. 'may' 'rice': sa-* may > sa-mmay 'to cook rice'; 'tung- → mu-ttung 'to kill'; 'tut: mi-* tut > mi-ttut 'to break wind', zitpun > zippun 'Japan', szeq-: ma-szeq > ma-sseq 'to arrive'. Another source of the geminate consonant is compensatory lengthening due to loss of a preceding vowel, e.g. batuH* > btu [β̥t̥:úʔ] 'stone'.

Examples showing a contrast of single versus geminate consonants are as follows:

(3) Contrast between Single and Geminate Consonants saRu 'pestle', saRRu 'cool' sani 'otter', sanni 'itchy'

puti 'eye excreta', putti 'linen bag' wanay 'only', wannay 'thank you'
atas 'joint, knot', tattas 'plant sp.'

A phonetic geminate consonant crops up when a consonant cluster occurs in word-initial position, e.g. tnel [t̚nní] 'vegetable', nngi [n̚ŋí?] 'good'. In such a case, the glide vowel [i̯] and indication of gemination are omitted from our transcription for simplicity's sake. Moreover, we would get an initial three-consonant cluster (violating a general constraint) should the geminate consonant be represented as such in our transcription.

Geminate consonants may have a grammatical function and indicate emphasis, e.g. sukaw 'bad', sukkaw 'very bad'; kikia 'a little, a moment', kikkia 'a very brief moment', as in:

(4) kikkia ma =isu ka!
 little only you/Nom
 'It took you no time!'

2.1.4 Vowel deletion

There is a general identical vowel-deletion rule in actual phonetic realization, e.g. mai iku > mai ku 'I am not', qman ti iku > qman tiku 'I have eaten', lalusa-a-ka mara > lalusa-ka mara 'I shall take half of it'. In fact, the same rule applies when the preceding vowel ends with a glide, e.g. mpiray iku > mpiray ku 'I am tired'.

2.2 Historical Phonology

Kavalan reflexes for Proto-Austronesian:

Mergers: (1) PAN *n, *N, *j, and *ñ have merged as n; (2) *t, *T, and *C as t; (3) *d, *D and *Z as z; (4) *s and *S as s; (5) *q, *ʔ, and *H as zero.

Splits: (1) *k into q (before back vowels) and k; (2) *l into r and R; (3) *R into r (*i_i), l, and R; (4) *a into i (adjacent to *q) and a; and (5) *e into e, i, and ' (initial syllable). See examples below. Conditioning environments for all the splits have not yet been completely worked out, and there are notable exceptions to the above suggested rules.

*p > p

*pitu > u-pitu 'seven', *SapaR > s<m>apaR 'lay a mat', *qiNep > ma-ynep 'sleep'

*b > b

A vowel may be lost, especially in an unstressed syllable, e.g. *batuH > btu 'stone'. Compare also the alternation of a vowel and zero, e.g. Riasa ~ Rasa 'to buy', i-ribeng ~ i-rbeng 'low, short'.

The consonant r is optional in several lexical forms, e.g. traquq ~ taquq 'chicken', rpun ~ pun 'to finish', mranay ~ manay 'earth', mruzis ~ muzis 'to bathe', marmiturun ~ mamiturun 'round', ribeng 'below' vs. luq-ibeng 'lowland'. Similarly R is optional in some lexical forms, e.g. tRabtab ~ tabtab 'to eat and make noise like a pig', qRibi ~ qibi 'a large bamboo container', qRitun ~ qitun 'vehicle', qRutay ~ qutay 'type of fern', qRezqez ~ qezqez 'to make someone stay or something stable', qRapkap ~ kapkap 'to touch, to grope'. The forms with r or R inserted after the stem-initial consonant indicate that these were fossilized forms with the infix <ar> or <aR> at an earlier stage; see 3.1 below. Compare the optional n < -in-* in these free variant forms: bnarqian ~ barqian 'old people', pnazngitan ~ pazngitan 'liver'.

