
TABLE III.

POPULATION OF CIVIL DIVISIONS LESS THAN COUNTIES,

IN THE AGGREGATE,

AT THE

CENSUSES OF 1880 and 1870.

TABLE III.—POPULATION OF CIVIL DIVISIONS LESS THAN COUNTIES.

The following explanatory notes may be of use for understanding the table giving the population by minor civil divisions:

By the term "minor civil divisions", is to be understood the primary divisions, that is, the divisions which, taken collectively, make up the county. These differ in different parts of the country not only in name, but in character and degree of organization.

In the annexed table these primary divisions of the county, whether townships, cities, villages, towns, beats, election precincts, or what not, are set out to the marginal line, while secondary subdivisions, i. e., those which form parts of the former, are indented one space.

ALABAMA.—The county subdivisions are known as beats. The municipal incorporations are comprised in the beats, or each of the former comprises one or more of the latter. The Port of Mobile appears to form the only exception to this rule.

ARKANSAS.—The primary divisions of the county are known as townships. The municipal corporations form essential parts of the townships, and are subject to the township government.

CALIFORNIA.—The counties are divided into what are known as judicial townships. Municipal incorporations are comprised in these divisions, or each of the former comprises one or more of the latter. San Francisco city and county are coextensive.

COLORADO.—The counties are divided into election precincts. The cities and incorporated villages are, as a rule, within these election precincts, or each comprises one or more election precincts.

CONNECTICUT.—The usual civil division is the town. In most, but not all cases, cities form parts of the towns in which they are located. Another class of municipal incorporations is known as boroughs, which are also comprised in the towns in which they are located.

DELAWARE.—The divisions of the county are known as hundreds. Incorporated cities and towns form constituent parts of the hundreds in which they are located.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—The county and municipal organizations were abandoned in the District in 1874. The cities of Washington and Georgetown and the county of Washington thereupon ceased to exist.

FLORIDA.—The county subdivisions are known as election precincts. These comprise, or are comprised in, the municipal incorporations.

GEORGIA.—The county subdivisions are known as militia districts. The municipal incorporations are either comprised in these militia districts, or each comprises one or more militia districts.

ILLINOIS.—Counties are generally divided into townships; 23 counties (mainly in the southern part of the state) have not yet adopted township organization, but are divided into precincts. Municipal incorporations, whether cities, towns, or villages, are included within these townships and precincts, and are subject to the township or precinct government. In many cases of large cities the townships or precincts have been reduced or the corporation lines have been extended until the city and township or precinct are coextensive and the governments are coexistent.

INDIANA.—The case in this state is essentially similar to that of Illinois, with the exception that all are known as townships.

IOWA.—The county subdivisions are the same as in Indiana.

KANSAS.—The county subdivisions are known as townships. Cities of the first and second classes, that is, having a population of more than 2,000, are independent of the townships, and form primary divisions of the counties. Cities of the third class, which correspond to incorporated villages in most states, are subject to the government of the township in which they are located.

KENTUCKY.—Counties are divided into magisterial districts and voting precincts; in these are included the municipal incorporations.

LOUISIANA.—The subdivisions of the parish are known as police-jury wards. The municipal incorporations are included within these wards and form parts of them, except in the case of Orleans parish, which is coextensive with the city of New Orleans.

MAINE.—The usual divisions of the county are known as towns; beside this there are cities, which are, in effect, merely towns under a slightly different form of government, plantations, gores, and townships. The last three classes are, as a rule, sparsely settled; the form of government is very simple, and gives to the organization but little power. Nearly all townships are, as a rule, unorganized, and are simply tracts of land laid off by the state authorities.

MARYLAND.—The divisions of the county are known as election districts. The whole territory of the county, regardless of municipal organizations, is divided into these subdivisions, incorporated cities and villages being included in election districts, or each comprising one or more election districts. The city of Baltimore is independent of Baltimore county, and may be regarded as forming a county by itself.

MASSACHUSETTS.—The several divisions of the counties are towns and cities, the cities differing from the towns only in the character of their government.

MICHIGAN.—The divisions of the county are townships. Cities are independent of the townships, while the incorporated villages are under the township government. Unorganized counties, of which there are two in the state (Montmorency and Oscoda), are attached as townships to neighboring organized counties, Montmorency to Alpena county, and Oscoda to Alcona.

MINNESOTA.—The divisions of the county are townships, although they are frequently known as towns. Cities, with one exception, and villages, with two exceptions, and all the boroughs, are independent of the townships, and form primary divisions of the counties. Chartered by special act.

MISSISSIPPI.—The county subdivisions are known as beats or supervisors' districts. The municipal incorporations are, as in Alabama, comprised in the beats, or a city may be coextensive with a beat. Many of the larger beats are divided into two or more election precincts.

MISSOURI.—The divisions of the county are known as townships. The municipal incorporations are included within the townships. During the last decade the city of St. Louis has been taken out of the county of the same name and maintains municipal organization independent of it.

NEBRASKA.—The counties are divided into election precincts. Cities and incorporated villages are included within the election precincts, or each may comprise one or more election precincts.