2.3 Noun-verb Distinction

The following noun and verb pairs differ only or mainly in the presence or absence of /a/ in the first syllable:

(5) Noun-verb distinction:

Noun		Verb
btu [bit:úʔ]	'stone'	battu	'to throw a stone'
tking [tik:ín]	'a match'	takking	'to start a fire with a match'
tbaku	'cigarette'	tabaku	'to smoke'
tbukul	'fishnet'	tabukul	'to cast a fishnet'
klabu	'son-in-law'	kalabu	'to become a son-in-law'
qrizen	'string'	qarizen	'to twist string on one's knee'
krizeng	'wheel'	karizeng	'to turn a wheel'

The noun-verb dichotomy is probably due to an earlier stress pattern: Nouns would have had stress on the ultima and verbs on the initial syllable of these lexically related pairs. This would explain why the first vowel is preserved in verbs, but lost in nouns. Compare the noun-verb distinction based on stress variation in English involving hundreds of related pairs, e.g., pérmít/perμίt, récord/recórd, prógress/progréss and in Tsou: t'ee 'excreta' vs. te'e 'to defecate' (stress on penult in modern Tsou).

We searched for further examples of this alternation in Kavalan, but could find no more in our data. The distinguishing vowel is always a; no other vowel seems to be involved in making this distinction.

Comparative evidence also indicates that stress was phonemic in Kavalan at some earlier stage, as unstressed vowels may be lost, while stressed vowels are always retained. For example:

PAN *panguDáN > *panguzán > pangzan 'pandanus'

PAN *CuqeláN > *ti'Rán > tiRRan 'bone'

PAN *qiCéluR > *tíRuR > tiRuR 'egg'

PAN *tebúS > tbus 'sugarcane'

PAN *Sepát > spat 'four'

2.4 Dialectal Differences in Phonology

There are two main dialects of Kavalan today: PatRungan (新社) and Kralut (樟原). The main phonological difference is that Hsinshe /z/ corresponds to Changyuan /r/, as illustrated in (6a) below. Hsinshe /z/ may also correspond to Changyuan /z/, however, as shown in (6b).

(6)	Gloss	Hsinshe	Changyuan	(Ferrell 1969)
a.		/z/	/r/
	'woman'	tazungan	tarungan	cf. tarungan (Taintor 1874)
	'foot'	zapan	rapan	< *DapaN, cf. rapan (Taintor)
	'fire'	Ramaz	Ramar	< *DamaR, cf. amaz, lamar (Taintor)
	'rain'	uzan	uran	< *quZaN, cf. uran, uzan (Taintor)
	'water'	zanum	ranum	< *DaNum, cf. ranum, zanum (Taintor)
	'pandanus'	pangzan	pangran	< *panguDaN
	'road'	razan	laran	< *Zalan, cf. zaran (Taintor)
	'bridge'	sazan	saran	cf. sazan (Taintor)
b.		/z/	/z/
	'face'	zais	zais	< *daqiS, cf. ra-iss (Taintor)
	'knee'	tusuz	tusuz	< *tuSud, cf. tusur (Taintor)
	'salt'	zmian	zemian	cf. z'mian (Taintor)
	'two'	zusa	zusa	< *DuSa, cf. lusa (Taintor)

According to Yungli Chang (p.c.), /z/ usually varies freely between [r] and [z] in Kralut. In fact, what Asai transcribed as [z] in 1936 and what I also transcribed as [z] in the 1970s was recorded by Taintor as [r] in quite a few lexical forms, as illustrated above. Moreover, he also recorded as freely varying $r \sim z$ in these lexical items: 'face', 'fire', 'rain', and 'water'. Historically, /z/ can be derived from *d, *D, or *Z.

For information about dialect differences in Yilan, we rely on Ogawa (field notes) and Asai (field notes). There are two main phonological changes in their Yilan data: (1) spirantization of the uvular stop: $q > X$; and (2) devoicing of the uvular fricative: $R > X$. The majority of dialects spoken in Yilan has undergone phonological change (1), while a few dialects show a free variation of q and X . Fewer dialects have undergone change (2). See Li (1996:106-131) for further information and examples. The modern Hsinshe dialect does not show any such change of q to X, but devoicing of the uvular fricative is common in the speech of many.

3. Morphology

3.1 Affixation

Prefixation predominates. There are only two productive infixes: (1) -um- or -m- 'Agent-focus', phonologically conditioned; and (2) -in- or -n- as variants of ni-, e.g. s<n>angi or ni-sangi 'to have built', q<in>Ras 'to have called'. There are, furthermore, the non-productive infixes -(a)R- and -(a)r-, e.g. b<aR>qī-an 'old people' (< baqi 'grandpa'), q<R>ezqez 'stable', t<R>abtab 'to eat and make noise like a pig', p<r>inipin 'to walk unsteadily', t<r>aqitaq 'talkative', k<ar>makmaz 'to blink'. In addition to the bound genitive pronouns, -ku, -su, -na, etc. (see 4.4 below), there are only three other suffixes: (1) -a 'irrealis Patient-focus marker'; (2) -an 'Locative-focus, nominalizer'; and (3) -i 'imperative, Patient-focus' (see 3.1.3 below). The lack of -en* is notable.

A few grammatical particles are treated as clitics (specially marked with an equal sign)³ rather than suffixes, mainly because their position is relatively free. For example, the relativizer ay may be attached to a verb, noun, or phrase, as in (7) below. These clitics include the following:

(7) the relativizer =ay

a. kitut=ay bawa
small-Rel boat

'a boat which is small'

b. mawtu =ti m-uRing=ay sunis 'nay.
AF-come Asp AF-cry-Rel child that

'The child who is crying has come'

c. siqulus tu tbaRi'=ay suani =ku.
wear clothes Obl red-Rel younger my

'My younger sister is in red'

d. [m-ringi tu rpaw]=ay wasu (Chang and Lee 2002)
AF-look after Obl house=Rel dog

'the dog that looks after a house'

³ Prefixes and suffixes are indicated by a hyphen -, infixes within angled brackets < >, and clitics, as already mentioned, by an equal sign =.

(8) the aspect marker ti 'inception marker', as in (7b) and (8a), and future tense irrealis markers pa, as in (8c) and (8d), and -a, as in (9b) below:

- a. q<m>an =ti =iku.
AF-eat Asp I/Nom
'I have eaten'
- b. qann-an-ku =ti.
eat-PF-I/Gen Asp
'It has been eaten by me.'
- c. sum =pa aizipna.
urinate Fut he
'He will urinate.'
- d. pukun-an-ku =pa sunis.
beat-PF-I/Gen Fut child
'The child will be beaten by me.'

(9) the short personal pronouns, such as iku 'I/Nom', as in the examples above.

- a. qan =pa =ita!
eat Fut we/Nom
'Let's eat!'
- b. qann-a-kita you baut.
eat-Fut-we/Gen that fish
'We shall eat that fish.'

(10) the question particle i, e.g.

- a. q<m>an =ti =isu =i?
AF-eat Asp you/Nom Q
'Have you eaten yet?'
- b. niana =i ya kirim-an-su?
what Q Nom seek-PF-you/Gen
'What are you looking for?'

(11) the imperative marker ka

- a. qaRat =ka tu mutun!
bite Imp Obl mouse
'Bite a mouse!'
- b. qaRat-i =ka ya mutun!
bite-PF Imp Nom mouse
'Bite the mouse!'

For the sake of simplicity of description, we shall not treat the case markers, such as ya, tu, na, ta and sa, as proclitics and indicate them as such by "=".

3.1.1 Prefixes

The following list of prefixes is not exhaustive. A few prefixes rarely occur and are found only in few fossilized forms, e.g. ki- in ki-ara 'to pluck', qi- in pa-qi-babaw 'to elevate', ti- in qa-ti-ara 'to take each other'. It is hard to determine the functions of these prefixes.

- i- + N (location) 'stative, having to do with location'

 burn-NAF=Imp Nom grass
 'Burn the grass!'
- c. pa-summ-i=ka ya sunis!
 Cau-urinate-NAF=Imp Nom child
 'Make the child urinate!'

3.1.4 Productivity, Combination, and Order of Affixes

A few affixes are very productive, such as pa- 'causative' or qa- 'future', either of which can be attached to almost any verb. Some are restricted to a certain type of verb or noun, e.g. qna- 'nominalizer' only to stative verbs, -an 'nominalizer' only to active verbs (Chang & Lee 2002), qi- or Ri- 'to get' only to collectable nouns. But most are highly restricted, or even lexically conditioned.

Combinations of prefix or infix and suffix such as -an are common, e.g. qa-tiRuR-an 'the one that will lay eggs = hen', ni-satzay-an 'the one that has been sung'. But combinations of two prefixes, such as Ru-qa-tarin 'just about to move', sim-qa-sukaw 'to become unfriendly to each other', or of two suffixes, such as paqiri-a-i=ka 'Erect it!', are not very common.

The prefix sim- 'reciprocal' always precedes another prefix if there is one, such as pa- 'causative', qa- 'future', e.g. sim-pa-maRaw 'to look at each other', sim-qa-suani 'will be sworn siblings'.