NEVADA.—The counties are divided into election precincts. The cities and incorporated villages are, as a rule, within these election precincts, or each comprises one or more election precincts.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—The civil divisions of the county are essentially similar to those of Maine.

NEW JERSEY.—The divisions of the county are known as townships. Cities are independent of the townships. Minor municipal organizations, known as towns and boroughs, are also incorporated under the state laws, and form constituent parts of their townships, with one exception.

NEW YORK.—The divisions of the county are known as towns. Cities and villages are incorporated, the former being independent of the towns from which they were taken; the latter remain within the towns, and form component parts of them.

NORTH CAROLINA.—The county subdivisions are known as townships. Municipal incorporations are included within and form parts of the townships.

OHIO.—The counties are divided into townships. Municipal incorporations, whether cities, villages, or hamlets, are included within these townships, and are subject to the township government. In many cases of large cities the township has been reduced, or the corporation lines have been increased, until the city and township are coextensive and the governments are coexistent.

OREGON.—The counties are divided into election precincts. The cities and incorporated villages are, as a rule, within these election precincts, or each comprises one or more election precincts.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The county divisions are known as townships, cities, and boroughs, the two latter being independent of the townships from which they were taken.

RHODE ISLAND.—The several divisions of the county are similar to those of Massachusetts.

SOUTH CAROLINA.—The divisions of the county are known as townships. The municipal incorporations form essential parts of the township in which they are located.

TENNESSEE.—The counties are divided into civil districts. As a rule, the municipal incorporations are comprised within the civil districts in which they are located.

TEXAS.—The counties are each divided into, first, four commissioners' precincts; second, into a certain number of justices' precincts; and third, into a certain, and generally much larger, number of election precincts. In some counties the population has been returned in accordance with one of these systems of division, in other cases by one of the other forms, and it has been impossible to unify them. Municipal incorporations form parts of the commissioners' precinct, justices' precinct, or election precinct, as the case may be.

VERMONT.—The ordinary civil divisions of the county are towns and cities. There are also several partially organized civil divisions, known as gores, in addition to the primary divisions of the county. Under the laws of this state, villages are incorporated, forming constituent parts of the towns in which they are located.

VIRGINIA.—The usual subdivisions of the counties are called magisterial districts, a division which corresponds very nearly to a township of the middle states. Cities and towns form essential parts of their magisterial districts, with six exceptions.

WEST VIRGINIA.—The counties are divided into magisterial districts, as in Virginia. Cities and towns form component parts of their magisterial districts.

WISCONSIN.—The divisions of the county are townships, or, as they are more generally called in the state, towns. Most of the cities and several of the incorporated villages are independent of the townships in which they are located and form primary divisions of the counties. Most of the villages, however, and several cities are still under the government of the township in which they are located.

The TERRITORIES.—The counties in all the territories except Dakota, are divided into election precincts. Municipal incorporations are comprised in these precincts, or one of the former may comprise one or more of the latter.

NOTE.—The following unincorporated places have been returned separately by the enumerators. The list is not by any means complete, as very many enumerators have failed to separate such bodies of population. The population of these places has, of course, been included in the beats in which they are respectively situated. The figures can be considered as only approximate, as the limits of such places are not sharply defined.

NOTE.—The following unincorporated places have been returned separately by the enumerators. The list is not by any means complete, as very many enumerators have failed to separate such bodies of population. The population of these places has, of course, been included in the townships in which they are respectively situated. The figures can be considered as only approximate, as the limits of such places are not sharply defined.

POPULATION OF CIVIL DIVISIONS LESS THAN COUNTIES.

NOTE.—The following unincorporated places have been returned separately by the enumerators. The list is not by any means complete, as very many enumerators have failed to separate such bodies of population. The population of these places has, of course, been included in the townships in which they are respectively situated. The figures can be considered as only approximate, as the limits of such places are not sharply defined.

NOTE.—The following unincorporated places have been returned separately by the enumerators. The list is not by any means complete, as very many enumerators have failed to separate such bodies of population. The population of these places has, of course, been included in the precincts in which they are separately situated. The figures can be considered as only approximate, as the limits of such places are not sharply defined.

NOTE.—The following unincorporated places have been returned separately by the enumerators. The list is not by any means complete, as very many enumerators have failed to separate such bodies of population. The population of these places has, of course, been included in the militia districts in which they are respectively situated. The figures can be considered as only approximate, as the limits of such places are not sharply defined.

NOTE.—The following unincorporated places have been returned separately by the enumerators. The list is not by any means complete, as very many enumerators have failed to separate such bodies of population. The population of these places has, of course, been included in the townships in which they are respectively situated. The figures can be considered as only approximate, as the limits of such places are not sharply defined.

NOTE.—The following unincorporated places have been returned separately by the enumerators. The list is not by any means complete, as very many enumerators have failed to separate such bodies of population. The population of these places has, of course, been included in the townships in which they are respectively situated. The figures can be considered as only approximate, as the limits of such places are not sharply defined.