3.2 Reduplication

In addition to CV- and CVCV- (we are disregarding the coda), i.e. the ordinary types of verb-root reduplication found in many other Formosan languages, Kavalan additionally has some less common types: (1) (C)VC- verb-root reduplication, e.g. m-Ri-tunguz 'to bark' > m-Ri-tung-tunguz 'to keep barking', m-Ri-'alam 'to catch birds' > m-Ri-'al-'alam 'to keep catching birds'; (2) CCV- verb-root reduplication, e.g. ltiq- > mu-lti-ltiq 'to keep jumping'; (3) CVV- verb-root reduplication, e.g. m-Ri-baut 'to fish' >

m-Ri-bau-baut 'to keep fishing'; and (4) prefix reduplication, e.g. baseR- 'fly' > tan-baseR 'to fly off (with something)' > tan-tan-baseR 'to keep flying off with something'.

(16)

- a. m-Ri-tung-tunguz a wasu.
 AF-RI-Red-bark Nom dog
 'The dog keeps barking.'
- b. mu-lti-ltiq yau q<m>an tu sbata sunis 'nay.
 AF-Red-jump stay AF-eat Obl taro child that
 'The child kept jumping while he was eating taro.'
- c. m-Ri-bau-baut a tama-ku.
 AF-RI-Red-fish Nom father-my
 'My father keeps fishing.'
- d. t<m>an-tan-baseR a alam.
 Red-AF-TAN-fly Nom bird
 'The bird keeps flying.'

4. Syntax

Most linguistic studies of Kavalan have been syntactic; these include two doctoral dissertations and five masters theses. The Ph.D. work was done by Chang (1997) on voice, case, and agreement, and by Liao (2004) on transitivity and ergativity. The M.A. theses were by Lee (1997) on case-marking and focus system, by Lin (1996) on tense and aspect, by Shen (2005) on reflexives and reciprocals, and by Yeh (2005) on negation. There is a most recent MA thesis on emotion by Lin (2006). There are, furthermore, several papers specifically dealing with syntax problems, such as Tsai (1997) on indefinite wh- construals, Chang & Tsai (1998) on actor sensitivity and obligatory control, Chang et al. (1998) on noun-class markers, Chang & Lee (2002) on nominalization, and Chang (2005) on adverbial modifiers as main verbs.

4.1 The Focus System in Kavalan

Unlike most other Formosan languages having four focus systems, Kavalan has only three: Agent-focus, Patient-focus, and Referential-focus, since Patient-focus and Locative-focus have merged, marked by -an. Moreover, Referential-focus indicated by ti-,⁶ including both Instrumental-

⁶ The vowel of the RF marker ti- is sometimes weakened, resulting in the variant form t-. The anticipated RF marker in Kavalan is si- or sa- and this ti- is of obscure origin. One informant focus and Beneficiary-focus, is rarely used and only by older speakers. That is to say, Agent-focus and Patient-focus are the most commonly used in the language.

4.1.1 Agent-focus and Patient-focus

(18)

- a. q<m>aRat saku 'nay tu mutun.
 AF-bite cat that Obl rat
 'That cat bit a rat.'
- b. qaRat-an na saku mutun 'nay.
 bite-PF Gen cat rat that
 'That rat was bitten by a cat.'

(19)

- a. m-Ringu =iku tu ranas-na.
 AF-not know I/Nom Obl business-his
 'I don't know about his business.'
- b. Ringu-an-ku nangan-na.
 not know-PF-I/Gen name-his
 'I don't know his name.'

4.1.2 Locative-focus

Locative-focus is marked by the suffix -an, just as in Patient-focus:

(20)

- a. qaynep-an-ku ya inpan.
 sleep-LF-I/Gen Nom mat
 'The mat is where I sleep'
- b. Ribaut-an-na ya iRuR a zau.
 fish-LF-he/Gen Nom stream Lig this
 'This stream is where he fishes'
- c. qizuan-an na tina-ku m-Ramaz tu tamun ya
 Stay-LF Gen Mom-my AF-cook Obl dish Nom sammayan zau.
 kitchen this
 'This kitchen is where my mother cooks dishes'

suggested it might have been a loan from Trobiawan, but no such form is to be found at least in the 13 Trobiawan texts recorded by Asai in 1936-1937.

4.1.3 Referential-focus

Instrumental-focus

(21)

- a. ti-tabu na tina-ku tu baut ya biRi.
 IF-wrap Gen mother-my Obl fish Nom leaf
 'My mother wrapped fish with the leaf.'
- b. ti-sangi na tama-ku tu ipit ya tnayan.
 IF-make Gen father-my Obl chopstick Nom bamboo
 'My father made chopsticks with the bamboo.'

Beneficiary-focus

- a. ti-sangi-na =iku tu subuq na tina-ku.
 BF-make-3p I/Nom Obl bag Gen mother-my 'Mother made a bag for me.'
- b. ti-Ramaz na tina-ku tu tamun ya tama-ku.
 BF-cook Gen mother-my Obl dish Nom father-my
 'My mother prepared dishes for my father.'

A verb root with prefix sa- and with or without suffix -an might appear to be Beneficiary- focused, but structurally this is not the case, because the Beneficiary noun is not the subject of the sentence, as is manifestly clear in the following examples:

- (23) sa-mmay tu bRas sa-qann-an na sunis ya tina-na.
 SA-cook Obl rice SA-eat-PF Gen child Nom Mom-his
 'The mother cooked rice for her child to eat.'
- (24) sa-'azas-an-ku t<m>anan sa rpaw-ku.
 SA-bring-PF-I/Gen AF-return Loc house-my
 'I brought it home.'

4.2 Case Markers

There are four sets of case markers: nominative, oblique, genitive, and locative. Like many other Formosan languages, Kavalan distinguishes between personal and non-personal case markers:

- | | | | | |
|-----------|-------|-----|-----|---------------|
| (25) | Nom | Obl | Gen | Loc |
| Common: | a, ya | tu | na | sa, ta-...-an |
| Personal: | a, ya | ta | ni | |

In addition to these case markers, there are personal markers ti and pati and a ligature a in Kavalan, as illustrated in (27) and (28) below:

- (26) s<m>aneng tu bangRaw ya 'si na babuy.
 AF-caught Obl teeth Nom meat Gen babuy

'The pork got caught between the teeth.'

(27)

- a. m-rana ya ti bulaw ti zaun-an.
 AF-wait Nom pn name pn name-Loc

'Bulaw waited for Zaun.'

- b. nayau a kungku na pati bai-ku paysiq timaiku.
 so Nom story Gen late grandma-my name me

'My grandmother, Paysiq, told me stories like that.'

- (28) m-qasiR m-RaRiw ya razat a yau.
 AF-fast AF-run Nom person Lig that

'That person runs fast.'

4.2.1 Nominative a or ya

The nominative markers a and ya are free variants:

- (29) mai t<m>anan (y)a sunis-ku.
 not AF-return Nom child-my

'My child did not return.'

The personal marker ti is obligatory while the nominative marker a or ya is optional, as in:

- (30) t<m>anan (ya) ti butay.
 AF-return Nom pn name

'Butay has returned.'

- (31) battu tu wasu sunis 'nay.
 throw stone Obl dog child that

'The child threw a stone at a dog.'

4.2.2 Oblique ta and tu

The oblique case marker ta marks human, while tu marks nonhuman, as illustrated below:

- (32) q<m>an tu qawpiR ya sunis.
 AF-eat Obl potato Nom child

'The child ate sweet potatoes.'

- (33) p<m>ukun ya ti zaun ta tina-ku.
 AF-hit Nom pn name Obl mother-my

'Zaun hit my mother.'

- (34) q<um>Ras ya tina-na ta sunis pa-qann.
AF-call Nom mother-his Obl child Cau-eat

'The mother called her child to eat.'

- (35) qi-tnel ta naung-an ya sunis-na ta tina-na.
pick-veg. Loc mountain-Loc Nom child-her Obl mother-his

'The child picked vegetables in the mountain with his mother.'

It is clear that the oblique case markers may indicate a direct object, as in (33), an indirect object, as in (34), or a commitative, as in (35) above.

4.2.3 Genitive na and ni

The genitive marker ni indicates personal while na indicates nonpersonal (common noun), as in (36) below.

(36)

- a. mRubatang a qulus ni aun.
pretty Nom clothes Gen name

'Aun's clothes are pretty.'

- b. mRubatang a qulus na sunis.
pretty Nom clothes Gen child

'The child's clothes are pretty.'

The genitive markers also indicate Agent in a non-Agent-focused construction, as in:

- (37) paqann-an ni ipay tu mais ya traquq-na.
feed-PF Gen name Obl corn Nom chicken-her

'Ipay fed her chickens with corn.'

- (38) iRaw-an-na =ita na busus tu banang-ta.
rob-PF-3p we/Nom Gen Chinese Obl land-our

'We were robbed of our land by the Chinese.'

4.2.4 Locative sa and ta...-an

The marker sa indicates directional while ta...-an indicates a location, as in:

- (39) m-azas tama-na tu sunis-na m-atiw sa naung
AF-take father-his Obl child-his AF-go Loc mountain s<m>araw.

AF-hunt

'The father took his child to go hunting on the mountain.'

- (40) yau ta rpaw-an ya sunis q<m>an tu qawpiR.
stay Loc house-Loc Nom child AF-eat Obl potato

'The child was eating sweet potatoes in the house.'

- (41) m-atiw ya sunis ta baqi-an.
 AF-go Nom child Loc grandpa-Loc
 'The child went to his grandpa's place.'

4.3 Personal Pronouns

There are four sets of personal pronouns: nominative, genitive, oblique, and locative. Nominative and genitive pronouns have both free and bound forms, while oblique and locative pronouns have only free forms. Some forms of the third person are derived from demonstratives, e.g. tiyau < yau 'that'. Like most other Formosan languages, there is no bound nominative form for the third person.

	Nominative		Genitive		Oblique	Locative
	Bound	Free	Bound	Free
1sg	=iku	aiku	-ku	zaku	timaiku	tamaikuan
2sg	=isu	aisu	-su	zasu	timaisu	tamaisuan
3sg	∅	aizipna tiyau	-na	zana	timaizipna tiyau	tamaizipan tiyauan
1pl _{in}	=ita	aita	-ta, -kita	zata	timaita	tamaitan
1pl _{ex}	=imi	aimi	-nyaq	zanyaq	timaimi	tamaimian
2pl	=imu	aimu	-numi	zanumi	timaimu	tamaimuan
3pl	∅	qaniyau	-na	zana	qaniyau	taqaniyauan

The free and bound nominative forms, which immediately follow the predicate of the sentence, vary freely:

- (42)
- a. m-rizaq aiku tu sunis a zau.
 AF-like I/Nom Obl child Lig this
 'I like this child.'
- b. mrizaq=iku tu sunis a zau.
 'I like this child.'

Only the free form, however, may appear sentence-initially as topic, as in (43), and both free and bound nominative forms may appear in the same clause, as in (44):

- (43)
- a. aita niz kbaran.
 we/Top all Kavalan
 'We(inc) are all Kavalan.'
- b. *ita na kbaran.

- (44) aiku nani kbaran =iku.
I/Nom Top Kavalan I/Nom
'As for me, I am a Kavalan.'

Only the bound form, moreover, may immediately follow the future marker pa:

- (45) qaynep=pa =iku.
sleep=Asp =I/Nom
'I'll go to bed.'

When two personal pronouns co-occur in the non-Agent-focused construction, the Agent (genitive form) generally precedes the Patient (nominative form):

- (46)
a. tayta-an-ku =isu.
see-LF-I/Gen =you/Nom
'I saw you.'
b. tayta-an-su =iku.
see-LF-you/Gen =I/Nom
'You saw me.'

The free oblique personal forms appear in both Agent-focused and non-Agent-focused constructions:

- (47)
a. t<m>ayta=iku timaisu.
AF-see=I/Nom you/Obl
'I saw you.'
b. ni-bura na 'lak timaiku.
Prf-give Gen other me/Obl
'It was given to me by another person.'

However, the third personal pronouns, tiyau 'he, him' and qaniyau 'they, them' derived from the demonstrative yau 'that', may function either as nominative or oblique:

- c. t<m>ayta=iku tu tiyau.
AF-see=I/Nom Obl him
'I saw him'
d. tayta-n-ku ya tiyau.
See-PF-I/Gen Nom he
'I saw him'

The free genitive form may occur as predicate of the sentence:

- (48) zata ya rawraw a yau.
 ours Nom island Lig that
 'That island is ours.'

Both free and bound genitive forms may modify the same nominal head:

- (49) m-saRaQ a ti utay tu zana tama-na.
 AF-make wine Nom pn name Obl his/Gen father-his/Gen
 'Utay made wine for his father.'

The third person genitive form na, immediately following the main verb, indicates the Agent in a non-Agent-focused construction. Another of its functions is to show verbal agreement with the third person, indicated by "3p".

- (50) qaRat-an na saku mutun 'nay.
 bite-PF Gen cat rat that
 'That rat was bitten by a cat.'
- (51) azas-an=na ti na kuit ya sunis.
 carry-PF=3p Asp Gen ghost Nom child
 'The child was carried away by a ghost.'
- (52) qapaR-an=na ti na tazungan ya traquq.
 catch-PF=3p Asp Gen woman Nom chicken
 'The chicken was caught by a woman.'

Notice that na appears twice in (51) and (52): The first na is a personal pronoun which indicates verbal agreement with the third person, while the second na is a case marker which indicates genitive. When the Agent is a personal name, then ni is used instead of na:

- (53) tutun-an=na ni abas rpaw-ku.
 burn-PF=3p Gen name house-my
 'My house was burned by Abas.'

When two na's co-occur, then one of them is deleted, as in (50) above.

The first person genitive ku is fused with the future marker pa as ka, as illustrated below:

- (54) pukun-a-ka =isu.
 hit-Ir-I/Gen you/Nom
 'You'll be hit by me.' (= 'I'll hit you.')

4.4 Tense and Aspect

There are only two tenses in Formosan languages, future and non-future. Aspectual systems, on the other hand, can be much more elaborate, depending on the particular language.

All Agent-focus constructions with m- (or its variants) or non-Agent-focus constructions with -an are non-future, as in (55) and (56) below; see §4.1 above for further examples. The future tense marker is qa-, as in (57)⁷, or =pa in an Agent-focus construction, as in (58), but -a in a non-Agent-focus construction, as in (59) below.

- (55) m-aynep=iku tu tuttu.
 AF-sleep=I/Nom Obl noon
 'I took a nap.'
- (56) karingun-an-ku.
 forget-PF-I/Gen
 'I forgot it.'
- (57) qa-suRaw=isu.
 Fut-fall=you/Nom
 'You will fall down.'
- (58)
 a. uzan=pa llan zau.
 rain=Fut sky this
 'It will rain.'
 b. qan=pa=ita.
 eat=Fut=we/Nom
 'Let's eat.'
- (59) 'tung-a-ka ya razat a yau.
 kill-Ir-I/Gen Nom person Lig that
 'That person will be killed by me.'

The inception marker is ti. It appears in both non-future and future tense sentences, as in (60) and (61) respectively:

- (60)
 a. m-buiq =ti ya simau.
 AF-bloom Asp Nom flower
 'The flowers have begun to bloom.'

⁷ At least there is such a case in which a k- verb, kunna 'to do something first', indicates irrealis.

- b. q<m>an=ti=isu?
 AF-eat=Asp=you/Nom
 'Have you eaten?'
- c. pukun-an-ku=ti ya sunis.

 'My child will soon return.'
- b. mammin=ti si, qan=pa=ita=ti.

 'If it has been cooked, let's eat.'

The relative position of ti is noteworthy: It occurs before a nominative pronoun, as in (60b), but after a genitive pronoun, as in (60c). The relative free occurrence of the inception marker ti seems to indicate that it is a clitic, rather than a suffix to a preceding verb. If so, then the nominative pronouns following it must be clitics also. However, the bound genitive pronouns always precede ti, and that seems to indicate that they are better treated as suffixes, rather than clitics.⁸ As a matter of fact, any suffix occurs

⁸ There are pros and cons for treating bound genitive pronouns as suffixes. Yung-li Chang (1997:120) argues for it as follows:

"In Kavalan, genitive bound pronouns differ from nominative bound pronouns in distribution, which is summarized as follows:

(1) Nominative bound pronouns can adjoin to preverbal elements while genitive bound pronouns must remain with the main verbs; (2) In some cases, nominative bound pronouns can either remain with the main verbs or adjoin to the preverbal elements. This option is, however, not open to genitive bound pronouns; (3) Genitive bound pronouns must precede tense/aspect markers, which in turn must precede nominative bound pronouns; (4) Genitive bound pronouns are more selective as to their hosts than nominative bound pronouns: the former can only attach to NAF verbs while the latter can attach to either NAF or AF verbs; (5) Genitive bound pronouns may have peculiar phonological forms while nominative bound pronouns always occur in regular forms. These asymmetrical distributions can be attributed to the difference in morphological status between genitive bound pronouns and nominative bound pronouns, namely, genitive bound pronouns behave like agreement affixes whereas nominative bound pronouns behave like pronominal clitics."

Nevertheless, Tsuchida (p.c.) argues against it as follows:

I'm still reluctant to treat genitive pronouns as suffixes rather than clitics: (1) they follow both nouns and verbs (usually suffixes are attached to one type of part of speech); (2) a before a pronoun, such as the irrealis non-Agent-focus marker -a and Patient-focus marker -an, as in:

(62)

- a. qann-a-kita.
eat-Ir-we/Gen
'Let's eat it.'
- b. Ringu-an-ku.
not know-PF-I/Gen
'I don't know.'

The perfective aspect marker is ni- ~ n- ~ -in- ~ -n-, as in:

(63)

- a. ni-sangi na nappawan-ku qulus zau.
Prf-make Gen spouse-my clothes this
'These clothes were made by my wife.'
- b. s<n>angi tu bRas ya Rak a zau.
Prf-make Obl rice Nom wine Lig this
'This wine has been made with rice.'

(64)

- a. qann-an ni buya ni-Riasa ni abas Rak 'nay.
eat-PF Gen name Prf-buy Gen name wine that 'Buya drank the wine Abas had bought'
- b. n-Riasa na tina-su, kua?
Prf-buy Gen mom-you/Gen Conf
'It is what your mother bought, isn't it?'

- (65) yau iku tu t<in>nun-an tu s<n>anis-an.
have I/Nom Obl weave-Prf-LF Obl fibre-Prf-LF
'I have cloth woven of banana fibre.' geminate consonant (or vowel) within a word is pronounced long, whereas double consonants (or vowels) which happen to occur in word boundaries are pronounced short, as in /qannan/ [qan:an] 'food', and /qannan +na/ [qan:nana] 'his food', etc. If you write the latter as /qannanna/, you cannot distinguish the different realization of the two geminate consonants /nn/. I'm afraid Yung-li Chang has not noticed such a subtle difference in pronunciation. Besides, it is commonly observed in most Austronesian languages that when more than one clitics cooccur, there is a strict fixed order of their cooccurrence, and in Kavalan the rule is simply that a genitive pronoun precedes other clitics.

The bound genitive pronouns are treated as suffixes only in the introduction. However, they are kept separate from the preceding nouns or verbs in the main body of the dictionary, to respect the opinion of the other editor, Tsuchida.

Notice that the perfective marker appears only in non-Agent-focused constructions, as illustrated above. That it may not appear in an Agent-focused construction is a syntactic constraint unique to Kavalan among Formosan languages.

5. The Linguistic Position of Kavalan

Both phonological and linguistic evidence indicates that four "Eastern" Formosan languages are more closely related to each other: Basay, Kavalan, Amis, and Siraya. The merger of *j and *n, occurring nowhere else, defines the entire "East Formosan" group (Blust 1999:45, Li 2004). Two phonological innovations, (1) merger of *j, *n, and *N as n and (2) split of *k into k and q (before a), are exclusively shared by Basay and Kavalan (Li 2001). Shared innovations are also found in sporadic changes in a few lexical items in these two languages: susu > Basay cicu, Kavalan sisu 'breasts' (anticipatory dissimilation of the first vowel), piliq* > Basay p<am>ici, Kavalan p<am>il 'to choose' (insertion of <am> after the stem-initial consonant). Such sporadic changes shared exclusively by Basay and Kavalan provide strong evidence for their close relationship. Syntactically, Patient-focus and Locative-focus have completely merged in Basay and Kavalan, and there are still both -en and -an verb forms with no functional difference in use in Siraya, while Amis has retained that distinction.

Clearly, the linguistic evidence for an East Formosan group is not in doubt. If this subgrouping hypothesis is correct, then Basay, Kavalan, and Amis may have originated in the southwestern plains of Taiwan, where the Siraya people had resided for centuries, at least. The southwestern plains are believed to have been the center of dispersal for all Formosan aboriginal peoples ca. 5000BP, according to the grammatical subgrouping of Formosan languages by Starosta (1995). However, the relative chronology of an eastward dispersal would then largely depend on the linguistic closeness of Amis to Siraya or Basay-Kavalan.
